Four B's Will Play At Clinch Valley College Harvest Bowl

Boys Fete Girls

On Thursday evening, September 20th, the dormitory students and the faculty at Clinch Valley College made ready for the annual Harvest Bowl. The women were dressed in their best garb, and the men in their uniforms. The event was held as a way to celebrate the end of the fourth week of orientation at the school. The evening was filled with music, dancing, and socializing. Only half the guests were on campus, so the outside community was represented as well.

H-C Supplement

The problem of financing appeared to be largely solved with the printing and distribution of the H-C Supplement. This was a new edition of the supplement, entitled "The Highland Cavalier," which was designed to fill the time gap in the occurrence of the Highland Cavalier's usual publications. The purpose of the Supplement was to provide information about the activities and future plans of the students, as well as to offer a platform for students to express their opinions and ideas.

Dorn Students

Clinch Valley's dormitory students are a close-knit group, with many social and cultural events being held to foster a sense of community. The school was proud of its students, who were active in various extracurricular activities, including the Cotillion Club, which was made up of students interested in social events.

Cotillion Club Calls

The Cotillion Club announced that the next dance will be held October 20th. All members were urged to attend, and the club's officers were tasked with organizing the event. The club's purpose was to provide a social outlet for members of both genders, and it was open to anyone interested in attending. The club's regular meetings were held on Thursdays at 7:30 PM, and all members were encouraged to join.

Cotillion Club Calls

In accordance with the Constitution of the Honor System, the Cotillion Club held tests during activity period of September and October to determine the students' knowledge of the Honor System. The results of these tests were used to determine the students' eligibility for membership in the Cotillion Club.

Young Moderns

The Young Moderns, a new organization on campus, was formed to bring together a group of young men and women interested in improving their social and cultural lives. The group met regularly, and its activities included attending dances, going to the movies, and participating in various social events. The Young Moderns were seen as a way to foster a sense of community among the students.

Outpost Staff Starts New Yearbook Season

College Fashion

The college sets aside distinctive fashion that is different from the street. We have a whole line of "College" fashions. We're on the lookout for the young, fresh type of clothes. We sell them only in large quantities, but believe in the look for the whole group.

For the girls this fall has a three-piece suit which is cut in a line, high-waisted and narrow at the hips. The bodice is tailored in both white and black. It's trimly finished with a fitted jacket and a narrow skirt. The jacket has a high stand-up collar and the skirt has a high slit.

The men have a three-piece suit which is cut in a line, high-waisted and narrow at the hips. The jacket is tailored in both white and black. It's trimly finished with a fitted jacket and a narrow skirt. The jacket has a high stand-up collar and the skirt has a high slit.

This fall's fashion is very much like last year's. The only difference is that the girls have a longer skirt than the men. The men have a shorter skirt than the girls.

The color of the girls' suits is white and black. The men have a white and black suit, but the color of the suit is not as important as the cut and style.

The girls' suits are worn with a hat and gloves. The men have a hat and gloves, but the color of the hat and gloves is not as important as the cut and style.
