

Second Chancellorship candidate visits CVC

By Mark Kilgore

Civic education: That is what John L. Butler, the second of ten candidates for the chancellorship of CVC, believes today's college student should be educated for. "Students need assistance to become citizens, and not just citizens, but develop their role in life as active citizens of society," Butler said.

How would this be done? "It's more than requiring students to take general education subjects, but (also includes) helping them understand the mechanics of morals, methods, and logic," stated Butler. "General education needs to be a cohesive unit with an integrated sense of wholeness and completeness. Professors should be turning students on to general education which could prove very rewarding, because general education can be the most rewarding part of a student's education," Butler commented.

Dr. Butler views coming to Clinch Valley College as "very challenging." "I would return to an accreditation I am familiar with: the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. CVC is near Kentucky, which is my wife's home. It's a rural, isolated institution, and that's the type I'm accustomed to working with," Butler said. Dr. Butler likes to work in a reasonably small liberal arts environment, where the faculty gets excited about new things, and where he can challenge them through new ideas.

Alumni honor Joe Smiddy

Chancellor Joseph D. Smiddy was honored by the CVC Alumni Association Saturday night, November 3, at a dinner given in Cornell Hall.

About 400 persons gathered for the reception and banquet.

The theme of the dinner was Chancellor Smiddy as an educator, church man and politician.

Dr. Ray Allen of Blacksburg, pastor of the West Baptist Church where Smiddy is a member, said Dr. Smiddy was a good church man and was with a "dream" for Clinch Valley College.

Attorney Kenneth P. Aubrey, a good friend of Chancellor Smiddy's and CVC, discussed the history of the college and concluded that the honors at the SGA-sponsored talent show held October 7, in CVC's Jefferson Lounge.

Fields won the fifty dollar first prize with a vocal medley which included "Scarborough Fair" and Jethro Tull's "Thick as a Brick." It was Field's impressive guitar accompaniment, however, that highlighted his performance.

Sophomore Maria Portuondo captured the audience's heart and twenty-five dollars with her beautiful rendition of the song "Sleepy Man," from the musical The Robber Bride Groom.

Taking third place honors were Jace Cuje' and Frank Oeschlager. The two won the fifteen-dollar prize with a feverish electric guitar duet. The song, entitled "Glimpse of Heaven," was sung and written by Cuje'.

Three other performers also competed in last Wednesday's talent show.

Rick Widener accompanied himself on guitar and sang a love ballad titled "Goodbye to You," which he also wrote.

Eddie Garrett, accompanied on the piano by Susan Culbertson, performed the Jim Croce hit "Time in a Bottle."

Mark Dean stole the show with his jokes and hilarious performance of the song

Shortage of language teachers projected

According to Education Week (Vol. IV, No. 2; September 12, 1984), there is a rise in foreign language course enrollments, which is causing a shortage of qualified teachers. The following is what was reported in the Sept. 12 issue.

"A 70-percent increase over the past three years in the number of Oklahoma public-school students enrolled in foreign-language courses has sent educators scrambling for ways to recruit language instructors."

"Virginia, which last year began requiring that all students seeking an advanced-studies diploma take three years of a foreign language and that all schools offer at least one foreign language to 8th-grade students, faces a severe teacher-shortage problem, according to state officials."

"We very definitely have a shortage of teachers," said Helen P. Warriner-Burke, associate director of foreign languages for the Virginia Department of Education. Enrollment in high-school language courses has increased 3 to 6 percent in the last 10 years, she noted, adding that she was certain from field reports that it's going to be up at least 3 percentage points this year."

In relation to other colleges, "Richard Brod, director of foreign language programs for the Modern Language Association, sees a strong correlation between increased college requirements and larger high-school enrollments in foreign language courses. In the past three years, Mr. Brod noted, an increasing number of colleges and universities across the nation have begun to reinstitute entrance and exit language requirements for bachelor's degree candidates."

Further, "In 1986, Mr. Brod said, about 33 percent of colleges granting the B.A. degree had foreign-language entrance requirements, and 89 percent had graduation requirements for degree candidates."

"And although last year only 14 percent of colleges required foreign languages for admission and 47 percent had foreign-language requirements for the B.A. degree, the recent figures represent a trend toward restoration," he said.

In addition, "Mr. Brod also credits students growing awareness of international affairs and the back-to-basics movement for the increase in foreign-language enrollments."

Concerning the apparent teacher shortage, it was reported that "... while proponents of foreign-language instruction are heartened by the resurgence of interest in such study, they are worried about the shortage of capable teachers and the consequences of relying on those who are inadequately trained."

"If administrators are eager to restore language study," Mr. Brod said, "but they can't restore good teachers, then it's not a healthy situation. The universities really have to gear up again for training good and better (language) teachers."

In summary, it was concluded that "education-school officials note that, even if they are able to recruit students into foreign-language programs, it will take some time before they make a dent in the current shortage."

Ladies appearing this weekend

"First Ladies" and "Lou," true stories about brave, pioneering women will be enacted Nov. 14 and 15.

Theatre IV, the largest touring drama group in Virginia will present the lively musical "First Ladies" at 8 p.m. Nov. 14 at J.I. Burton High School in Norton. The show weaves together the stories of five women who made historic contributions to business, politics and literature in Virginia.

"First Ladies" is produced by Theatre IV in partnership with the Virginia Women's Cultural Project.

"Lou" is a one-woman show written and performed by Gayle Stahlhuth of New York about the life of Louisa May Alcott, the famous 19th century novelist who wrote "Little Women" and "Little Men" and took an active role in the early days of the women's suffrage movement.

"Lou" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 15 at J.J. Kelly High School in Wise.

Both shows are sponsored by the Pro-Art Association and partially funded by the National Endowment for the Arts and the Virginia Commission for the Arts. Additional sponsorship for "First Ladies" is provided by the Lonesome Pine Coca Cola Bottling Co. and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. Additional sponsorship for "Lou" is provided by Dominion Bank.

CVC students are admitted free to all Pro-Art Events.

Alumni honor Joe Smiddy with dinner and gifts

history of the college mirrors the life of Chancellor Smiddy.

Michael E. O'Donnell, a long time member of the CVC faculty, talked about the traits demanded of a college chancellor and gave examples showing Dr. Smiddy possessing those traits. He led the audience in a toast to Dr. Smiddy as "Mr. CVC."

A member of the Va. House of Delegates, Ford Quillen, of Gate City, told the audience that "CVC is a 'miracle' and that the growth and success of the college is largely attributable to Joe Smiddy."

After the speakers gave their remarks, the alumni association presented the Chancellor with gifts in appreciation of his more than 30 years of service to the college.

Alumni association member Ron Moore presented a plaque which cited Dr. Smiddy as CVC's "first Chancellor" and lauded him for his "academic integrity" and making students "stronger in knowledge and richer in spirit."

Jim Boggs, chairman of the alumni committee for the dinner, read a letter from Dr. Dedmon, president of Radford University. Dr. Dedmon's letter praised Smiddy for his work in getting funds from the legislature.

Ron Dickenson, a member of the alumni association, presented Chancellor Smiddy with a dulcimer.

The dinner concluded with the Reedy Creek Boys performing several songs. Mr. Smiddy is a member of that band.

During the dinner, Ms. Elaine Kiser played several selections on the piano.

The dinner invocation was given by Rev. Ray Jones, minister of the Wise Baptist Church.

The speakers at the dinner were introduced by John Farmer, president of the alumni association and Phyllis Hatcher, vice-president.

Second Chancellorship candidate visits CVC

Dr. Butler sees the job of Chancellor as being the equivalent of a college-university president, who incorporates educational leadership, lobbying at the General Assembly, and most importantly, the front image of a college—a visible manifestation.

Dr. Butler has been in higher education administration for fifteen years. Presently he is serving as Vice-President of Academic Affairs, and a Professor of Biology at Western New Mexico University. "I have good people skills and communicate well with students and I don't try to intimidate them. I have the ability to get people in a group to discuss some issue, talk rationally, and build a consensus. This brings out different ideas out," he stated.

"Students need a full two years of liberal arts," Butler stated. "A thematic orientation to the general education through liberal arts creates the building of civic leaders," Butler commented on a well-rounded education.

Dr. Butler feels that decreased enrollment could be solved through an "aggressive recruitment through alumni, students, and possibly additional staff. (We could) have attractive admission materials and seduce them into the Arts."

If faced with the situation of a faculty member not performing his or her job properly, Dr. Butler suggested that he "would call them in and describe the problem, offer assistance, and visit the class, set goals, and have the professor come back with progress reports. This is not a threatening process, but a building one," he said.

Dr. Butler feels he would have to "learn on sight," about the maintenance of an extension of a major institution like CVC. "All I can say is I would get up there (in Charlottesville) often, and have them here often."

Correction — In the November 8 issue of the Highland Cavalier, Dr. W. Edmund Moomaw was mistakenly identified as Chancellor. He is actually a candidate for the Chancellorship of Clinch Valley College. We apologize for any misunderstandings caused by this error.

Hooper awarded citation by US Metric Association

Last month our own professor of physics, Dr. William Hooper, was awarded a Special Citation for his service for the United States Metric Association. The citation was awarded to Dr. Hooper by USMA board directors member Mr. Edwin Belles, at the USMA national conference in San Antonio, Texas. The USMA was founded in 1916, and promotes the adoption of SI, or the International System of Units, here in the United States.

Dr. Hooper first began teaching at Clinch Valley College in 1959. He received his B.S. and Masters degrees at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and his Ed.D. at Boston University. Dr. Hooper is currently the chairperson of the Metric Committee of the American Association of Physics Teachers, and is also Governor Charles Robb's appointee to serve as Virginia's representative to the National Conference on State Metrification. Dr. Hooper has served since 1977 as coordinator of the Southwest Virginia Regional Science Fair. The science fair will be held at Clinch Valley College April 20, 1985, for high school students grades 9-12. Dr. Hooper commented, "The science fairs are not used enough in our area; students need appropriate guidance from teachers and administration." Indicating that there is more to an education than just taking classes, he stated, "Science fairs can be an important part of the high school experience, and should be encouraged more at each school in our region." Furthermore, Dr. Hooper added, "We will accept any number of projects that a high school wants to enter." Although there could be more participation, the science fair promises to be a very interesting display of projects.

As a member of the USMA, Dr. Hooper strongly supports the implementation by Congress of the International System of Units (SI). "As stated in our Constitution, the Congress has the authority to establish a system of weights and measures, but we are one of only four countries in the world that still use the old system originally created by the British, that even they have given up," he stated in support of SI.

Florida has decided to begin using the metric system on highway signs, and Hooper "hopes Virginia will follow also."

Dr. Hooper wrote several articles last year explaining and promoting the SI system in the Physics Teacher, a journal dedicated to the strengthening of the teaching of physics at all levels. Dr.

Hooper will have another either this month or next, and the John Cooke Wyllie article in the Physics Teacher the journals are available at Library.

Math-Science contest slated

The fourteenth annual Sigma Zeta Math-Science Contest for area high school students will be held at Clinch Valley College on Saturday, November 17, 1984. Registration for the day-long event will begin at 9:00 a.m. in the lobby of the Science building.

The contest, in mathematics and the natural sciences, is in the form of written tests constructed and administered by the college's mathematics and science faculty. Each participating school may enter a team of three students in the math contest and a team of three in the science contest. Students will compete for trophies and awards of scholarships to Clinch Valley College.

In addition to the contest, the day will include activities such as computer games and demonstrations, exhibits by departments within the college, and a movie. At the end of the day, a special awards banquet will be held in the college cafeteria.

The contest is sponsored by Alpha Xi chapter of Sigma Zeta and the mathematics and science departments of Clinch Valley College.

Further information may be obtained from Van Daniel or Wayne Edwards at Clinch Valley College, Wise, Virginia 24293 (703-328-2431).

To find out more about this mysterious disorder come to the Science Lecture Hall at 4:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 12, 1984. Shari Farmer will be the speaker.

Band concludes their '84 tour

By Kathy Roark

On Friday, November 9, Greear Gymnasium was the site of the last concert of the 1984 tour of Pure Prairie League. The band has toured this year in two week spurts beginning in Virginia, South Carolina, and Washington D.C. The tour took Pure Prairie League to nearly every state in the union — except Hawaii. "We went everywhere else..." commented guitarist Mike Rely.

Pure Prairie League is a Cincinnati, Ohio-based band, and will be returning to the studio in late November of this year to record another album, adding to their string of nearly a dozen past albums. The band has undergone changes over the years, but two of the present band members go all the way back to the "Two Lane Highway" album. The new album, as yet untitled, will be out this spring.

The band members dazzled the audience with one of the most energetic performances CVC has seen. The members are versatile, as was evidenced by HOT Clawson, who performed on the saxophone, flute, and harmonica, and also sang backup vocals. Versatility was also evident in the performance as a whole — there seems to be no set "lead vocalist" — this limelight is shared well by all of the band members, especially guitarists Mike Rely, Gary Burr and Tim Goshorn. Goshorn's flashing firehat will not soon be forgotten!

The favorable reaction to the concert is mutual — Pure Prairie League enjoyed performing here, even though a championship football game kept most of the people of the area occupied elsewhere... The band expressed a sentiment that they would rather perform for 150 or diehard fans, than thousands of lukewarm ones. The reaction to playing here expressed by Gary Burr, w "Great, (it was a) sm crowd... they sang along w us!" Mike Rely added "We'll come ba anytime..."

Chancellor candidate to visit campus

This Monday, November 12, 1984, Dr. Don Darnton, an applicant for the position of Chancellor, will be spending the day at Clinch Valley College. There will be several events during the 12th at which interested students will be able to hear or meet our guest.

At 1:30 p.m., Dr. Darnton will give a talk in the Chapel that will be open to the entire college community. The talk will end at 2:20 p.m.

The Search Committee hopes that the students will avail themselves of these opportunities to meet our visitor on campus this Monday.

Cavs beat alumni in opener

Terry Edwards, a 1982 graduate, said he had "never seen any more hustle on a team at CVC," after CVC's current handed CVC's returning a 105-91 licking at Saturday night's season opening alumni game.

Coach Dave Bentley agreed with Edwards, former Academic All American and KAC All Conference player, "We played with a lot of enthusiasm. It was a good effort."

The Cavaliers played the whole bench, producing several impressive individual efforts.

Curtis Clayborne, a junior transfer from Ferrum Junior College, led the scoring with 21 points, 2 assists, and 4 steals.

Returning sophomore Rob Stoss pumped in 20, pulled down 8, and stole the ball 3 times.

Clarence Moore, a junior transfer from Phoenix College in Phoenix Arizona, scored 15 points, while Randy Harkleroad, a freshman who played for Dobyns-Bennett High School, added 14 points to the win.

Leading the scoring for the alumni was Barry Hamler, with 27 points and 4 rebounds.

Edwards added 14, got 10 rebounds, 3 assists, and 4 steals.

Tony Kolb, a 1984 graduate, scored 14 points, grabbed 4 rebounds, and passed for 2 assists.

Mike Hoskins, a 1983 graduate, had 12 points, 12 rebounds, 1 assist, and 1 steal.

Members of this year's alumni team, which Bentley labeled as the "best alumni team ever," included Wayne Stewart, Georgia, Roger St. Clair, New Castle, Va., Mike Counts, Castlewood, Johnny Cornett, Coeburn, Ronnie Bates, Norton, Willie Brown, Abingdon, Barry Hamler, Big Stone Gap, Terry Edwards, Carroll County, Ky., Mike Hoskins, Mammoth, Ky., and Tony Kolb, Roanoke.

Edwards summed up the Cavalier outlook: "If they work as well as they did tonight, they'll do well."

Coach Bentley said "the younger players did better than expected," and that the team "rebounded better than expected." He said the team needs to work hard on "decision making." That is court sense - when to do the right thing at the most opportune moment.

Women's game

Beth Hamilton worked the ball inside for a game-high 22 points, while freshman teammate Penny Collins fired from the outside to add 19 points to the Lady Cavalier 69-49 victory over the alumni.

The Lady Cavs played well at times, and poorly at other times. They built a substantial 32-18 halftime lead, and then let the alumni cut into that security. The alumni outscored the Lady Cavs 17-6 in the first five minutes of the 2nd half to come within three buckets of the lead.

Assistant Coach Dirk Davis said that the team had problems "getting the shot off in those first five minutes of the 2nd half."

Coach Hal Clary said that this team's biggest problem has been handling the ball. "We're starting to do that better," said the team's fourth coach in five years. Clary said the team is very limited in what they can do because the squad presently consists of seven players because of injuries and eligibility requirement problems.

Playing for the alumni were Nancy Perdue, high scorer with 15 points from Dryden, Va., Kathy Bentley, the 1980 MVP, with 1,000 career points to her credit from Burdine Ky., Pamela Cooney, Wise, Va., Renee Judd, Norfolk, Va., Jill Mahan, Norton, Va., Lorraine Turner, Castlewood, Va., Marlene Wyatt, Wise, Va., Patricia Scott, Norton, Va., and Delcinea Wilkerson, the 1981 Team Captain, from Norfolk, Va.

Barry Hamler, a 1981 graduate, was the first player from CVC to receive All-Conference recognition. Hamler No. 33, led all scoring with 27 points.

Curtis Clayborne, No. 11, had 21 points and 4 steals Saturday night.

Penny Collins' aggressive play and outside shots helped lead the Lady Cavs to a 69-49 victory over the alumni.

Clinch Valley to host Coalfield Progress Invitational Tourney

WISE — The Second Annual Coalfield Progress Invitational Basketball Tournament gets underway at Clinch Valley College next weekend.

The tournament, scheduled for Friday and Saturday, Nov. 16-17, will feature four collegiate teams. Clinch Valley College, the winner of last year's inaugural event, will host the tournament at Fred B. Greear Gymnasium.

Clinch Valley College, Brescia College, Longwood College and Piedmont Bible College will vie for this year's title. The tournament, which was established last fall, is the only locally sponsored collegiate affair. Two games will be played Friday, Nov. 16 beginning at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Longwood College will square off with Brescia College in the tournament opener and Clinch Valley College will battle Piedmont Bible College in the nightcap.

The tournament will continue Saturday, Nov. 17, with Friday night's losers playing a consolation game for third place at 7 p.m. The tournament championship game will get underway at 9 p.m.

Cavs on the road

The Lady Cavaliers will travel to Alice Lloyd Tuesday, November 13, to Union Friday, November 16, and to Sue Bennett, Saturday, November 17.
