Young Moderns Present

The Young Moderns of CVC, an organization of young men and women interested in acquiring knowledge of proper social rules, courtesies, and punctuality, presented and demonstrated many interesting in the Fred Green Auditorium to a large audience of students and faculty members.

Young Men in Organizations

Most of the organizations such as the Young Moderns and the Baptist Student Union are interested in seeing that college students and members of the community participate in activities that are designed to help them understand and communicate with the world around them.

Student Union Review

The Baptist Student Union has met four times this semester and has also represented CVC at the Beta Upsilon Convention at Virginia. Those attending the convention were: Mrs. D. E. Richardson, Eleanor Morris, Dorothy Horne, and Paige Willis. Mrs. D. E. Richardson is faculty advisor for the organization. The purpose of the Beta Upsilon Convention is to provide fellowship and promote understanding and cooperation among the students. It meets once a week and each month each member of the organization, whether they are attending college or not, attends the meeting and contributes towards the advancement of the organization.

4 B's Began

Since the organization of the Beta Upsilon Convention, the group has developed from an informal organization to a more formal one with a professional dance competition. The group began as the 4 B's Club (Business, Business, Business, Business) and has evolved into a professional organization with a dance competition.

The In And Out

The purpose of the Beta Upsilon Convention is to provide fellowship and promote understanding and cooperation among the students. It meets once a week and each month each member of the organization, whether they are attending college or not, attends the meeting and contributes towards the advancement of the organization. The group has now become a professional organization with a dance competition.
A Dark Place

By Bill Davidson

It was a cold and very dark. Though it was only noon, the sun was no more than a pale orange on the eastern horizon. The only light came from the automobile's headlamps. He accelerated, depending on an ancient truth: every vehicle that really matters has a headlight, and the one that didn't might as well be invisible.

Why? Because you can't count on the other, because you can't count on yourself.

The front passenger seat was empty, the 31-caliber Mauser in his lap was silent, the steering wheel was a blur of motion. He knew he should have counted on himself, but he didn't. He had to count on the car, on the weapons, on the instincts of the men waiting just ahead.

The road ahead was a forest of pines, the trees standing tall and black. The headlights threw streams of light against the darkness, and yet nothing more distinct could be seen. It was just black. There was no reason to believe that the road would not end, that the darkness would not close in, that the night would not come.

Then the headlights picked up a faint indicator, a slight glimmer of light. It was a sign, a message from the darkness.

"Follow me," it seemed to say.

He followed, the car and the headlight and the message. The darkness was his guide, his companion.

The road disappeared, replaced by a clearing. The clearing was a clearing, a space made by the car's light, a space made by the darkness. The darkness held it, the darkness poured it out. The darkness was his guide, his companion.

He drove through the clearing, the car and the headlight and the message. The darkness was his guide, his companion.

The darkness was his guide, his companion.
Piano Recital
By Mrs. Burton

Tuesday, November 15, 1965, in the Fred B. Greear Auditorium the Music Appreciation class of Clifton Valley College presented an informal piano recital by Mrs. Mary Burton of Appomattox, Virginia.

Mrs. Burton played Beethoven's Sonata no. 23 In P minor. Opus 57, known as Estaminies, and Rhapsody In Blue.

After the recital, Suzanne Layton and Mrs. Arthur presented Mrs. Burton with a gift from the student body.

Organization Of Chess Club

The 1962 Chess Club of Clifton Valley College was organized on October 9, 1962, by Mr. Wilson. At this first meeting, Ben Penning­ton was elected President; Doug Chestnut, vice-president; and Alice Pave Daniels, secre­tary-treasurer. This year's Chess Club has a total of 21 members. The purposes of the Chess Club are to teach those who are in­terested in learning to play chess, to improve the game of chess that do know how to play, and to provide enjoyment and chal­lenge for the skilled chess play­ers.

Dorm News

Saturday night, November 5 the lounge was the scene of a Bohemian Dance. All tables and chairs were removed and every­ one sat on the floor Greenwich Village style. For decorations tables were made of newspapers. Light was supplied by candles in beer and whiskey bottles that were set on the paper tables.

Mr. Robinson entertained himself all night, sitting on the floor playing chess by candlelight. He was holding his own until Eddie Shepherd "fired" to oppose him. The next, after the dorm had a "get-together" on Satur­ day night in the lounge of Creekside. Refreshments were served and records were derated for the evening by Joe Matney.
