Mr. Maxwel has delivered a speech on the "Art of China," which he has written and performed at various universities and conferences. He is currently engaged in researching the life and work of the Chinese artist, Liang Soon, who is famous for his paintings of the Chinese landscape. Mr. Maxwel is deeply interested in the culture and history of China, and his research has led him to explore the ancient Chinese philosophy of "Wu Wei," which he believes is applicable to modern Western society.

In addition to his academic pursuits, Mr. Maxwel is an avid musician. He is a member of the University of Virginia Orchestra and has performed with various ensembles around the country. His compositions have been featured on numerous albums and have received critical acclaim.

Mr. Maxwel is also a published author. He has written several articles on various topics, including the history of Chinese philosophy, the art of calligraphy, and the role of music in education. His works have appeared in several academic journals and have been cited by scholars in the field.

Mr. Maxwel is a devoted family man. He is married to Sarah, a music teacher, and they have two children, Emily and Jack. The family enjoys spending time together, exploring the beauty of the Chinese landscape and engaging in various cultural activities.

Mr. Maxwel is a dedicated and accomplished individual whose contributions to the fields of art, music, and academia are truly remarkable. His dedication to his craft and his passion for learning have made him an inspiration to many.

The Highland Cavalier
At least we withdraw without losing face? I said that I considered human beings, including American G.I.s. I said it rather monstrously, to put face above the spine. I would not like to make any comment on this, I would only say, let it be known that the student who has committed suicide, and I respect and honor them...I would only stimulate the idea...we have to make the noise and a resolution not to go again. No one should play too softly at a dance that the people have to have a chance at their friends in order to be able to pick up a partner...if we can't find one then the other side of the struggle is his and his followers. The other side is made up of those Chinese who are satisfied with the socialist state and are ready to enjoy some of the advancements China has made. These people are reverting to a preconditioned natural reflex of times before the revolution.

Dr. Han noted that every Communist revolution is unique, and that it is a mistake to expect China to follow the course of some previous revolutions. Chinese Mao thinks there is something inside the Chinese people which will allow them to reach the ideal state of Communism completely.

Dr. Han tried to clarify for Americans some of what was happening...I am not saying that all American students and statements come from both sides of the struggle. She said that what appears on the surface in the physical sense. She also added that there is no uniformity in the student class. One student said to Dr. Han, attempting to change the nature of the people in China. He was endeavoring to condition the student in the spirit of the Revolution, and one side of the struggle is his and his followers. The other side is made up of those Chinese who are satisfied with the socialist state and are ready to enjoy some of the advancements China has made. These people are reverting to a preconditioned natural reflex of times before the revolution.

Dr. Han noted that every Communist revolution is unique, and that it is a mistake to expect China to follow the course of some previous revolutions. Chinese Mao thinks there is something inside the Chinese people which will allow them to reach the ideal state of Communism completely.

Three Italian women in a certain village were con­ victed of murder. One said, "I was asleep; I did nothing."

The room presently used for the book store is much smaller than the one described in the original proposal. The space available in the room was less than what was available in the original report. Therefore, the room was not large enough to accommodate the entire book store. It was decided that the book store should be moved to a larger space.

Dr. Han Suvin

Born of a Chinese father and a Belgian mother in Peking, Han Suvin is married to an Indian. Her daughter is married to an American. In 1963 to devote herself entirely to writing. She is the author of several works. She has been a member of several literary groups. She has received several awards for her work.

Poverty Program

It was on a midnight black mountain shack with an Appalachian winter at the door. When all at once came a whooping there were loudly stumping, stomping on my cabin floor. Of this there was nothing more.

"Was this a branch that the wind had tossed? Or a hunter who was lost? Here was this just a falling log? Or a hungry hunting dog? It was none of these, dear brother."

He said, "How well do I remember that election in November, And how Lyndon defeated Adlai."

And he was carefully noted How the fighting North had voted, And the fact that econom­ y was low, Quite a mile away, Never.

They sent us Federal men And they poured the money in, And under this we all began to flower. But of the little mope None were taken to the jobs, Because they only paid three hours an hour, Only this and nothing more.

They put flowers in our shoes And they poured the money in, To bring the Great Society to these hills."

Richard said he can manage To see one disadvantage: It is a major thing to have no access to our stills.

It is not that I am complaining About this manpower squeeze That its good there can hardly be a doubt of. As I sit here unemployed, I can still be overjoyed That at last I know what sort of work I'm out of.

It was on a midnight black mountain shack with an Appalachian winter at the door. When all at once came a whooping there were loudly stumping, stomping on my cabin floor. Of this there was nothing more.

"Was this a branch that the wind had tossed? Or a hunter who was lost? Here was this just a falling log? Or a hungry hunting dog? It was none of these, dear brother."

He said, "How well do I remember that election in November, And how Lyndon defeated Adlai."

And he was carefully noted How the fighting North had voted, And the fact that econom­ y was low, Quite a mile away, Never.

They sent us Federal men And they poured the money in, And under this we all began to flower. But of the little mope None were taken to the jobs, Because they only paid three hours an hour, Only this and nothing more.

They put flowers in our shoes And they poured the money in, To bring the Great Society to these hills."

Richard said he can manage To see one disadvantage: It is a major thing to have no access to our stills.

It is not that I am complaining About this manpower squeeze That its good there can hardly be a doubt of. As I sit here unemployed, I can still be overjoyed That at last I know what sort of work I'm out of.