The Yearbook Delayed Because of Advertising Concerns

By Joyce Amb
The need to insert some advertisements and the proposed removal of several unauthorized pictures have delayed the distribution of the 1964-65 Outpost yearbook.
Dean of Students Mike O'Donnell stated that the current delay involves waiting for the printing of an insert of ads.

Former Chairman of the Publications Committee Professor Charles Peake stated that these ads were included to "somehow eliminate the deficit that occurred from last year. The ads were not submitted to the publisher in time to be included in the bonded pages of the book. Catherine Mahony, former faculty advisor, said these ads were printed with the permission of all. In cases involved

Mahony said that last year's editor Tammy Kilgore submitted pictures for publication in the Outpost taken from different magazines without first getting reprint permission.

Mahony stated that neither she nor Peake were aware of this error at the time the pictures were submitted.

After the error was discovered, Mahony and Peake conducted discussion as to the method the yearbook should be distributed. They agreed that to distribute the yearbook with the pictures included would be "unconscionable." Mahony explained that Kilgore, Peake and herself could be sued for "assault" if sued individually.

Mahony sent a memo to the chancellor and to Mike O'Donnell, newly appointed chairman of publications, urging the excision of the pages in question.

Tammy Kilgore replied that she had to combat with "a lot of red tape" and that her hopes had been dashed more times than once.

Kilgore said that her intention behind the 1964-65 Outpost was "to show that the college is manifesting itself as coming of age and to provide CVC with more recognition as a part of the community and of the world."

Kilgore assured the student body that the yearbook will be "worth the wait."

As soon as the Outpost is available, a notice will be placed in the next Cavalier.

Several organizations participated in the 5th and 6th Annual Club Fair held in Cantzel Hall, September 11 and 12. Pictured here are Joe Bruce, Kimberlin and John Brickey, members of Alpha Delta Chi.

Editorial

By Betty Farmer

Only a few adjustments were made in the Student Government Association's proposed budget for the 1965-66 academic year before that body passed it unanimously.

Intramurals Director Charlie Engle returned $150 of the amount the SGA had initially allotted for intramural activities. Engle said he had made an arrangement with the basketball coaches that would allow intramurals to use some of the athletic department's basketballs. He said that $150 of the funds recommended to intramurals could be redistributed for that reason.

Anne Varner, representing Student Health, told the SGA that their initial offer of $5,000 was not enough to even cover the doctor's fee. That fee is $5,400 for the year. An action was made and carried to give Varner the $150 Engle had placed back into circulation, but that still did not meet Varner's request.

Looking for funds to give Student Health members of the SGA began to question the proposed recommendation of $1,500 for Cultural Activities. SGA vice president Maria Portuondo and Highland Cavalier columnist Betty Farmer fought to keep the initial $1,500 intact. But several SGA representatives pointed out that that department had made no formal request and that any funds the SGA would give Cultural Activities would be considered a "token amount." After further discussion, Portuondo conceded and made a motion that carried to give $500 from Cultural Activities and give that amount to Student Health.

Dorm policies working for some, not for others

It is a difficult question to answer: are the dormitory policies at Clinch Valley College really working?

The answer depends primarily on who the question applies to. For students who need rules to maintain the authoritarian guiding hand of their parents, the answer would have to be, in theory at least, that the new restrictions are a step in the right direction.

For those students who can handle the adjustment of moving away from home without needing rules and restrictions or have visitors, the changes in visitation policy are both positive and negative.

What do two students who wish to study together after midnight do when one is a resident of McCraray dormitory and the other is not? The resident of McCraray could leave the dorm after midnight to study with a member of security to let them back into the dorm. The two students would also be inconvenienced by the rule that requires nonresidents to leave after midnight.

For instance, what if the nonresident's room in McCraray, and a nonresident and a resident wish to study together?

The key word here is "inconvenienced." It is inconvenient to have to work one's study habits around the new dorm hours.

It is more than inconvenient, however, when individuals from outside of the college visit a freshman dormitory and cause trouble or commit crimes. It is potentially dangerous to allow unrestricted movement of outsiders into a freshman dormitory that is already terribly loud from "stereowars."

Combine those outside elements that Charles Engle, Director of Housing, stated were the source of the majority of the problems in the dormitories, together with a noisy environment, and the potential for crime increases. Remove those outside elements and enforce reasonable quiet hours, and the potential would seem to decrease.

The visitation policy changes would seem, therefore, to decrease the chance of outside elements being a problem during closed dorm hours. Why then should students of Clinch Valley College also be restricted in visiting the dorms?

If noise continues to be a problem and could contribute to an increase of the potential of criminal acts going undetected, why hasn't something substantial been done in that area?

As one student stated in the Highland Cavalier last week, something had to be done. What was done went too far in one area and did little or nothing in another.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

Eddie Ritterbusch's editorial on trash on campus (H.C., Sept. 9) had a good point but was negative where it should have been positive. He concluded by suggesting that people should not throw trash. He should have suggested that people pick up trash.

Make it a habit to pick up one piece of trash as you walk between buildings, depositing it in the first trash barrel you come to. If only a fraction of the CVC family would do that, our campus would stay clean in spite of the occasional slob who tosses his or her trash on our campus.

Trash breeds trash. If it already looks messy, it is easier for a careless person to litter a bit more. If we work to keep it constantly clean, the act of littering will become more conspicuous. I believe that will help discourage it.

Sincerely,
Bill Hooper

Sorority has quality of experience

Phi Upsilon Omega, established in the fall of 1977, was the first sorority on this campus. Since then, we have earned the reputation of excellence, for we have the quality of experience.

Phi Upsilon Omega is also very active in the community, and on campus. For example, we have donated money to the Hope House, sponsored a workshop for abused women, and given to needy families over the holidays. On campus, we have given a Valentine's Dance, a Best Looking Legs Dance, and a fashion show.

We have lots of upcoming events that you will want to be a part of, like our dance on the 26th of September. If you haven't had a chance to sign up, it's not too late; we're rushing Monday and Tuesday, September 18 and 17 in the Zehmer building.

Join us for an experience that you will always want to remember.

Sorority new and improved

The Kappa Psi Iota sorority sisters would like to extend a welcome to all members of the CVC "community."

Kappa Psi Iota plans for a very active year with such activities as a trip to the Barter Theater, attending a U.T. football game, and a spring break adventure to Fort Lauderdale!

New pledges are always welcome, and we urge you to stop by our rush table or contact any member so you too can become involved in the new and improved Kappa Psi Iota sorority.

The officers are: Nancy Rasnake, president; Barbara Street, vice-president; Robin Phipps, secretary; Donna Austin, treasurer; Mary Merricks, historian; Anna-Maria Gill, chaplain; Amy Clark, pledge mistress.

Alpha Delta Chi fraternity painted over their once vandalized Greek name, but have decided to return their name to the wall.

Fraternity project vandalized, but will not deter Alpha Delta Chi

By Carol Troutman

All it took was one thoughtless, inconsiderate act to ruin work which took days of planning, preparing, and laboring on the part of many.

The wall at the Hurricane intersection about 1 mile from Clinch Valley College is a symbol of unity between our college and the community of Wise. CVC's Alpha Delta Chi fraternity took the initiative to repair the entire wall this past Spring, only to have their work and the wall vandalized soon after completion. The wall was completed near the end of the spring.

Kenyan historian will visit C.V.C.

E.S. Atieno Odhiambo of the University of Nairobi and David Cohen of Johns Hopkins University will visit the University of Virginia's Clinch Valley College.

Odhiambo and Cohen will discuss the work of Kenyan novelist Ngugi Was Thiong'o with students in a special humanities course studying black culture. The discussion will be at 4:30 p.m. September 23 in the Chapel of All Faiths and the public is invited to attend.

The discussion will focus on Ngugi's third novel, A Grain of Wheat. The novel presents the impact of the Kenyan struggle against colonialism upon individual Kenyans.

Ngugi is recognized as one of Africa's outstanding novelists. He has most recently earned praise for Petals of Blood, a novel which critiques the African political elite which has emerged since independence.

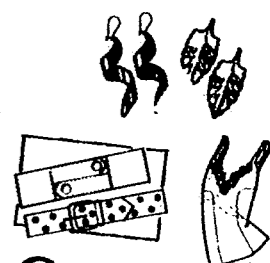

Cohen is professor of Atlantic history at Johns Hopkins University.

Odhiambo is a citizen of Kenya and senior lecturer in history at the University of Nairobi. He earned a B.A. degree with first class honors College in Uganda and a PhD in history at the University of Nairobi. He has taught at the University of Nairobi since 1970 and has been a research scholar at St. Xavier's College, Oxford, Hoover Institution, Cologne University, Germany.

McPheron winner of District Fair Pageant and SVEA honors

By Megan Cline
Clinch Valley College is becoming well known for having some of the prettiest and most talented girls in the state of Virginia. Kimberly Johnson, the reigning Miss Virginia, 1985, was a CVC student, not to mention several former Miss Lonesome Pine winners from CVC.

Mary Beth McPheron, an 18 year old sophomore, attending Clinch Valley is no exception. McPheron was chosen the winner of the Miss Virginia/Kentucky District Fair Pageant on August 14.

But McPheron, like many CVC women, also has that winning combination of beauty and brains. She was the first freshman to be elected to the executive committee of the Student Virginia Educational Association (SVEA).

She traveled to Williamsburg where she competed against six or seven other students and came out a winner! She says that the SVEA is an organization for college students majoring in Education that keeps them informed with newsletters and information about salaries and other topics that affect teachers and education today. McPheron is the vice-president of the SVEA here at Clinch Valley College.

In January, Mary Beth will travel to Charlottesville to compete in the Miss Virginia State Fair Pageant where she will represent the Lonesome Pine district. McPheron said she enjoys horseback riding, cross-country, and swimming. She says that in the future she hopes to acquire a teaching position in the Wise County School System, get married and have a family.

Budget recommended

Earlier in the meeting, Sandy Rasnake, Editor of the Outpost, inferred she was not satisfied with the SGA's recommendation. Rasnake told the group the Outpost had already contracted with a publisher for over $13,000. She alluded to the fact that the SGA's recommendation of $9,150 plus a projected ad revenue of $2,000 would not cover the printing costs. The SGA did not, however, recommend that the Outpost receive more money.

The SGA will refer their $75,000 budget to the Student Activities Finance Committee for final approval.

The chairman of that committee, Clayton Willis, said the $75,000 the SGA was given to distribute was a portion of the total projected revenue the college expects to raise from the $120 activity fees each full time student pays.

Of each $120, $50 is given to the SGA. The other $70 goes toward operating and paying bonds on the Student Union Building.

The total projected amount the college expects to raise from activity fees, based upon enrollment, is $180,000.

Of that amount $75,000 is given to the SGA for distribution and $105,000 goes toward operating and paying bonds on Cantrell Hall.

Willis said that taking $70 from each $120 is a predetermined, fixed amount. That figure will not change during the expected twenty years it will take to pay for the Student Union Building. Should activity fees be increased, the SGA would receive the increased amount for distribution. For example, if the fee were raised to $130, the SGA would be allotted $60 of each fee.

Clinch Valley student attends summer seminar at Rutgers

"the politics of Aristotle, the Federalist Papers, De Tocqueville, and John Dewey." The class met in a number of key cities in America's history, including New York and Philadelphia. Professors and guest lecturers at the seminar hailed from several of the Ivy League schools, such as Boston College and Princeton.

But Kevin was not overawed by his peers during the special program last summer. "It was no tougher than Clinch Valley," Kilgore reflected, "if it was as tough." He said that Clinch Valley College's smaller teacher-student ratio has afforded its participants opportunity for individualized attention and comment from professors that would certainly be lacked at a larger institution. The most stunning idea Kevin garnered from the seminar was one of the need for a broad view of democracy, of general politics, by those taking a look at the notion to a greater extent. "America is not as homogeneous as we're told," Kilgore said. "People in different regions have different political attitudes. As we move toward a geographic view of this country, we can develop practical ideas as to make what I've learned from my experience, is that we're not stuck behind the starting gate. Every opportunity that is available to others is also available to us here. We can all feel more satisfied with our situation, whether we're at CVC, Mountain Empire Community College, or UVA. It's up to us what we make of ourselves."

In the program, Kevin was required to do three topical essays, and had the class for two hours each day, four days per week.

He applied for the program last year, and was one of 15 students accepted from across the nation. The program's directors rated applicants on grade point and a written essay in which applicants told why they felt they could benefit from the seminar on Democracy.

Kevin will receive his Bachelor of Arts Degree in Business Administration with a concentration in political science. After graduation, he hopes to pursue a career in banking or continue his education in the field of commerce.

Students will tell tall tales

Students will tell Appalachian tales, play mountain music, and sell refreshments at the 17th annual Appalachian Days celebration September 20-21 at the University of Virginia's Clinch Valley College.

Students will participate in two sessions of Appalachian Tale Telling from 3 until 5 p.m. and from 7 until 9:30 p.m. on September 20 in the Zehmer Building on the University of Virginia's Clinch Valley College campus. Tale-telling festivities will be highlighted by the performances of Doc McConnell and his "Old Time Medicine Show," and blues singer and tale-teller Sparky Rucker.

Clinch Valley College student Rob Mercure is scheduled to play mountain music at 5 p.m. during the day-long Dock Boggs Festival September 21 on the CVC campus in Wise.

Student organizations will sell cold drinks, hot dogs, popcorn, and other snacks during the September 21 Festival.

We are human and in the process of becoming

Warren H. Wattenbarger
Wesley Foundation Campus Minister

The question of identity can be a serious one. More than one young person and more than one older person have been unsure of his/her identity.

"Who am I?" they ask. The search for the "real you" can be most painful, even agonizing. It is most important to find out who we are. Of course, we can give our names, tell who our parents are, where we live, where we went to school, the job we do. But sometimes the real question bothers us: Who am I in the scheme of things? Am I just a psychological-chemical specimen; just a kind of two legged creature, walking more or less upright, but essentially just another animal on this planet? Some men have concluded that human beings are just so many specimens of fairly short-lived species, with no significant origin, worth, or destiny. Here is what the Bible indicates as the view of human beings—this is a tremendous answer, "See what love the Father has given us, that we should be called children of God; and so we are. Beloved, we are God's children now; it does not appear yet what we shall be, but we know that when he appears we shall be like him as he is." (John 3:1-2). Who are you? Well, you are many things. It is true that all human beings are from the dust. We are a form of animal. Sometimes we make monkeys of ourselves and sometimes we are cross as bears, stubborn as mules, not often wise as owls. I have heard it said that what we do sometimes is for the birds. But more important, we are humans, and in the process of becoming more human. You are not just a number, or just a cog in the machine. You are a child of God and growing more mature as God's son or daughter. Do not make a mistake in your identity or in the true identity of any person you meet today. You are members of God's family. And because we are we ought to act like it.

Fraternity will try again with wall

semester 1985 and received many compliments from both the college and town communities, but after it had been finished for only about a week someone threw white paint on the part which said "Alpha Delta Chi."

The overall feelings among the brothers of the ADX fraternity are ones of outrage and disappointment.

Fraternity member Eric Valdez said of the wall, "We put a lot of work into it and we did a service to both the college and the community and wanted a small form of recognition by putting our name on the wall also. We were struck hard by it and are now trying to repair it to its original state."

One person who put a lot of effort into the ADX part of the wall was John Blair, who is not even a member of ADX. John thought enough of the fraternity to volunteer his time and talent by helping them with the wall. Mark

Johnson, the current president of ADX, said, "Not only was it a lot of work on the part of the fraternity, but we received outside help on that part of the wall. Our name took almost as much time as the rest of the wall and this act destroyed the work of John Blair. Our idea was to beautify the community and this not only hurt the fraternity, but also the community."

This project was totally funded by ADX and they are also financing the repairs themselves. John Pope spoke of the incident, "It was quite expensive for materials and man hours. Our object was to promote the college to town people and it's a shame that whoever did that doesn't take as much pride in their college as we do."

There was considerable debate over whether or not to return the name of ADX to the wall, but Sergeant-at-Arms of ADX, Bryan Musick says, "The vandal and/or vandals gained nothing from this and this will not deter ADX from further community services. Our name will be returned to the wall because we take pride in our organization and our projects and will not give in to vandalous efforts on the part of others."

Because the incident occurred right at the end of spring semester, ADX was not able to start repairing until this fall, therefore leaving the act of vandalism there for all the community to see for the entire summer. While it is certainly a regrettable incident one can only hope that others will learn by this childish, immature act.

In this year's series, Pro-Art will present opera in October. The Pittsburgh Opera Company will perform Carmen for the general public and perform the children's opera The Toy Shop in all middle schools in the county.

While in Wise County, Craft will present public concerts in addition to classroom performances.

Inexperienced tennis squad faces difficult schedule this season

By Mike Wright

Although faced with a very difficult schedule and a relatively inexperienced team, Coach Daniel hopes his men's tennis squad can improve on a 4-6 worksheet of a year ago.

As was the case last year, the 1986 squad will still be featured as a basically young team. But because of the experience received last year, the team, taken as a whole, should see marked improvement, Daniel said.

Coach Daniel, however, feels that on an individual basis his team is somewhat inexperienced. According to Daniel, individual players "haven't had the opportunity to play against top players." He is quick to mention, however, that this problem will be solved the first match.

Asked what would make this season a success, Coach Daniel said he would be "pleased" and "satisfied" if everyone played up to their potential and enthusiasm remained high.

Daniel has indeed set high goals for this year's team. He does, however, realize his team will win some matches and lose others. "The number of matches we win," he said, "will depend on the amount of improvement from now until late March.

Although experience is in short supply, this year's team will feature four seasonal performers: Tom Baker, Rusty Necessary, Greg Lawson and Todd Breeding.

In addition to the four returning lettermen this year's team will feature three promising freshmen: Roger Whited, Andy Matney and David Still. Matney captured the Region D singles championship earlier this year.

The actual season for the men's tennis team doesn't get underway till the next semester (spring 1986). The team, however, is currently engaging in preseason practice sessions. Anyone interested in trying out for the team should contact Coach Daniel or any team member.

Cheerleaders will hold tryouts

Anyone interested in trying out for cheerleader should see Martha McDaniel in the Cashiers Office immediately. Five girls have already been chosen. Last spring Lynn Gilbert, Stephanie Slomp, Toni Foster, Amy Hodges, and Betty Farmer were selected as part of the 1985-86 squad. These girls went to camp at Virginia Tech this summer and have brought back great new material. All new cheers will be taught during tryouts.

Tom Baker and Rusty Necessary are gearing up for their third season as doubles partners. Here, Necessary looks on as Baker hits a winning backhand volley.
