Spring Break At The End Of April? Why?

by Ray W. Baker

As most of the colleges and universities near the coast have already finished their spring break, church school classes have been in full swing for the past week. The sentiments of the students seem to be mixed. Some are happy to have the spring break. But others, who have been in Florida or other southern states, wonder why church schools are not doing as well. Exactly what is the reason for this?

After speaking with a couple of church school superintendents, the writer concludes that the problem is a lack of materials, a lack of in-service training, and a lack of time. Most of the schools have not been able to schedule their spring break around the same time as the local churches, and the result is that no church school classes are being given.

Well, there is a reason for this, and it is not the same reason that has been given by other officers. There are a few things that should be done about this problem. First of all, the church schools should be given a chance to have a spring break. Second, the church schools should be able to schedule their classes any time they want.

This question is the one that should be answered. The answer is that church schools should be able to have a spring break. This is the only way that they can schedule their classes and be able to have a spring break.

The 'Mississippi Slider' On Billy Preston

Editor's Note: The "Mississippi Slider" is one of the more popular Black rock, rhythm and blues quotes for "The Great Speckled Bird" production. The following is taken from the November 28, 1968 issue.

Frankly, I think Billy Preston was too good for The Beatles. I openly admit that is just pure prejudice and to let you know the full extent of mental prejudice so that you can judge what I say accordingly. I'll elaborate just a little bit on them before proceeding further. I grew up in Mississippi, where there were only three kinds of radio stations: soul stations, top forty stations, and country stations. In the last two, the soul artists were the most consistent in producing exciting music. In recent years FM rock stations have become as much to my attention, not so much because of the quality of music, much of which is poor, but because rock stations play a majority of types of music in addition to rock, and as I grow older, I crave a little bit of variety in the music I listen to. To be sure, some rock, lots of soul such as the Stones, consistently turn out music that meets the growing demand for soul music that the Beatles in their post-Pepper period has become erratic in their appeal to me. Some of their last cuts were as good as anything they (or anyone else) ever did, but quite a few weren't worth listening to. If you could judge from his concert at Emory Nov. 4, Billy Preston doesn't do anything that isn't very exciting to me and I attribute this largely to the fact that Preston's sound today is much more pure soul than it was to the symphony and a lot of classical symphonies say.
