Artmobile Exhibition Looks At Different Ways Landscape Artists Depict Nature

The manner in which twelve artists from varying time periods and geographic locations interpreted nature and their environment is the subject of a Virginia Museum Artmobile exhibition currently touring the state.

The exhibition, The Nature Of Landscape, shows how many influences played important roles in the artists' depictions of landscape and sea-scapes. All of the paintings in the exhibition are on loan from the permanent collection of the Virginia Museum.

The Artmobile containing the display is located at the Zehner Building on the hill at Clinch Valley College and is open to the public from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon and 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Assembled by exhibition director Charles Worsham, The Nature Of Landscape, the paintings in the display reflect such important themes as god and nature; manifest destiny and natural history; nature as a background to human activity; light; technological advances; man's fear and love of nature; and the retreat from reality and flight to nature.

The artists included in the exhibition represent a time span from the middle of the seventeenth century to the early twentieth century. Geographical regions represented include France, England, America, and the Netherlands.

The paintings are augmented by information panels which describe in greater detail some of the influences that affected each individual artist and how these influences are evident in the canvas in question.

The Nature Of Landscape will be on display through Tuesday, September 28. It will be open on Friday, September 24 in the morning only and will not be open on Saturday and Sunday but will again be open to the public on Monday and Tuesday, September 27 and 28 from 9:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon and 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.

A scene from the magical, enchanting film version of the classic fairy tale, "Beauty and the Beast." This marvelous, imaginative fantasy will be presented Monday night, September 27, as part of the CVC Classic Film Series. The film will have two screenings, at 6:00 and 8:00, in the CVC Drama Building. This is a film that should definitely not be missed.

Guest Editorial

O'Donnell Speaks Out Against Campus Litterbugs

This editorial has one purpose and one purpose alone: to ask all members of the college community to help reduce the litter and refuse present in our midst.

In the first place, I believe that we can all agree that litter does indeed abound on campus. One has but to look down to see it. As I see it, we've only three ways to look: 1) straight ahead, which we don't do, preferring instead to communicate with our fellow man via CB radio; 2) up, which we shun because (no pun intended) heaven knows that most of the region resembles the skinned skull of a young boy who has visited a blind barber, thanks to a less-than-perfect plan laughingly known as reclamation; 3) down, where we're bound to confront the fouling of our nest.

Now, it's common knowledge that most animals don't foul their own abodes. Yet we humans do it regularly and unthinkingly. I'm convinced that people of good will, as I firmly believe most people to be, will cease to drop papers and soda cans once it's brought to their attention that it makes our immediate environment look like a pig pen.

It may cost one an embarrassing moment to point this out to a litterer. Better one can teach by example, simply, and quietly picking up and disposing of the litter in plain view of the litterer.

Anyone who reads this is forewarned and forearmed. Think it over. Master your counterarguments: "I'm an American and I can litter if I like..." "Littering is a God-given and constitutional right..." "antilittering people are probably communists anyway..." et cetera, et cetera, ad infinitum.

When we've ceased spluttering and vituperating, however, a simple truth remains: Litter is dirt and litterers are willful slobs (I warned you I wouldn't mince words). They befoul and desecrate our college community. Let's help them first and then, if they persist, let's point them out for the creatures they are.

All of us -- students, staff, administration, and faculty, -- "live" more or less at C.V.C. I would hope that none of us are too good to pick up a paper or empty soda cans and dispose of it properly. I was appalled recently by two similar situations: a half-dozen soda cans on the ground beside a garbage can at the softball field; a student butting out a cigarette in the hall of the administration building next to an ashtray.

Aurely, we have an adequate number of trash cans. Let's use them. For the un-reconstructed and incorrigible in our midst, let's (the rest of us) pick up and throw away the trash that remains. Our maintenance crew does a fine job but they can't cover for the remaining 1,000 of us.

Let's see to it that looking down (remember, our remaining alternative) ceases to be the eyestrain it now is. All it will take is some active caring on the part of responsible members of the college community (and that is all of us!). Finally, to paraphrase an Old Irish tune, may the next item of litter which slithers from your hand toward the ground be quickly followed by that same hand, falling off.

'The Spice Of Life'

by Laura Cox

Okay folks, let's bring back the tradition of spinning yarns this year. I'm going to start off with a true adventure that happened to me last winter over in Bear Wallow (pronounced "Bar Wall'a) where I live. Now to get there you go down to Dungenood and head over towards old Fincastle, up the mountain to Long Holler, and I live right on top of Sabra's mountain there above the church. It's right pretty up there, but go get down to the story... I had gone to bed after stoking the fire up good and banking it down one night and my tom cat, Avio, woke me up. Well, I had to get up, let him out, and leave the door cracked a bit so he could come back in. I slept some more and got up again about 4:00 am to stoke the fire up. Avio had come back in so I shut the door. Well, about an hour later I heard something scratching at the window at the foot of my bed. I figured it was Olympia 'cause she was still out and I went over to the window to let her in. When I opened the curtain I saw that the cat was on the inside sill instead of the outside and it looked like Metao instead of Olympia, so I just patted it on the head. Then I rubbed it down its back and I thought "this cat sure does smell funny." Well, I rubbed it again right down to the tip of its tail and I thought "this cat feels funny too" and then it went through me like a bolt of lightning "This is not a cat!!" In one leap folks, I made to the bed and the lamp switch. I turned on the light and there was a big possum sitting in my window! Now I had to sit there for a few minutes to let my heart slow down and figure what to do. Of course the possum was blinded by the light; however, he managed to get under the dresser. I tried to coax him out with a tomato (he had already eaten two) and then I even tried to pull him out by his tail. He wouldn't budge. By this time he was more scared than

I was. Of course all the cats had gathered and were looking on with mild curiosity. I finally decided that I would open the door and get back in the bed and turn off the light so he could and would, hopefully, exit by himself. So I did that but, Lord I just couldn't lay there in the dark knowing that possum was only 3 or 4 feet away. So I'd turn the light on and he'd still be there. I did this about 5 times and then I finally fell asleep, with the light off. When I woke up again it was light outside and he was gone.

And that's the story folks. That old possum still comes around every once in awhile. I gave him some cookies last time. If you're ever visiting up around Bear Wallow and a possum runs out in front of you don't hit him--he just might be the one I know.

Jimmy Carter-Where He Stands On Foreign Policy And Defense

by J. Jack Kennedy

involve the U.S. military abroad.) A Jimmy Carter Administration would put a sharp downhold on CIA black operations and foreign assassinations in peace time.

Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter supports detente with the Soviet Union and Red China, but feels that the results so far, "have been basically negative for this country." Carter believes that Nixon-Kissinger foreign policy and nuclear arms limitation agreements were failures for the United States. Carter believes that we were "out-traded" by the Soviets in Helsinki, in Vladivostok, and in the Russian wheat deals.

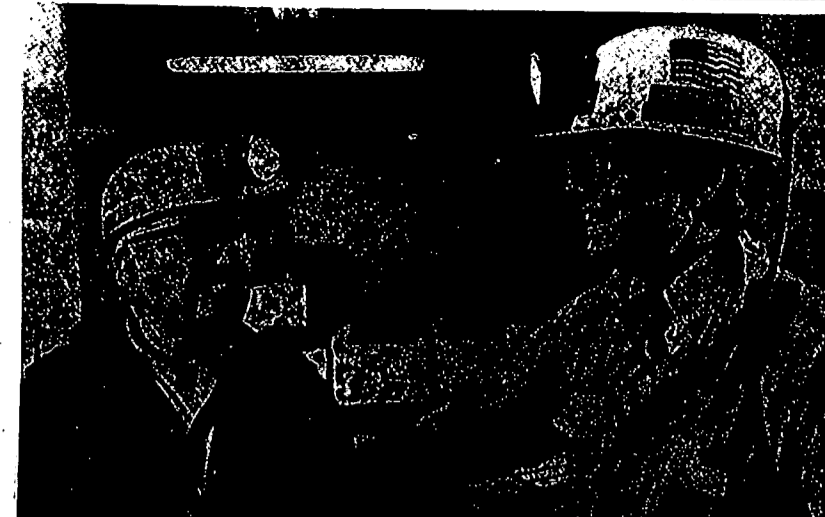

Carter believes that the United States first priorities should be our friends and allies: Japan, Western Europe, Israel. Carter supports Israel resisting Arab pressures to return to Israel's 1967 borders. Carter wants a guarantee from the Arab nations and the Soviet Union that Israel will remain a free and democratic nation.

Carter has made a campaign issue of Kissinger's "Lone Ranger" diplomatic style, and Carter would replace Henry Kissinger as Secretary of State. The di-Kissingerization would probably include a diminished preoccupation with U.S.-Soviet and U.S.-China relations. Results would be closer ties with Western democracies and Japan under a Carter Administration in the White House. Jimmy Carter would also place more emphasis on aiding the Third World countries in Africa, Latin America, Asia. (Carter would only in cases of the clearest evidence of a direct threat to national security would Carter

Carter believes that arms sales to the world's developing nations should be drastically reduced and ultimately the world's atomic powers should agree to abolish their nuclear weapons. The U.S. defense budget should be cut by $5 billion to $8 billion. Over a period of years, Carter hopes that the NATO countries should assume more responsibility for the defense of Western Europe.

Concerning the Panama Canal, a recent conservative campaign issue between Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, Jimmy Carter believes we have got to retain actual control of the canal. But Carter also believes that the United States should grant part of the sovereignty of the Canal Zone area to the people of Panama. Carter says that U.S. payments to Panama should be renegotiated payments to the nation.

Carter would concern his foreign policy objectives with "an architectural effort geared to long-term objectives and not merely sending a magician to put band-aids on the world's crises. Carter maintains that under his administration that American foreign policy will be made openly in consultation of the full Congress, the National Security Council, State Department, and private citizens advisory committees sponsored by the White House.

Highland Players To Present

"Streetcar Named Desire"

The Highland Players of Clinch Valley College will open a new year of theatre on October 5 with the major production of Tennessee Williams' poignant drama "A Streetcar Named Desire." Starting October 5, and continuing through October 10, the play will be staged each evening at 8:00. It is a play filled with a lot of emotion and intense drama. The story centers around an imposing southern belle visiting her sister who lives with her husband in the run-down French quarter of New Orleans. She visits her sister under ulterior motives, which are developed through the play, and which ultimately lead to a tragic end. Mr. Charles Lewis, Professor of Theatre, is the set designer and director for the play. Mr. Lewis, the cast and production, have been working on the construction of the set and the presentation of the play for the past several weeks. The communities around CVC have provided great support for the school's theatre in the past, and this year hopes to be no exception, especially with the season opening with such a popular and well-known play.
