"One of the advantages of the Reagan administration has been strengthening our defense. Whether the money has been spent wisely is another question," according to Professor Inis L. Claude, Jr., of the University of Virginia.

Professor Claude, the Edward R. Stettinius, Jr. Professor of Government and Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia since 1988, said that "There is a lot of wasted money that goes to the Pentagon." Claude quickly added that "It is probably impossible to do the things that need to be done without in the process doing some of the things that don't need to be done."

Claude visited the CVC campus on Thursday, Nov. 1 to give a talk entitled, "What To Do About Other People's Wars" at 7 p.m. in the Chapel. Stating that "The world is rarely without a war somewhere," Claude explained that his talk concerns "the problem that states have when they see a war between two other states. I am not going to try to answer the question of how states ought to react," but rather "analyze the features that may influence policies they come up with." He Chancellor W. Edmund Moomaw, a native of Woodstock, Virginia, is presently serving Birmingham Southern College as Academic Vice-President and Dean. He received his entire formal education from the University of Virginia.

Dr. Moomaw commented that when he was a college student he had the luxury of taking things (courses) he wanted to take. "You majored in what you liked and were good at," he added.

Stafford campaigns at CVC

By Mark Kilgore

Ninth district congressional candidate Jeff Stafford visited the Clinch Valley College campus on Monday, Oct. 29, 1984. He was shown around the community by SGA President John Kilgore and Young Republicans President Bill Counties.

Mr. Stafford addressed issues of great significance to students, such as changing the drinking age to 21. Stafford feels that this should be a state issue rather than a national issue. But he voted to change the age to 21 to keep alcohol out of the public schools. "So many 18 year olds were buying it and giving it to younger classmates. That's what we need to stop," Stafford explained.

"I oppose federal money for abortion, except in cases of rape, incest or harm to the mother or fetus," commented Stafford on federal aid for abortion. "I supported the Hatch amendment, which would return this to the states."

Financial aid is a very vital issue among students. Stafford feels that those students who need help should by all means receive it. "What we're trying to stop are the people who get government loans at eight or seven percent and put that money into accounts that draw interest. It isn't fair for those who desperately need the money," he added.

The largely debated controversy of this election is weapons in space. Stafford believes that it is something we need to look into and maybe it could eliminate nuclear war. "The technology is there and an initial investment should be made. We spend money to research diseases, why can't we look into this?" Stafford said.

Letters to the editor

Intramural editorial provokes response

Dear Editor, Students and Faculty:
After reading the column "Intramural Fighting Inexcusable," I felt there should be a few points cleared up or corrected.

The first point is that in intramural sports, as in any sports program, situations will arise in which tempers will flare up. However, this does not mean that intramural sports are poorly organized or unregulated. Charlie Engle does an excellent job of organizing intramural sports and reprimands when he sees fit.

The second point is that Alex Modaber was not entirely without fault. He was running around the field flaunting his ability to evade his opponents who were only trying to pull his flag and end the game. This, I agree, does not excuse the action of the Kappa team member involved.

Thirdly, and most importantly, the person responsible, in part, is not a member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity — only its football team. The Kappas do not condone fighting on the field and will do their best to keep this situation from reoccurring. Also, the brawl, as it has been carelessly labelled, was merely a team's effort to keep one of its members from fighting an opponent. Please check facts before you place blame and denounce any student or organization at CVC. I was there. Were you?

Thank you,

Editors note: This letter is in response to the editorial appearing in the October 8th issue of the Highland Cavalier. "Yes," the editor was there.

Commuters complain

To the Editor:
It has come to our attention that our activity fees are being spent on intramural sports. Therefore, we are writing to complain about how our fees are being spent.

We don't think it is fair for commuters because they are not getting any benefit from these activities, unless they live near campus and participate in these activities.

We were under the impression that our activity fees would be spent for the good of all students attending CVC. We feel the money would be much better spent if it were used for the benefit of the entire student body; instead of a few.

The lounge in the Zehmer building could use a money changer machine. It's pretty hard to walk to the bottom of the hill between classes in order to get change for a dollar. Also, a coffee machine would be nice in the Zehmer building. Some students do not like to drink sodas all the time, but there isn't much of a choice when that's all there is.

We welcome a response to this letter.

Vote November 6!

The slogans are familiar. "Don't talk politics unless you vote," is a prime example of efforts to "get the vote out." Put up or shut up. In other words, why the need for such seduction? Statistics: Hard, cold facts.

In 1980, only 59.2 percent of the total 157.1 million people eligible to vote in America reported doing so. This year, statisticians are predicting that less than half of the voting age population will pull that lever.

This prediction is disturbing. America, not exercising the right she is so highly revered for? The one right that separates us from most countries is being taken for granted; it is lying dormant. This right is being viewed lightly. It is something we don't have to do, therefore it is often neglected, often conveniently forgotten.

How can we overlook this right? It is guaranteed to us. It is in black and white. Maintain good citizenship and no one can take it away from you.

How tightly are Americans holding it? Not very, unfortunately. We're viewing it as less than valuable, less than precious. The nonchalant attitude is almost a disgrace. It is a downright shame when nearly half of the American population refuses to make the effort to pull a lever, to indicate a direction for their future.

The future is at stake. November 8th will decide the direction of this generation, and will profoundly influence the lives of succeeding generations. Wake up America. It's not just election day, it's future-choosing day.

When someone doesn't vote, he is, in reality, making a pretty strong statement. He's saying that he doesn't care how the election turns out, that his opinion doesn't matter—that it won't make a difference—and that he doesn't care about tomorrow.

Some feel that voting is a prerogative. That it is an exercise to be indulged in at will. Wrong! It's more than a prerogative, it's a responsibility. We have the power to decide the future, yet we are neglecting to exercise that power. In doing so we're shirking our responsibility to succeeding generations.

We cannot ignore the importance of the vote. Deciding how this country will be governed is everyone's concern. Be concerned. Be responsible. Vote November 6.

Point Blank is a weekly guest column on topics of interest to CVC.

Mercure thinks a figure head shouldn't serve a 'dual role'

By Rob Mercure
What this country needs is a queen! Now I'm not kidding. Actually the title doesn't have to be queen. It could be King, Leader, Boas, High Muckedy Muck, The Chief, Dean or any other nice symbolic name with no real power attached.

We have a problem. Our political system is set up with a person having to serve a dual role and this just doesn't work. I am, of course, talking about the presidency. We have to love our presidents. They are, after all, the symbolic figurehead of our country. All we hold proud and dear is represented by this person. The fact that a president may be a poor Chief Executive Officer doesn't get in the way of our idolizing him if he looks and acts the part.

In England, as in some other "furrin" countries, they have a Queen. (Didn't know that did you.) Everybody loves the Queen (Well most everybody.) The Queen stands for the country. It's Her Majesty's Army, Navy, Sanitation Service and whatever. They also have a Prime Minister that everybody can hate. In fact everybody from England I've talked to lately hates the P.M. This distinction of roles is important. One cannot function well with schizophrenia. It is hard to evaluate a President's performance in their functional role and their ceremonial role at the same time.

As I grew up I was indoctrinated with an image as to what a president looked like. They were male (society still has a way to go), handsome, masculine (as opposed to merely male), stood tall and straight, were quick on their feet, glib and well spoken. Sound familiar? It should; we have such a president now and he fits this image I/we were raised with very well.

Whether or not he's a good Chief Executive Officer we will all decide shortly but I feel he's being judged as to how well he fits our stereotypes and not how well he functions in a non ceremonial, Chief Executive Officer role.

So.....Maybe it's time to split the roles up. It isn't fair either to the President or us to continue this mess. We need someone we can easily judge by their track record, someone we can compare to a standard other than how well they can act in public. Let's have a separate role of, guess what, "the President" for the nation's primary spokesperson, and a role of Chief Executive Officer for the person who actually runs the nation's business. A real advantage of the P.M. (or C.E.O. or whatever you call him) is that he can be removed from office relatively painlessly, unlike impeachment of a president which almost takes an act of God. (See the resurrected Doonesbury concerning this.)

On a very personal political level, I really wouldn't mind the current president symbolic figurehead role but I do feel uncomfortable with his ability to make "real life" decisions.

Who's Who selected

By Rick Widener

The process of selection for Who's Who is by nomination. Faculty members and presidents of the various student organizations nominate ten students each. The following students have been selected to represent CVC for the 1984-85 academic year.

Harry Stuart is a senior from Appalachia who is majoring in Business Administration, with a concentration in Marketing. "Bo" is Vice President of the SGA, President of the Alliance for Black Culture, President of the Interclub Council, and a member of Phi Beta Lambda business fraternity. He responded modestly to being selected, by saying, "I really didn't think that I'd be chosen."

Kimberly Raymer is currently President of Chi Delta Rho sorority, Vice President of Circle K Club, a member of the Publications Committee, and has been named to the Dean's List of Distinguished Students for the past three years. Kim was CVC's Homecoming Queen in 1983, and Miss Lonesome Pine in 1984. Her response to learning that she had been selected for Who's Who was a smile, followed by "I'm surprised!"

Shari Farmer is President of the Circle K Club, Secretary of the SGA, Treasurer of Chi Delta Rho sorority, a Student Orientation Leader, a science tutor, and staff member and organizer of Speak Easy (an organization which hopes to develop into a crisis center). Shari's response to being selected was, "I was ecstatic!"

John Pope is President of Alpha Delta Chi fraternity, a member of Phi Beta Lambda, disc jockey for some of CVC's dances, and he works with the cheerleaders. During his first year at CVC, John was on the National Dean's List and CVC's Dean's List of Distinguished Students. "I'm pleased," John said about being selected. "It really adds the finishing touches on a college education. It's a nice honor."

Allen Wallace is President of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, Prosecutor for the Honor Court, Treasurer of the SGA, and a math and science tutor. Al said that he "was pleased" about being selected.

Arved Harding Jr. is President of the International Club, President of Sigma Zeta

Math and Science club, has been on CVC's Dean's List of Distinguished Students, and the National Dean's List three times, and is a member of the SVEA. Arved said, "I think (Who's Who) is important... I didn't expect to be selected this year, though I've done more to be known. I'm surprised."

John Kilgore is President of the SGA, Sergeant at Arms of Circle K, Vice Chairman of the College Republicans, a member of the Board of Directors of the Wesley Foundation, Treasurer of Alpha Delta Chi fraternity, and a Student Orientation Leader. John is pleased to have been selected, but is surprised at the number of students that were chosen, because it is less than in previous years.

Betty Farmer is presently the Editor of the Highland Cavalier, was an SGA member her freshman year, and was on CVC's Dean's List of Distinguished Students for three years. Betty is the only junior of the eight students selected for Who's Who this semester. Betty said, "I enjoy athletics, especially tennis, bicycling, running and hiking. I'm very proud, very honored, and happy as can be!"

Comments on age issue: senility, descrimination

By Frank Pyano
Should age matter in the presidency?

Michele Melscheid — Yes, age does matter. Senility could pose a threat for the country.

Tobey Converse — As long as he can perform the duties of the presidency then age should not be a factor.

H. Kevin Matney — If the person is competent enough to where age wouldn't affect him then no it should not matter. In the upcoming election age is not a concern.

Hope Hancock — I don't believe in age discrimination. Therefore, age should not be an issue.

actual decision-making process, the leaders "sort of play it by ear instead of following a fixed doctrine."

Professor Claude believes that the nuclear arms race is "obviously an important question for every thinking person. And I think at least some people will decide their votes... on that issue."

"I think our defense badly needed beefing up when Reagan came into office. It is a positive point that he has contributed to the armed forces," Claude said.

"Mondale is more inclined to talk about arms control. (He is) more quick to express sympathy... A Mondale will sound more peace-oriented than a Reagan," Dr. Claude explained. But "When you get right down to policy, I don't think Mondale is out to weaken our defense," he added.

In response to the controversial question of CIA involvement in Central America, Claude said, "I think it is right for us to respond in some fashion... we have legitimate concerns there." He explained that in the world scheme of things, "It is a great deal easier to prevent something than it is to correct it later. The instinct to act in one way or another to prevent the political developments that might be dangerous is a sound one. It gets unsound when you get too heavy-handed."

the short term, but the long is terribly important, too. Jobs aren't out there waiting; society is changing rapidly. Students are preparing for a very different future from that for which we prepared." Dr. Moomaw offered on the preparation of students.

Concerning a well-rounded liberal arts education Dr. Moomaw stated, "The attributes of a liberal arts education include: thinking, learning, adapting and appreciating culture."

"Many middle-aged persons today are willing to learn computing skills, now are the product of a good liberal arts education. Computer companies are telling educators to send them students they can teach. The whole person is made up of many parts and the whole person is what we in education should be concerned with," he added concerning a liberal arts education.

The remainder of his address was devoted to an informal question session.

Dr. Charles Lewis asked, "Is it true Yale is offering you the same position as we are?"

Dr. Moomaw answered, "Yes, and so is Harvard."

Associate Professor of Spanish Augusto Portuondo asked, "How do you view the position of the college in connection with the situation of distance from UVA?"

"I'm still learning - I have found that many here like it. The relationship is a good one. It's beneficial," said Moomaw.

Dr. Richard Peake asked, "The faculty recently voted for keeping association with UVA for at least ten years. There are rumors that people from UVA would like to see a break. Portuondo wants to know, like others of us, if there is the possibility of a haphazard breaking away?"

Moomaw responded, that he had heard some rumors. He feels that the relationship is a valuable one. His tendency would be to cultivate it rather than break it off.

Dr. Charles Lewis asked, "What are your feelings towards classes with small enrollments? Would you keep the majors?"

Moomaw responded, "Like many other Deans, I count, but nevertheless, you have to have well-roundedness; otherwise, you have to remove the word 'college.'"

Dean of Students Bonnie Elosser asked, "State council ruled that we would have two years to take care of the numbers of students in the classes - do you have creative ways to take care of this?"

Moomaw responded, "We try to persuade students that people with narrow educations start at the bottom and stay at the bottom. In an interview, for example, with a banker one can say, "I know such and such about economics and business. I also saw a play last night about the second man hung in Wise County." The business manager at Birmingham Southern tells me there are only two students taking Latin. I tell him they are very important students."

Lasha Price, student of CVC asked, "How would you feel about some courses in Black history in the CVC curriculum?"

Moomaw's response was, "I feel it is important to integrate black history the courses already offered."

Dr. William Impy asked, "How do you assess faculty teaching roles and problems?"

In response Moomaw offered, "It is difficult to assess. The faculty needs to agree that there is a problem that needs to be solved."

Dr. Roy Wells asked "Would you recommend a point system for CVC?"

Moomaw responded, "I would offer the thought to the faculty but it would be up to them."

Confident attitude towards life pays off

By Warren Wattenbarger
A casual reading of any of the four Gospels reveals the fact that Jesus held life in great respect. He believed it capable of yielding great and enormous satisfactions. He relished it, rejoiced in it, exulted in its privileges, reveled in its satisfactions, respected its mysteries, coveted its rewards. On one occasion, in describing his own purpose in living he said: "I have come that they might have life and have it more abundantly".

best it must be lived as it is expected to be lived. It is not something to be feared, but something to be embraced; it is endowed with great risks, but also packed with great rewards. It is not a master to which we must submit, but a servant to be employed.

It can be made to work. In fact, some very unpromising individuals have succeeded in living gloriously. Booker T. Washington, Helen Keller, Milton, the blind, Elizabeth Browning, the invalid, the Apostle Paul, and an almost interminable list of determined and heroic souls have started out under dreadful handicaps and have come in at last with banners flying and the heavens resounding with applause.

"Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us," Hebrews 12:1.

Life is set before us, studded with mystery and beset with difficulties but God has given us the ability to face it with courage and confidence. We are made to know that it is not an insoluble puzzle, nor is it an impossible burden; because it is from God. Therefore face life with confidence and with a positive attitude.

Election results controversial

By Andrea Gonzalez
CVC's Young Republican president Bill Countiss claims that Rick Boucher's narrow victory over Jeff Stafford in CVC's mock election last Wednesday was not indicative of true student opinions. Supposedly a keg of beer was offered to the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity in exchange for a Rick Boucher win.

Countiss said that he could name one CVC student in particular who said "I voted for the keg," and that several other people were coming away from the polls expressing the same trade. "But later on no one would say that when all the papers started calling" added Countiss.

This incident has reached several major papers in the Ninth District. Boucher, the Ninth District incumbent Congressman narrowly defeated Jeff Stafford by 39 votes. Boucher was the only Democrat to win the election with Ronald Reagan winning 154 votes over Mondale's 112 and John Warner receiving 176 votes over Edythe Harrison's 103.

Steven Dowdy, vice-president of the Phi Sigs says, "There was no keg. The party had nothing to do with the election. It was Halloween. Countiss was crying because they (the Republicans) didn't win the whole ticket. He's a sore loser. We're Republicans and Democrats within the fraternity. The swaying was purely individual matters. We were using this excuse to get people to the party."

Last year's players should provide stability and experience

Coming off a 9-14 record last year, the Lady Cavaliers head into this season with their fourth coach in five years. The frequent changes in the coaching staff may help explain the fact that the Lady Cavs have only won 19 games in the last three years. Head Coach Hal Clary will be depending on last year's players to provide the stability and experience needed to make this a winning season.

Returning to the team are Susan Hamilton, Terri Dotson, Beth Hamilton, Sandra Kendrick, and Nancy Stallard.

Team captain Susan Hamilton, a 5'7" senior from Clintwood, Virginia, will be a starter for the fourth year for the Lady Cavs, and has averaged 11.9 points per game (ppg), and 8.2 rebounds per game (rpg) last season, playing in all 23 games.

Terri Dotson, a 5'4" senior from Hurley Virginia, played as back-up last season. She averaged 5.4 ppg and 2.2 rpg, playing in all 23 games.

Beth Hamilton, a 5'11" Junior from Clintwood, played the second semester last year, averaging 17.3 ppg and 11.8 rpg in 12 games. Beth was a standout player at James Madison College.

Sandra Kendrick, a 5'7" sophomore from McClure, Virginia, played in all 23 games this past season, averaging 2.9 ppg and 2.0 rpg.

Nancy Stallard, a 5'5" sophomore from Wise, Virginia played in all 23 games, averaging .7 ppg and 1.1 rpg.

Newcomers to the team include; Penny Collins, a 5'4" freshman from Grundy, Amy Goff, a 5'8" junior from Pound who transferred from Lubbock Christian College in Texas and won't be eligible until the second semester, Caroline Harlow, a 5'6" freshman from Fleming, Kentucky, Connie Hoover, a 5'8" freshman from McDowell, Kentucky, Elaine Mitchell, a 5'10" freshman from Reston, Virginia; and Kim Mullins, a 5'7" freshman from St. Paul, Virginia.

New ping pong paddle policy in game room

New ping pong paddles for the Game Room were received Tuesday, October 30. Four paddles were placed in the Game Room on that date. Wednesday morning, October 31, all four paddles were gone from the Game Room. These paddles cost approximately $3.50 each, the money to purchase these paddles came from Student Activity fees. We cannot continue to lose these paddles, therefore, the following procedure must be followed to acquire a paddle for your use:

Paddles may be checked out at the Housing Office or the Book Store. CVC students, faculty, and staff only may check out paddles. The student checking out the paddle must sign a check out sheet and leave his/her CVC I.D. with the person in the Housing Office or Bookstore. When the paddle is checked in, the I.D. will be returned.

This is inconvenient for the students, but seems to be the only solution at the present time. Your cooperation and understanding in this matter is greatly appreciated.
