Three New Instructors Are Added To CVC Faculty

Miss Lucie Kegler, who is the head of the Foreign Language department at Clinch Valley College, was born in the tiny community of Gribble, Rumania. Her family later journeyed to America and settled in an Austrian high school in Virginia. Miss Kegler, along with the rest of her family, migrated to America, upon entering the University of Minnesota. Miss Kegler has been teaching here since 1951 in the Romance Languages Department at CVC, where she enjoys teaching her language and culture.

Another new addition to CVC’s faculty is Miss Irene Miller. Miss Miller was born and spent her childhood at Charlottesville, Virginia. She received her B.A. degree and majoring in Romance Languages at the University of Minnesota. Miss Miller graduated in 1954 with an AB degree in Romance Languages. Miss Kegler and Miss Miller have collaborated and taught together for several years at Minnesota, Marie, and CVC.

Mr. Bruce, a guest speaker at women’s clubs and literary clubs around Virginia, was guest of Mrs. Doris Wolfe. The transluscent cost approximated to a very friendly place and loves the city of Norton. The poor girls in the office were the center for effort to discover the hidden values of the people. The strength of the venturesome and the oppressiveness of the people are moulded at the feet of Liberty — telling all communities that the people must In the present and In the future will be foreseen and planned.

Mr. Roy Wells, Jr.,
Editor-in-Chief
The Highland Cavalier
of the University of Virginia
Clinch Valley College
Wise, Virginia

Dear Mr. Wells:
The September 12th Highland Cavalier is the first issue I have seen of the new venture. I have perused it from beginning to end, with great interest and satisfaction, it has given a good glimpse of what the Clinch Valley College of the University of Virginia is doing.

From its earliest inception, I have been keenly interested in the development of this brain child of President Darden, Dr. Zehmer, Mr. Sam Crockett, and the people of Clinch Valley. Personal satisfaction has been derived from hearing what the University Extension Division and an aroused community can accomplish.

The college has been the subject of long conversations with Sam Crockett while en route to Staff Conferences at the University, and to shorter reports from Professor Ollone and Dr. White. All three are "good readers." Congratulations and best wishes.

Sincerely yours,
Mary B. Duncan

Dr. Miller To Direct "Our Town"

Dr. Anna Irene Miller, of the English Department of Clinch Valley College, will direct the Oladeville Players, a community Little Theater group in Wise, in their presentation of OUR TOWN. The Oladeville Players, of Clinchwood, have been very successful in many high school and college productions and scheduled for early December.

OUR TOWN has been so acclaimed by critics as one of the greatest of American plays, it is anybody's town. Long a study of the Little Theater movement, Dr. Miller is author of "Pleasing You Keeps Us In Love," and an aroused community can expect a simple and sincere presentation of life in "our town," which is anybody's town.

Library News

By KELVIN J. Muhser

"This is a very educational hobby for the whole family," the librarian told me. While browsing in our newly-improved school library, we met a very interesting high school student. According to the librarian, "A Little Library Across the Hall is an exciting hobby for the whole family."

"When I see you I always think of the many interesting magazine articles that I have read in this library."

"But I'm not in the least like the real book," the student told me. "Why?"

"Because the real book is too heavy."

"That's the main reason I like the Little Library, because it's not too heavy."
