Moomaw discusses role

By Allan K. Lovelace
Chancellor-elect Dr. W. Edmund Moomaw visited Clinch Valley College for three days last week, with the purpose of becoming better acquainted with the college, according to the office of the Chancellor.

Dr. Moomaw met with the Student Government Association on Wednesday. Activity fees, and how they should be spent, were among the topics discussed at the meeting which was closed to reporters.

In an interview with the Highland Cavalier conducted after the SGA meeting, Dr. Moomaw explained what he believes his role will be as Chancellor. "I think, it's true that the Chancellor's role is primarily involved with representing the college outside of the college, but I expect to be very active with students and faculty," he said. As a "fundraiser," Dr. Moomaw stated, "I think it's very important, and I will be-devoting a lot of my time and energy to that." He said he plans to draw on "a lot of different sources: foundations, corporations, individuals...local, state wide and national sources. It will be an effort to get outside interests more aware of what we do."

In becoming more involved with students and faculty, Dr. Moomaw said, "I'm in favor of more weekend activities to get more people to stay on weekends. It's something I'd like to work on with the students and faculty. I'd like to see more more social activities but also more intellectual activities."

Concerning the relationship with the University of Virginia, Dr. Moomaw stated, "I like the relationship with UVA. I'm in favor of keeping the ties with UVA. Dr. Moomaw explained, "if CVC comes to the point of wanting to become an independent college...it could be something handled very simply."

Dr. Moomaw added that he is in favor of keeping intact the tradition of CVC as a four-year liberal arts college. He stated that offering a broad course curriculum encourages "students coming from outside of the area...which increases the diversity of the college."

In the matter of bonds being paid off in part by student rent, Dr. Moomaw stated, "I think that one of the ways we have to pay for new dormitories is through bonds. Myself and the administration will make every effort to keep rent down," he said.

Dr. Moomaw stated that his role as Chancellor will be an "active" one. "I will want to be very accessible to you (the students). I would like to meet Continued on page 5

Outpost will arrive late this year

By Betty Farnam

The yearbooks will be arriving late this year because the last deadline was not met on time. Tammy Kilgore, Outpost Editor, said she expects to receive the books in June.

Seniors or anyone else who will not be returning to Wise next semester can have his book mailed to him. To receive the Outpost by mail, Kilgore asks that the student submit his name and address to Box 177, Campus Mall. The Outpost will be available in the admissions office this summer and will be distributed in Zehmer and Cantrell Hall next semester.

Kilgore said the main reason the books are going to be late "is because we set our last deadline late in order to get as much material in as possible. We missed that deadline because some of the faculty pictures, club pictures, and some of the ads weren't in. I wanted to be sure to get them in," Kilgore stated.

"The yearbook has other problems. For the second year in a row the Outpost budget has ended in the red. Catherine Mahony, Outpost Advisor, expects the deficit "to be as low as $500 or as high as $800." The Outpost began this year with a $615 deficit. They were granted $1,250 less than last year, from the SGA (the 1984 Outpost allotment was $10,650, this year's was $9,400) and according to Mahony printing costs continue to rise. "Over a period of three years the bids have increased by $150," she said. Taylor Publishing Company bid this years' book at $13,000. Tammy Mullins, Outpost Business Manager, said she and her staff had sold $2,255 in advertising. However, $915 of that figure is not certain because some ads were not delivered before the

Portuondo says “main thrust” of interview missed

The most unfortunate thing that appeared in the newspaper last week was supposed to be that a major in foreign languages could major in a field at GVC. It may, too, be that the CVC community may rest assured that if they want to major in foreign languages, they can have permission to do the needed work. Unfortunately, cold will be present long enough and intellectually involved and intellectually stimulated.

The Outpost

Doesn’t anyone care anymore?

The yearbook is a marvelous thing; it is more than a record of events and is a composite of faces. It is a window in time that everyone can return to in thought. To pretend it is not a part of that which permeates through faces and stories and spirit is an image. It is an image that the College Valley Community every day and on special days. It is memories, it is a history. Notice that the Outpost is in need of qualified staff members who have quickly responded this spring. Not a single student has applied for the position of Editor. It seems that the CVC community has also said “nobody else to do the work.”

The Position of the Editor in the Outpost is a very important one, it involves the most, it involves the most; applicants complete and asks for, it is an opportunity, representing organizational capacity, creativity, dedication. And work. Surely CVC has a few students with these qualities who care about and want to work on this publication.

Kilgore said that the problems were problems of communication. "I don't think you could talk to the college about it. Not even they have ever had the opportunity to come here and talk about it."

Kilgore is not eligible to apply for the newspaper, she said, because there is a two-year time limit on the job. Kilgore believes it is an important part of the role of the student newspaper. "If I was running the newspaper, I think I could have some good ideas for it," she added. "I think it's important to have a student newspaper."
Sheldon compares traits of flower child to Durang's play at colloquium

By Martha J. Hall

On Wednesday, April 18, Sheldon, instructor in physics at the College in the Chip of Alle Folks, lectured to the Faculty in the Chip of Alle Folks on "The Flower Child." His paper was entitled "The Flower Child," which is a title proposed by Colleague in the Chip of Alle Folks.

The Flower Child, as Sheldon noted, is a character in Christopher Durang's play "The Baby with the Flower in Her Hair." Sheldon discussed Durang's play as an example of narcissistic society.

Sheldon believes that the Flower Child represents the flower children of the 60's. The Flower Child, like the flower children, was perceived as a symbol of innocence, disillusionment and renewal.

Sheldon noted that the Flower Child in Durang's play is seen as a symbol of the flower child. Not only was the Flower Child a symbol of the flower child movement, but the Flower Child was also a symbol of the flower child movement in today's society.

Sheldon concluded that the Flower Child, like the flower children, is a symbol of the flower child movement of the 60's. Sheldon noted that the Flower Child was a symbol of the flower child movement in today's society.

The brothers of Alpha Delta Chi, the underclassmen who recently elected officers: President, Mr. Mark Johnson; Treasurer, Mr. Randy Foster; and Secretary, Mr. Tom Breckenridge; each spoke at the meeting.

The meeting was called to order by President Mark Johnson. The first order of business was the election of officers. The following officers were elected:

- President: Mr. Mark Johnson
- Treasurer: Mr. Randy Foster
- Secretary: Mr. Tom Breckenridge

The officers were then sworn in, and the meeting adjourned.

Cavs hold 3-17 overall record

By Allan K. Lovelace

Following the games played April 8, the Clinch Valley Cavs baseball team record as of April 10 was 3-17 overall.

The Cavs lost both games of a doubleheader last Saturday to Alice Lloyd. In the first game, with Jimmy Benson pitching, the Cavs lost 6-1. They lost the second game 15-4 with Mike West and Kenny Atkins on the mound. "I'd rather forget about it...we were terrible," said coach Bruce Lowe on his second of the two away games.

Against Northern Kentucky the Cavs dropped the first game of a scheduled doubleheader played away last Monday. Jace Cuje pitched six strikeouts in the 5-3 losing effort. The first game was shortened to five innings and the second game was cancelled, both due to rain. "We're playing a bunch of young people...our whole infield is (composed of) freshmen," said coach Bruce Lowe. The Cavs have dropped their last ten games, but Coach Lowe stated, "We're going to have fun—that's the main thing—that's what it's all about."

The Cavs' record in their district is 3-3, and in the tournament their record is 0-6 as of April 10. They played four games over the weekend at home, but scores were unavailable at press time. This week they play Georgetown on Tuesday and Emory and Henry on Thursday, both away.

Intramural basketball season was over Tuesday, April 9. Alpha Delta Chi finished the competition in first place; the No Names finished in second place.

Softball intramurals are planned to begin in a week or so, said Charlie Engles. Seven men's and five women's teams have already been organized for the softball competition.

Places are being made for CVC to play against other college teams. Four basketball games are tentatively scheduled to be played this month against Va. Highlands and Mountain Empire Community Colleges:

- April 18 and 25 against Va. Highlands and April 24 and 29 against Mountain Empire, away at the community colleges. The dates will depend on CVC's success in getting its teams. Each CVC Intramural basketball team captain will choose three team members to be on CVC's team, Engles said.

Tanning

Sun can be cruel deity

By Rick Widener

Sunbathers are getting more than just a tan when they are in the sun.

A dark tan bespeaks health and glamour in America, and many people will sacrifice a lot to achieve it—even themselves. With each hour in the sun, irreversible damage to one's skin by ultraviolet radiation hastens the development of unsightly wrinkles. And with each year, the sunbather increases his risk of getting cancer.

Skin cancer is the most prominent form of cancer. 400,000 estimated new cases will be detected this year in the U.S., and additional cases are caused by over exposure to the sun. Fortunately, most of these cases are curable, but they take time to treat and can be disfiguring. Therefore, sunworshippers should be in awe of their deity. But, what do you do if you still want a tan?

The best way to protect the skin is to limit exposure to the sun. A broad-brimmed hat can help protect the face and sunscreen can be applied to exposed areas. Complexion determines a great deal of tolerance to the sun. A fair-skinned, red-haired person typically burns more easily than one with dark skin, but anyone can sunburn.

Generally speaking, one hour in the morning or in the late afternoon is sufficient for first exposure to the sun. Exposure from noon to two o'clock is not recommended because the sun is at its peak. If your skin is red and tender when pressed, it's time to cool off.

If you do get sunburned, place a clean, wet cloth over the sunburn; aspin or similar tablets can help reduce pain. Wash the burn with soap and water to keep it clean. Some grease themselves with petroleum jelly, cocoa butter or even butter or margarine; this is ineffective and is not recommended.

Strenuous physical activity outdoors in the heat can cause cramps. Cramps can best be avoided by taking salt tablets along with fluids when involved in such activity.

The digestion of cramps, light-headedness, headaches, nausea, vomiting, low blood pressure, and a rapid heart rate may be experienced. In this condition, the fluid loss can be so severe that the sunbather stops sweating, losing the capacity to cool his body. Body temperature often increases dangerously, sometimes to 107 degrees or more as a result. In rare cases, heatstroke leads to seizures and death. Every year, a few long-distance runners die of heatstroke.

If you feel like you must "catch some rays" this summer, be aware of what you're doing. Be responsible in getting a tan and don't get carried away.
