“Raining” Is Success Say Critics

Review Leads Cost, Direction, Set

by Pat Young

Thursday and Friday nights and Saturday afternoon, in the College Theater, will be the time to see the new production of "Raining," a play that promises to be a hit on the campus. The cast is made up of members of the English Department and the College tradition of excellence in the arts can be expected.

The play is about the life of a woman who lives in a small town and is constantly dealing with the rain. She has a husband who is a fisherman and they live in a house that is always wet. The play is full of humor and pathos, and the actors are very good at their parts. The set is beautifully designed and the costumes are quite realistic.

The World About Us

When you look at the variety of books that are most in demand in libraries, you will find that a significant number deal with scientific and technical subjects. These books range from books on astronomy to those on dealing with unbelievable men and women who are the supermen of the world. Personally, I belong to the group of people who are most concerned with the real things of life, things that have to do with the universe. I am very much interested in natural science. Why things happen and what causes them, is of great deal more interesting than almost any other problem has come up and which has no end to which we can trace its cause.

A good question to consider is whether we wonder at all. Is it possible to let people go on unanswered, or should we attempt to answer them? A great many of the wonderful things that we have in our age came about because somebody wondered. People who are worried with the basic tools of a trade or who know the basic principles of any science have gone over their heads to be some kind of scientist. We have to think of things that we don't understand. Ignorance causes the to happen. Unfortunately, there are more people who wonder and who are willing to work in and solve our problems than there are men who will support them. Many men have to be able to provide for themselves and their families. Thus they have no opportunity for research because the people in any profession who are going to provide the opportunity are either indifferent or do not understand the need of such research.

Of all these items mentioned previously, one is yet unmentioned, but it is the most important. People have to be able to work and live in a real world. It is true that we are in a world of make-believe, but we dive in a real world. We want to know the basic principles of any science which we have studied. If we don't understand, we can't do any work. We can't do anything worthwhile because we don't understand.

The measure of his success will be the extent to which he has been willing to give much of his time to planning and completion of the book.

The new OUTPOSTS will be issued to students directly after the OUTPOSTS are made by various other students and members of the staff.
