

Last week's forum held in the chapel was a time for questions and answers. Lane Cooperrider (above) expresses his concerns about the proposed mandatory meal plan.

Meal plan

Variety of opinions voiced at forum

By Fletcher Dean

Saying that he didn't want the students to think he had made a decision without consulting them first, Chancellor Moomaw Tuesday solicited opinions on his proposed meal plan.

In what he termed a "student town meeting — New England style," Moomaw heard about 40 students express both skepticism of and support for his mandatory food plan.

The most negative remarks Moomaw encountered came from the apartment dwellers. Vocalizing their displeasure, they reproached Moomaw's proposal to require them to buy a meal ticket.

"We are not totally against it," explained Lane

Cooperrider, a student who lives in the kitchen-equipped apartments. "But we want to retain our right and privilege of cooking."

Moomaw conceded that the apartment dwellers had an argument, but refused to abandon his position. He did imply, however, that if the plan wasn't mandatory for the

'Proposal' seems more than a proposal

By Fletcher Dean

Replying to a student's complaint about small portions of food in the present cafeteria, Chancellor Moomaw, at the recent meal plan forum, said that next year small portions won't be a problem.

That statement, along with other actions by the college seems to suggest that

Tuesday afternoon's session seeking input from students concerning the food plan was intended more as persuasion session than an information gathering process.

Chancellor Moomaw has flatly stated that a decision has not been made, but the statement offered above seems to indicate that the "proposal" is more than a proposal.

"I sometimes think that when they (the administration) come to us they've already got their minds made up," said one student. "They just want us to agree with them."

That sentiment has abounded recently as students have become

Minority allege Clinch Valley College environment confining

By Fletcher Dean

Blacks at Clinch Valley are forced to live in a caged environment, according to one black student. "We can't go off-campus because we're afraid," he said. And later added, "That epitomizes what you'd call a caged environment."

To support his argument, the student described a recent event that happened to him. At a local bar, he said, two people approached him in a manner that they were going to beat him up. He said they threatened him with violence, saying "Dead meal" as he tried to leave the bar.

He said that to leave the bar, he had to get help. "For me to get out safely," he explained, "I had to be escorted by my friends." His friends were other college students from CVC.

The student claims that the incident at the bar was a direct repurcussion of the fight which occurred on campus Oct. 24. He said the fight was only a fight at first but later developed into a racial problem.

The student also claims that what was an on-campus problem has now spread into the community so much that blacks are scared to leave the campus grounds. He says that something needs to be done.

"Black people cannot live on this campus and be afraid to go off-campus," he said. "Unless something is done by (campus) administration or an off-campus authority, it's going to have bad repercussions," he claims, "and then, somebody on campus is going to get hurt."

George Walton, President of the Alliance for Black Culture, when asked if black students were afraid to go off-campus replied, "That's true. Definitely."

Walton also agreed with the student that the administration needs to do something. "I think the school needs to make a statement that such-and-

Meal plan part of 'experience' at CVC

Chancellor Moomaw is looking after the business of Clinch Valley College, and in an attempt to improve campus life, he has proposed a mandatory meal plan. The plan, as reported, states that if 300 students participated in the plan, the food selections and the management of the cafeteria could and would be improved.

I support a meal plan. In my opinion, Moomaw's proposal recognizes the major weakness of the cafeteria's present meals—lack of variety. And we know that in order to make improvements a certain number of students must, REGULARLY, eat at the cafeteria.

The cafeteria is an underdeveloped, underused, division of our college. Nevertheless, no management could provide any better low-cost meals with the present participation. We have a problem.

Cost is our problem, and we need to focus our attention on the cost to the student—and to the college. While I do not believe that every division of the college can, or should, be profitable, costs do have to be justified.

The cost of the meal plan for the student would be $500-600 per semester. With 300 participating, the college would have enough income to provide delicious, nutritious meals.

How will the additional semester cost affect future CVC enrollment and on-campus living? Also, what would the cost be per meal for non-resident students and guests?

Along with the cost, we need to look at the attitudes and life styles of today's traditional student. In the past, students (and their supporting families) have appeared to be willing to mortgage their futures to meet present college needs. Does today's student have this attitude? Or would he prefer to have a less traditional college life with fewer costs so that he does not have to borrow against his future?

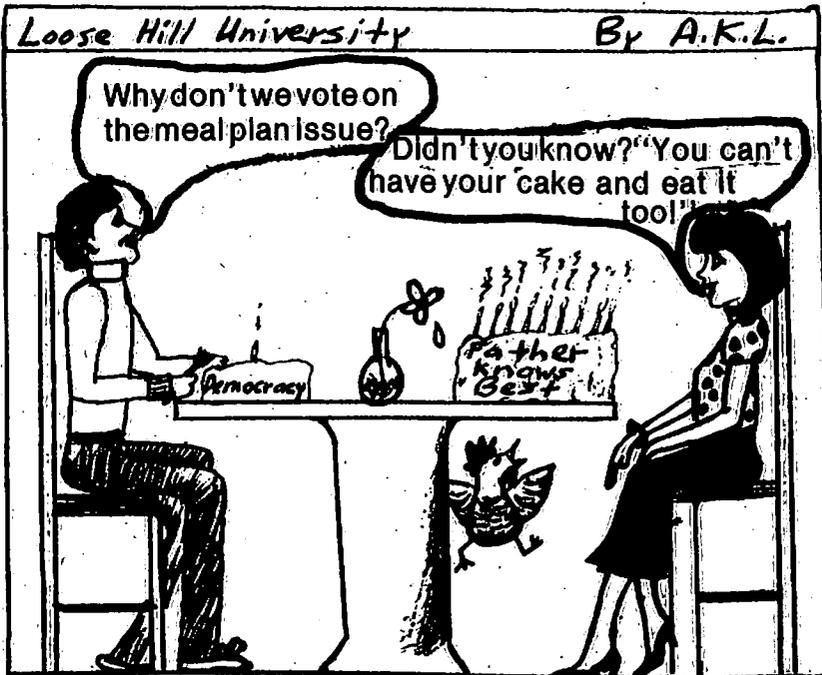

We have chosen to be part of an "experience" at Clinch Valley College. Do we have a right to reject the cafeteria part of campus life? I don't think so. I've asked several residents and non-resident students how they feel about the plan. Most of CVC's resident students have grown up on McDonald's fare, not Mom's apple pie, and cafeteria foods are as foreign to them as the idea that dining at a cafeteria is a social event. Perhaps their high school cafeteria left a bad impression.

In talking with students, I learned about these concerns: 1) location of cafeteria, 2) the atmosphere, 3) top-sided tables and chairs, 4) some "good cooks" are needed to be involved in discussing ways to add "spice" to the present fare, and 5) the music.

Yes, what about the music; why is it quiet? One student thought it was quiet because "students could not agree on what to listen to." Ridiculous!

Chancellor Moomaw's plan for the cafeteria—our college life—is reasonable; there can be positive benefits for students. Let's willingly participate in all of our college life. The SGA represents us well. I am sure that they are more aware than I of the resident students' needs, but urge them to help finalize the Chancellor's plan.

Team wants unbiased referees

To the Editor:

With the end of intramural football season, we have the same controversy that has existed since the beginning of the program. Officiating any event of this nature always evokes some questions, but the current system (which uses students as referees) makes the situation worse.

The team size was limited to only six players this year, in an effort to tone the game down. Proper officiating would have had the same results. Sanctioned, professional referees calling the games would ensure unbiased decisions, and provide the proper authority (now missing) needed to control the event. Enforcement of the rules and professionally unbiased officials is the answer to all of these problems.

'Luisa Fernanda' and 'Havana Sings' rousing performances

By Martha J. Hall

A love triangle encompassed the plot of the Selections of the Spanish Zarzuela LUISA FERNANDA, which was performed by the Spanish Repertory Company before a large audience at CVC.

The Spanish Repertory Theatre Company of New York provided some excellent Spanish entertainment this past week. The company performed Selections from the Spanish Zarzuela LUISA FERNANDA Tuesday afternoon in CVC's Greear Gymnasium and "Havana Sings" Tuesday evening at J.J. Kelly High School.

The singers captivated the audience with their energetic narration of the story of Luisa Fernanda. The story takes place in the late 19th century, when Queen Isabela was controlling Spain. At this time, the country was in turmoil because some of its citizens wanted to establish a republic.

Luisa is in love with Javier, a soldier who has ambitions of going off to war and who flirts with other women. Luisa becomes engaged to Vidal, a farmer from the province of Extramadura, while Javier is away. Javier returns to Luisa and asks for her love, but she is already engaged to Vidal. Vidal, realizing that Luisa loves Javier, tells Luisa to go to the one she loves. The zarzuela was created in the late 18th century when Spanish composers combined opera with their country's rich musical heritage and produced their nationalized version of the ballad opera, based on Spanish folklore and literature.

LUISA FERNANDA was written by Federico Moreno Torroba with lyrics by Federico Romero and Guillermo Fernandez Shaw. It was first performed in 1932.

"Havana Sings" was a rousing performance of Cuban song and dance. Popular Cuban and Afro-Cuban songs and several selections from Cuban Zarzuelas, or operettas, were sung.

These productions were sponsored by the Pro-Art Association and Clinch Valley College.

Steve Mullins joins CVC as Assistant to the Chancellor

By Peter Van Winkle

On Nov. 7, 1985 Steve Mullins joined the administration of Clinch Valley College working as the new Assistant to the Chancellor. Steve graduated from CVC in the summer of '84 with a degree in Business.

In his duties to the chancellor Steve will be called on to answer mail, explain proposals and meet with parents. He'll be relieving the chancellor of some of the day to day necessities of running the college.

When asked about the chancellor Steve replied he was "concerned" that the chancellor and his policies were "being misunderstood" by students and faculty. Steve will be attempting to clear up some of these misunderstandings in his job as "a liaison between the chancellor and the campus community."

Steve will also work on chancellor Moomaw's "special projects." Steve suggested that some of these projects may include "possibly a new dorm to be started in the spring" and "possibly some type of student facility up by the commuter parking lot."

Steve is now also the Director of Alumni Relations. He expects this job to eventually "require the bulk of my time." Steve has been working in conjunction with CVC's alumni and the Poor Farm Association in updating the alumni list. He considers the alumni an "untapped" resource for contributions here on campus.

Steve will also aid the Office of Development in soliciting contributions from private foundations. Steve's function will be to "assist in writing" the fund requests.

Steve credits CVC with giving him "an ability to think clearly, write clearly, solve problems, get along with people and handle responsibility." Steve believes these qualities will enable him to "make intelligent decisions based on all liberal arts education."

Steve Mullins, a CVC graduate, is now the new Assistant to the Chancellor.

Highland Players' 'Deathtrap' will continue through Tuesday at CVC

The Highland Players will conclude their presentation of Death Trap, a well known and popular thriller by Ira Levin, November 25 through November 28 at the University of Virginia's Clinch Valley College.

Gary Dale Stemp, a nine-year veteran of the Roadside Theatre's Second Hangin' of Red Fox tour, will take the lead in the story of the playwright who plots to steal a script written by a former student. Stemp's credits include the Alabama Shakespeare Festival and the Manhattan Theatre Club Off-Broadway in New York City.

Stemp is joined by veteran Highland Players Bonnie Elosser, Jon Fawbush and Elaine Kleier.

Mahony calls Beowulf a generous king

By Joyce Lamb
Beowulf is a long remembered king among 20th century scholars because he gained immortality through generosity in an Anglo-Saxon reign. Such was the theme of John Mahony's presentation at the Faculty Colloquium November 13.

Mahony presented a paper entitled, "Beowulf: The Attitude Towards Wealth in Old English Literature." Mahony, an avid scholar of Beowulf, wrote a dissertation and three other papers on the work.
In his analysis of the folk norms that governed the proper use of wealth, Mahony stated that a miserly king "discovers that niggardliness results in the loss of his wealth; death first steals it from him; then his heirs spend it recklessly."

Mahony further stated that a greedy king sacrificed much coveted fame, "without gold to forge a bond between himself and his folk, the tribe melted from the king like snow before the summer sun."

According to Mahony, there was a "final law" that governed the use of gold. A generous king secured the loyalty of his followers; the greedy king died alone, said Mahony.

MADD hopes to make public aware of drunk driving issues

By Kim Lee
On November 21, 1985, the American Association of University Women sponsored a meeting concerned with drunk driving issues and Virginia laws. The meeting was held in the Chapel of All Faiths on the Clinch Valley College campus.

Police Force; and Paul Kuczko, Director of the Lonesome Pine Office on Youth. Each person on the panel gave a small presentation on their various relationships with drunk driving issues and Virginia laws.

Mr. Smith related to the group her experiences in starting a MADD chapter. She said that, unlike the name suggests, one does not have to be a mother to join MADD, nor does one have to be married or female. Ms. Smith said she encountered great local support from the police when she started the chapter in Washington County.

drunk driving laws and feels that the courts are doing the best they possibly can.
Sgt. Jeff Dotson spoke mainly on the clues to discovering a drunk driver. Driving excessively fast, excessively slow, and weaving in the road are prime signs of a person who has been drinking.

Paul Kuczko stated that, according to statistics, only 1 of every 2,000 drunk drivers on the highway is ever caught. He feels that drinking is a social problem and stiffer penalties are not necessarily the answer to the problem. Kuczko feels that educating the youth is a possible answer.

The program featured a panel discussion concerning the topic, and a question-and-answer period afterwards.
Members of the panel included Rosalie Smith, organizer of the Washington County Virginia Chapter of MADD (Mother's Against Drunk Drivers); Marty Large, Commonwealth Attorney; Sgt. Jeff Dotson, Wise Town

the main goal of MADD is to make the public aware of the facts surrounding drunk driving. The nearest chapter of MADD is in Fairfax, Va.
Marty Large explained how he helped combat the problems of drunk driving. He speaks to people when they first receive their driver's licenses. Large emphasized that although he does not approve of drinking by youths, he feels that when people have been drinking, they should try to find alternative ways home.
Large feels that drunk driving isn't what it used to be. He feels that public opinion, legislative opinion, and the court system have all changed. He also states that he is happy with the present

Apartment dwellers may see rent increase

apartment dwellers, they may see an increase in rent to cover the cost of utilities and wear and tear on the facilities.
Many students also were worried that the price of the meal ticket would create financial hardships for them. Sheila Cox, Director of Financial Aid, said, however, that this would not necessarily be the case.
Cox explained that those students who receive federal funds may be eligible for more money. Cox said that, currently, the Pell Grant only covers a $625 food allowance per year. Under the proposed plan, however, the total cost of a meal ticket (possibly as much as $1,200) could be put on the budget; Cox said that the federal funding would rise proportionately.

Moomaw, who stayed on the defensive most of the evening, supported his plan by saying that students shouldn't be concerned only with the monetary aspect. "Education is an investment," he said. "It's going to pay off in the long run."

Moomaw also heard several students support his proposal. Several students said that the plan would improve the drawing power of the school and make it more like other four-year institutions.

The Chancellor also expressed his desire of forming a task force to meet with a food services consultant in December. He said he wanted students who were both for and against his proposal to talk with the consultant and tell him what they would like in terms of food services. Moomaw urged any students who would like to be on the task force to contact Steve Mullins, the Assistant to the Chancellor.

Moomaw said that he wanted to continue meeting with the students on a regular basis. He said that he wanted the students to come out and express their feelings in an open and free forum.

Proposal more than it appears to be

skeptical of the "proposal."
Part of that sentiment has been fueled by the fact that the college has already contacted a food services consultant to come to the college. The consultant will see what needs to be done to accommodate an institutional food company that would be needed for the meal plan. Other actions by the college indicate that the proposal is more than a proposal. Richard Pryor stated that he had contacted four bidders for the meal plan. The college has also looked into what impact a meal plan would have on the present cafeteria workers. Also,

Sheila Cox has done research into what the effects the meal plan would have on those people with financial aid.
While the proposal is still classified as a proposal by the administration, it seems evident that it is rapidly approaching the decision stage.

Confrontation being investigated

such will be done," he said.
After the fight on campus, some felt that the administration had erred by not acting aggressively enough and by not vocalizing what had been done to the participants. "The only thing I question," said Walton, "is that no one was arrested."
Said the black student, "I don't think the administration acted in the best interest of the college." As a result, he claims that repercussions are now being felt outside the college community. "It (the racial problem) went off-campus but now it's coming back on," he said. "I have to live here and I'm not comfortable."

Steve Mullins, the Assistant to the Chancellor, said that the Administration was aware that blacks felt uncomfortable in the community. Mullins also said that the alleged incident at the bar was being investigated by Dean of Students Mike O'Donnell and Chief of Campus Security Frank Colyer.

Mullins said that "if it is some of the same participants (that were in the fight on campus, Oct. 24) then we will deal with them unmercifully."

Rasmussen to speak on Virginia architecture

William Rasmussen, assistant curator of American art and coordinator of special programs for the Virginia Museum, will speak on "Classical Architecture in Colonial Virginia" in Wise on November 25, 1985.
His lecture, to be at 7:30 p.m. in the Chapel of All Faiths on the Clinch Valley campus, is sponsored locally by Pro-Art Association and Clinch Valley College. Rasmussen will discuss the grace and grandeur of such houses as Westover and Mount Airy, which made Virginia's colonial architecture "a cherished part of our history," he says.

Through a survey of selected monuments still standing and a few that remain fit only for the archaeologist, he will explore the inspiration and explanation behind Virginia Georgian design.
He has contributed scholarly articles to "Palladian Studies in America," "McMillan Encyclopedia of Architects," "Antiques," and "Arts in Virginia."
There is no admission charge for the lecture.

College will cover the 1984-85 Outpost deficit

By Fletcher Dean
 Chancellor Moomaw indicated Thursday that the college is willing to give up to $2,050 to the Outpost at the end of this year to cover the deficit acquired in the 1984-85 year.

over from last year," Moomaw said. Moomaw explained that if the Outpost has not covered the $2,050 deficit by the end of this year, the college would take up the slack. The Chancellor did not indicate what, if any, action would take place if the yearbook does not meet its financial obligations for the current year but said, "We anticipate that the yearbook will be able to cover their expenses."

Linda Conley, Outpost advisor, said that she thought the yearbook could meet its expenses this year. "Yeah," she said, "We're going to make the money." She stated, however, that she has not yet seen a financial record.

In reply to a plea from Outpost Editor Nancy Rasnake, Moomaw agreed to help the yearbook from its financial woes.

"The college is going to be willing to cover the $2,050 left

Moomaw said that the Conley said that in the future, for the Outpost to survive, there has to be some changes. One thing that she would like to see is a fixed dollar amount from the SGA budget. "I want it set up so that the student fee is an X-number of dollars for the yearbook," she explained.

Conley also indicated that, in the future, the yearbook may be smaller to help cut expenses. "There are a lot of ways that pages can be cut back for this school," she said. "I suspect that will be what we'll do."

Conley also said that the college will be required to buy the yearbooks they use for recruiting purposes in the future. "If the Outpost is expected not to operate in the red," she explained, "we can't give gifts."

Earlier this year, at an SGA meeting, Rasnake said that the 1985-86 yearbook deficit may be as high as $4,400. Over $2,000 was carried over onto the books from last year's annual under the direction of Editor Tammy Kilgore.

Scholarship available for computer science majors

A scholarship for up to $5,000 for students enrolled in a computer science or computer technology program in a four-year college or university is being offered by International Computer Programs, Inc. of Indianapolis, Indiana. To qualify for the 1988-87 scholarship, a full-time student must be a sophomore or a junior who is maintaining a "B" grade point average and is in need of financial assistance. Selection of the scholarship finalists will be based on the student's grades in his/her field of study as well as in electives, financial need, participation in data processing-related activities, school activities and leadership roles.

The finalists will then be asked to write a software-related essay which will be judged by a committee of data processing professionals. ICP will announce the winner in early April 1988.

"I believe that a strong future begins today in the schools and we created this scholarship to further this belief," said Larry Welk, president of ICP. The scholarship will be applied to tuition costs and educational expenses at the U.S. college or university of the winner's choice. For more information, contact the financial aid office.

Every nature has a softer side

By Jim Collier
 Baptist Campus Minister
 I could not believe it. My dash in the door, select a printed greeting and be on my way plan had been sabotaged. Where were the Garfield cards? I had grown accustomed to letting that lumpy tell-it-like-it-is tabby express my sentiments. Instead of Garfield, what do I find? The Care Bears! The Care Bears! Definitely these are bears of a different hue, pastels, too. Right there in the department store aisle, I am forced to come to grips with the softer side of my nature.

There are times when even crusty Garfield needs his Pooky, his very own caring bear. Even nature has a softer side. The fall of the year is such. The colors are softer as the brighter hues fade and fall and all is earthtones. The earth is beginning a time of rest. It is easy to be depressed at the lack of color and activity. Like Garfield, we demand that things happen. We are too easily bored.

The more gentle, caring side of nature and of our nature is active, too. What seems at first passive, expends a tremendous amount of energy. Hear James on the subject, "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." (James 3:17). Like our friend Garfield, we can certainly use a Care Bear from time to time. And wonder of wonders, could we even be one?

Campus police will be easier to contact

By Debbie Shortridge

In a move that Chief Colyer hopes will make it easier for students to contact them, the Campus Police Force will relocate in the small building between Crockett and Cantrell Halls in "about two weeks," he said.

The new facility will have an outside telephone line (in addition to an extension from the College main switchboard), and the number will be published, according to Colyer.

Until the new facility is occupied and functioning, Colyer offered the following ways to contact the campus police:

During the day, the Police Force may be contacted by calling the main switchboard (328-2431). Colyer is on duty from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m., and will respond.

In the evening, or on the weekends, the Police Force may be contacted by either seeing Dorothy Harwood in McCrayer Hall, or by calling the Wise County Jail (328-3756). Officials at the jail will then contact CVC policemen via radio.

Lady Cav Freshmen

By Bob Sloan

With only four players returning from last year's squad, the CVC Lady Cavaliers will rely heavily on the talents of their four first-year players. Each of these players comes to Clinch Valley with impressive qualifications from their high school careers.

One of the guard positions on the team is held down by 5'8" Greta Triyatt, a good defensive player who hails from George Wythe High School in Wytheville, Va. In her career at George Wythe, Greta was twice chosen to the All-District Team.

Alongside Greta, 5'8" Sharon Baker fills another guard slot. As a second semester freshman who played for the Lady Cavs last year, Sharon was a member of the J.J. Kelly High School team which was regional runner-up in her junior year.

The task of backing up center Beth Hamilton belongs to 5'8" Holly Phipps, who also rotates to play as a starting forward. Before coming to CVC, Holly impressively collected 1,000 points in her three year stint at Independence High School in Independence, Va. She was a member of the All-District team in two of her three years.

Of the four newcomers, the most impressive has been 5'7" forward Bo Middleton. In the Lady Cavs' first three games this season, Bo has been in double figures against Tennessee Wesleyan and Kentucky Christian. Bo comes to CVC from Jonesville High School where she accumulated over 1,000 points and was given an honorable mention to the All-State team in her last year.

As the season progresses, these newcomers will gain experience and should make a contribution to the team.

Mens' and Womens' teams win one game each, lose two

By Bob Sloan

Both the CVC mens' and womens' basketball teams have played three games prior to beginning tournament play this past Friday. Each team has posted a 1-2 record.

The mens' team, who opened their season November 12, got off on the right foot by defeating the Owls of Warren Wilson College, 88-79. They were led by center Rob Stoss with 21 points.

The Cavaliers dropped their next two games this past week, losing Saturday to Bluefield College 79-64, and then dropping a 100-85 decision to Bristol College on Monday. The leading scorers for the Cavs in both games were Hobby Stuart with 26 points, and Bill Wendell with 21 points.

In their first two games, both played at Greer Gym, the Lady Cavs were defeated 80-57 by Tennessee Wesleyan in their season opener, and lost the following night to Milligan College, 84-68. Center Beth Hamilton was the top scorer for the Lady Cavaliers in both games.

When Coach Ray Spenilla

took his team on the road Monday, the Lady Cavs returned with their first win by topping Kentucky Christian College, 82-57. The Lady Cavs were led by Beth Hamilton and Bo Middleton, each with 24 points.

Both teams will already have begun tournament play this past Friday. The mens' team competes here at CVC in the Coalfield Progress Invitational Tournament. The Lady Cavs will have taken to the road to play in the Tennessee Wesleyan Tournament.

Intramural Championship

Alpha Delta Chi I surprise Phi Sigs, claim 40-36 championship victory

By Mike Wright

After capturing two previous consecutive flag football championships, the Phi Sigs relinquished their title Wednesday as Alpha Delta Chi I surprised the boys from out back by the score of 40-36.

Alpha Delta Chi I, participants in the final game as a result of their win over Paydirt 38-36, played inspired ball all day long. The Phi Sigs, victorious by the margin of 38-37 over Coewood Crunch, were hampered by defensive problems.

Quarterback J.P. Morgan led Alpha Delta Chi I offensively to true fashion. Morgan, a former standout quarterback at Pennington High School, tossed six touchdown passes to six different teammates. Those crossing the goal line for ADX I included Kendall Martin, Andy Matney, Joe Perry, Mark Johnson, Darrell Leuck and Randall Spears.

Eric Valdez and Leuck kept considerable defensive pressure on opposing quarterback Harry Sydow to pressure the victory.

Credit must be given to a very fine Phi Sig team. The Sigs have always had a knack for hanging tough and not giving up. The lived up to this decree Wednesday by competing to the final gun. Individual standouts for the Sigs included Lee Mooney, John Owens, Jeff Mullins, and Jeff Brickett. Mooney crossed the goal line four times and Owens twice.

The laurels of victory, however, rest in the hands of a very balanced Alpha Delta Chi club.
