

Student entertainment series

Activities undergoing changes

By Andrea L. Gonzalez
Students may soon have their own say as to what entertainment they wish to see.

A decision was made recently between the SGA and the administration to begin a student entertainment series which will allow live entertainment to be chosen by the student community, to be presented on the campus for the benefit of the students.

According to Chancellor Moomaw, the SGA will appropriate $12,500 and the administration will match the funds. This will give the series $25,000, allowing, it is expected, at least four or five good concerts or other activities which the students will select. The events are planned to be held at CVC next year.

The planning for this series is already underway. Since it takes months in advance to organize functions and to select musical groups, the student entertainment series has already been established.

According to the Chancellor, "What we are going to do is better than ever."

Although the school contributes a large amount of money to the Pro-Art Association so that the students will get free admission to the programs offered, the Chancellor feels that these programs are community events and not necessarily student oriented. This series will allow students a choice.

The handling of many other CVC activities is also undergoing change. Organizations of Clinch Valley College will no longer solicit funds as individual groups. Instead, the Office of Development will handle all solicitations and the funds will be distributed among such organizations as the Doc Boggs Festival, the International Arts Festival, and Christmas Around the

Student travels across U.S. to pursue education

By Peter Van Winkle

Elizabeth A. Baker, (Liz), is a unique freshman here at CVC. She not only traveled across the country from Seattle, Washington but she is the granddaughter of one of CVC's founders, Orby Cantrell.

When asked, "Why CVC?" Liz replied, "I had always thought about coming to school here. My parents grew up in Pound and we visited this area every year. I also wanted to be closer to my relatives, all of whom live here."

Liz plans to transfer after her sophomore year. She anticipates majoring in fashion merchandising or interior design with a major in business.

When asked what she likes about CVC, Liz responded, "I love the area. It is more laid back than a big city. I like the faculty and professors and that you get to know many people."

In response to what she doesn't like about CVC, Liz said, "I don't like all the gossip," and, "I don't feel like I can go to the administration if I have a problem."

Liz originally lived in McCrory Hall before being allowed the privilege of moving into the new apartments. Liz cited her reason for the change as, "The rules to live were more strict than the rules enforced by my parents." Seeking more privacy and security, Liz now lives in the Wise Inn.

Faculty meeting

Fund-raising discussed

By Martha J. Hall

Student activities appear to be high on the list of CVC's priorities for the 1986-87 school year as indicated at the February 4 faculty meeting.

Chancellor Moomaw said that the planning for next year's student activities had already begun with the establishment of a student concert and entertainment series. This series is being funded jointly by the SGA and CVC. CVC agreed to match any dollar amount up to $12,500 from the SGA.

Moomaw said that the students will be in control of the fund, but will be advised by Dean of Students Mike

O'Donnell. Concerning the monies appropriated for the concert and entertainment series, Moomaw said, "I want to do what they (the students) want to do."

Moomaw expressed the importance of launching student events early, if we wanted to hire good entertainment. He also commented to the faculty that they and he should "brace ourselves for some lively entertainment on the part of the students next year."

According to Moomaw, CVC has decided to consolidate its fund-raising process in the Office of Development, which may affect some annual events, such as the Doc Boggs Festival and the International Arts Festival, that have been held at CVC in the past.

In regard to Pro-Art, Moomaw stated that CVC has not abolished the program. He said that Pro-Art and CVC have never been connected. He commented that CVC wanted to discontinue providing in-kind contributions to the Pro-Art organization. He also stated that in the past, CVC has given

Letters to the editor

Student alleges injustice

Dear Editor:

I am a junior here at Clinch Valley College and I am writing because I feel that a grave injustice is being committed against the students and their rights as members of this college community.

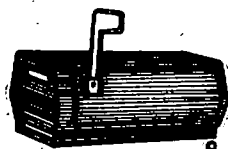

Personally, I have suffered from repeated acts of theft and have received no support and/or action from the administration, but rather I have been downgraded and thoroughly chastised for voicing my displeasure about the way the school has handled these crimes. And although it was in October that I first requested a lock be put on my bedroom door, it was not until January that I was informed that the school could not afford locks for the doors. Therefore, I was forced to move to another location on campus because I had so many items stolen since my very first request for a lock.

As a junior class representative of the Honor Court of CVC and a firm believer in what our honor system stands for, I felt it only right to discuss this problem with Chancellor Wilmer Edmund Moomaw, and to inform him of my intentions to bring the situation to the attention of the public if the college still refused to take action. His response was, "If you want to embarrass yourself and the school, go ahead." He also told me to be sure to include in my letter that I am a member of the Honor Court, but I cannot just accuse someone without any proof and the school will not do any type of investigation into the matter.

I doubt that this letter will do anything to get my belongings back or to bring the thief to justice, but I feel that the student body should be aware of this college's obvious inability to get their priorities straight. There is now an attempt to raise $400,000 for a new home for the Chancellor. I feel that before any such funds are raised for this project, that the college should be able to provide its students with some protection. However, I was told that locks for doors cannot be afforded, but $400,000 is in the process of being appropriated. Also, the majority of professors are underpaid. Shouldn't the school appropriate funds for such necessities rather than to have one individual living in luxury?

Sincerely,
Rebecca A. Wells

Editor's note: Chancellor Moomaw was given an opportunity to respond in a Letter to the Editor, but declined to do so.

OPINION

SGA proposal to the Chancellor would allow alumni in Papa Joe's

A proposal to allow alumni to visit Papa Joe's has been submitted to the Chancellor by the Student Government Association. Chancellor W. Edmund Moomaw should be commended for indicating to SGA President Rusty Necessary that he welcomes the proposal for his consideration.

In an interview with the Highland Cavalier on Friday, Necessary outlined the main points of the proposal. Former students who graduated with either a two or four year certificate from CVC will be classified as alumni of the college and eligible to patronize Papa Joe's in Cantrell Hall.

The proposal states that eligible alumni who wish to visit Papa Joe's will be issued an identification card free of charge from the Office of Alumni Affairs. The card will allow alumni and their spouses to enter the pub and consume beer. The card, Necessary said, will be like a "business card."

According to the proposal, alumni who violate acceptable rules of conduct will be required to "lose all privileges" in visitation rights to Papa Joe's.

The proposal was submitted as a modification of the rules stated in a January 30 memorandum issued to "Students who patronize Papa Joe's." Rule number three stated that "Only current students, faculty, and staff (and their spouses) are permitted in Papa Joe's."

If this proposal is accepted by the Chancellor, a potentially serious problem may be avoided. Alumni of CVC contribute much to the College in the way of financial and other kinds of support. One other consideration that ought to be examined is that the students who currently patronize Papa Joe's (except for transfer students) are all hopefully future CVC alumni.

Point Blank

Point Blank is a weekly guest column on topics of interest to CVC.

Lives were not lost in vain in shuttle tragedy

By Richard Peake

It was a horrifying, numbing spectacle.

It was the more startling because we have become used to technological space-age miracles, yet we should keep in mind that the men and women who died in the space shuttle knew that they were taking great risks. Those who explore the unknown expect to encounter dragons.

The explosion of Challenger last week will no doubt bring renewed calls for ending the space program. We should not heed these demands.

When I watched the shuttle disaster replayed time and again on TV, across my mind flashed the image of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., which I visited for the first time recently.

The day that I visited the memorial to those Americans killed in Vietnam was cold and gray. A dark day is no doubt the best time to visit this memorial. Down the street, the national Christmas tree and other decorations announced a joyous season, but the visitors to the long black-marble monument were solemn and spoke in hushed tones.

An old man in a wheelchair sat quietly crying as he stared at the names engraved in the marble. Volunteers stood near the center of the memorial's apex handing out brochures and lending books to help visitors find names on the memorial.

These names offer a cross section of America. Side by side with names like Serrano, Altbule, Brodtkardt, and Kirschner are those such as Boggs and Miller that ring more familiarly in Southwest Virginia ears.

Looking at the memorial and those grieving there, I was thankful that my two sons came of age after America's involvement in Vietnam warfare had ended. It must be difficult, I thought, to know that a son died in jungles half-way around the world in an enterprise as useless as our Vietnam adventure proved to be.

How much more worthwhile our space adventure has shown itself. It has produced advances in medicine, photography, weather forecasting, mineral location, and most important-knowledge of the universe. The space program has benefited all mankind.

Certainly, the seven who died in the Challenger deserve a memorial, but a continuing space program would be more fitting than a monument of stone.

The original Vietnam Veterans Memorial was so controversial that a second, more traditional monument designed by Frederick Hart was added to the stark original design in black marble by Maya Ying Lin. The three figures in the second monument seem to look sadly down upon the marble upon which the names of the Vietnam dead are inscribed.

They seem to wonder whether those killed in Vietnam died in vain. Have Americans learned the limits of military power? Will we remember long enough to keep our young men out of useless forays in Central America? Will we question the pronouncements of our leaders if they again attempt to lead us into war on false pretenses? Unless we can answer these questions, yes, the memorial to the Vietnam dead is as infertile as the stone in which the names of the dead are inscribed.

The best memorial for those killed in Vietnam would be our continuing recognition that American interests in Southeast Asia did not justify the enormous loss of lives we sustained there.

The best memorial to the seven astronauts who died aboard Challenger, however, would be a renewed commitment to the space program. They knew the risks they were taking.

Unlike many men who died in Vietnam, the astronauts were where they wanted to be, doing a task that they believed needed to be done. We can best honor them by seeing that the job gets done.

Professor Hooper presented lecture on metrics

By Peter Van Winkle

For the past three years, Mr. Bill Hooper of the Physics Department here at CVC has served as the vice-president of the United States Metric Association. In October, Hooper served at his last national convention in this post.

Hooper played an active role in the national convention and in his post as vice-president. At the convention, he presented a lecture to the consumer panel. His lecture dealt with his method of teaching general metric measurements for consumer use.

As vice-president, Hooper was recently in charge of rewriting the by-laws of the U.S.M.A. He also helped organize presentations for those who were awarded to be fellows of the association.

Hooper first became interested in the practicality of the metric system as a student, because all science is done using the system. When the Metric Conversion Act was passed in 1975, Hooper became actively involved with the U.S.M.A.

The U.S.M.A. was established in 1918 to introduce and to facilitate the adoption of the metric system in the United States.

Students campaign against hunger in America

The National Student Campaign Against Hunger has launched a new program to combat hunger in America, funded by a $100,000 grant from USA for Africa. The program - Action for Community Transformation (ACT) - will offer programmatic and financial assistance to student projects, as well as a summer expedition to Africa for students who conduct the most effective projects in their communities.

"We welcome greater student activism around this pressing issue," said Larry Brown, Chairperson of the Physician Task Force on Hunger in America and member of the National Student Campaign's Advisory Board. The Task Force, which is composed of leading medical and public health experts, recently described hunger in America as "a national health epidemic" that directly affects as many as 20 million Americans each month.

The ACT program will include three components:

- a professionally-staffed resource center to assist students with organizing and implementing projects;
- a speakers bureau composed of the nation's leading hunger experts; and
- an incentive fund to provide small grants to projects requiring financial assistance.

In a recent mailing to 10,000 campus leaders announcing the availability of incentive grants, Kenny Rogers, Honorary Chairperson of the ACT program, said, "In the last year, we have reached a wider audience than ever before with a very simple message: hunger is a problem that can and must be eliminated. Through the National Student Campaign, you can do your part."

"We're especially interested in projects that forge new partnerships between student groups and community organizations," observed Hope Ricciotti, Field Coordinator for the National Student Campaign. "Some of our best fall semester projects involved student-community collaboration, and we are anxious to replicate these projects at other campuses," she added.

"Among the model projects that the ACT program will sponsor are:

- Surplus food distribution. Students at Yale University arranged for surplus food from campus dining halls to be donated to local food banks, cutting campus waste to two percent.

• Advocacy campaigns. Students working with the New Jersey Public Interest Research Group (NJPIRG) spearheaded a coalition to pass a $7.7 million supplemental nutrition bill in the state legislature. The bill has passed the State Assembly and awaits Senate action.

• Community service and fundraising. Student leaders in Michigan have recruited more than 100 colleges nationwide to join them in a one-day "Hunger Clean-Up" on April 19, 1988. The event involves students volunteering for community service projects, then raising money for anti-hunger work by recruiting individual and business sponsors for their volunteer efforts. Last year, nine schools in Grand Rapids, Michigan raised $10,000 through a similar event.

"The ACT program is a great opportunity for students to make a concrete difference in their own communities," noted Katy McFadden, Chairperson of the California Public Interest Research Group (CalPIRG), and member of the National Student Campaign's governing Board. "It also should inspire massive student participation in the Hands Across America event on May 25, 1988, when ten million Americans will join hands from New York to Los Angeles to raise $100 million for domestic hunger programs."

The National Student Campaign Against Hunger is a project of the Public Interest Research Groups (PIRGs) in cooperation with USA for Africa. With statewide organizations in 25 states, the PIRGs are the largest national network of students-working with professional staff on various social action projects.

The ACT program builds on the National Student Campaign's fall program, through which thousands of high school and college students across the country organized fundraising, educational and community action projects. The fall campaign culminated in a special United Nations ceremony in November, where Walter Cronkite and Kenny Rogers presented awards to the six best student projects. The spring ACT campaign will culminate with the selection of at least five students to join a summer expedition to Africa, organized by American Scholars Against World Hunger.

Fair opens job opportunities

By Martha J. Hall

If you're a junior or a senior here at CVC, graduation is right around the corner...and so is the job market.

Unfortunately, good jobs seem to be hard to find nowadays. The Career Planning and Placement offices of CVC, King College, and Virginia Intermont College, however, may be able to help you find a job after graduation.

These three colleges are sponsoring a Career Fair on Wednesday, March 5, 1986, from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on the Virginia Intermont campus in Bristol, Virginia.

Several businesses and firms from the Tri-City area will be participating in the fair. At the fair, students will be able to meet people who will eventually be hiring for the companies they represent. Resumes will be taken by the participating companies, and some interviews will be conducted.

Some of the companies that are scheduled to attend the fair are: Bank of Virginia, Virginia State Police, First Investors Corporation, United Inter-Mountain Telephone, Bristol Newspapers, Holiday Inn, Martha Washington Inn, McDonalds, Provident Life and Accident Insurance Company, Ingersoll-Rand, IBM Corporation, United Coal Company, Miller's Department Store, and Sperry Corporation. A complete list of companies scheduled to attend is available in the Career Planning and Placement Office.

Those students who plan to attend the Career Fair should sign up in the Placement Office by February 28, 1986. Graduating students and recent graduates should prepare resumes to distribute to the companies they are interested in. Transportation will be provided on a first-come-first-serve basis, so students should sign up for this also.

Wayne Smith encourages all juniors and seniors to attend the Career Fair. Smith stated that if participation is low, the fair may not be held next year.

Larry Goldstein, Mime

Mime crosses lines of tradition, encourages audience participation

Larry Goldstein, a member of the Virginia Commission for the Arts Touring Program, will bring his mime show to J.J. Kelly Auditorium in Wise on February 18, sponsored by the Pro-Art Association and Dominion Bank.

Larry's mime show crosses over the traditional boundaries of mime into the world of the clown, the puppeteer, the actor, the vaudevillian.

Each performance combines the silent illusionary world of mime with improvisation, masks, verbal mime, and lots of audience participation. Larry has toured from Maine to the Virgin Islands bringing a lively, imaginative program to colleges, theaters, schools, and festivals. He has been a favorite, especially of those who have given up on mime as boring, exclusively for little children, or as something to avoid on the streets of the city. Like the great circus of old, this show is for children of all ages.

Goldstein began his training in 1972, while still in high school, at Street 70, now the Round House Theatre. He has studied mime with Tony Monanaro, a contemporary of Marcel Marceau, and clowning with Bob Berkly and Ronlin Foreman. In 1982 he completed his MA in Theatre at the University of Virginia. Since then he has been a member of the Virginia Commission for the Arts Tour and during the past four summers he has taught creative drama and mime at the Governor's School of Virginia.

Goldstein's program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. The public is invited and encouraged to attend. For assistance for the handicapped, call 328-2174. This program is made possible by a grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts, in partnership with the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.

Admission is $2 for students, $3 for adults. CVC students will be admitted free by showing ID at the door.

Cox will present paper on John the Baptist

Robert S. Cox, a part-time English instructor at the University of Virginia's Clinch Valley College, will give a paper entitled "John the Baptist: A Shavian Role Model," at 4 p.m. February 12 in the Chapel of All Faiths on the CVC campus. Cox, whose specialty is early twentieth-century American literature, will discuss the relationship between John the Baptist and three unconventional heroes in Bernard Shaw's plays: Eugene Marchbanks in Candida, Joan of Arc in Saint Joan, and Caesar in Caesar and Cleopatra. Examples from the plays will be provided to show that Shaw may have consciously or unconsciously relied on the biblical figure as a role model in his plays.

Cox's paper, recently published in the Journal of Bernard Shaw Society, the Independent Shavian, is presented as part of the 1986 Faculty Colloquium Series at Clinch Valley College.

Maintenance told Chancellor they can't clean both dorms and festivals

World on the basis of applications for funding.

The rationale for this decision stems from a problem of draining the community of resources. From a fund-raising perspective, the Chancellor feels that if every individual organization went into the community to solicit funds for their own group in the name of Clinch Valley College, then the next organization that approached the community with the same request for funds in the name of CVC will be told that they (community) have already donated to CVC.

The Chancellor wants to consolidate the fund-raising. With this approach, he feels that each individual would be more willing to donate more money at one time rather than be "nickled" and "dimed" so much.

Two organizations, however, have been terminated at CVC: the Creative Arts Camp, which was a summer program for youths, and the clogging program. The reasoning for the cancellation of the CAC, according to Moomaw, is two-fold: First, according to Moomaw, CVC cannot afford to support this program. He feels that the monies used for this program could be better used for academic programs. Secondly, Moomaw said, there was not enough staff to organize and maintain the program.

In the case of the clogging program, the main reason for termination was that the clogging shoes were destroying the floors in the Zehmer building, according to the maintenance department. This program, however, was terminated long ago, according to Moomaw.

According to the Chancellor, the college is considering a number of possible options for the Doc Boggs and the International Arts Festivals. Among the ideas being considered are rotating the Doc Boggs Festival and the International Arts Festival from year to year or, perhaps, holding both events on the same day.

The Chancellor said that both activities required large amounts of effort from the maintenance department for both the cleaning and the

Chancellor says delegates in favor of CVC interests

them $5,000 in cash for free student tickets.

Moomaw also commented that CVC needed more money for academic and athletic scholarships. Apparently the consolidation of fund-raising will enable the college to raise more monies for these scholarships.

Concerning CVC's progress at the state legislature, Chancellor Moomaw said that he felt "an era of good feeling in Richmond" towards CVC's budget requests. He also stated that the delegates to the legislature from this area appeared to be in favor of CVC's interests.

Moomaw said that CVC has established a new full-time position for a director of placement and student counseling at CVC. He also said that they are adding two new faculty positions for next year: a business management instructor and a computer science instructor.

In other matters, Professor of History Edward L. Henson praised Professor of English Roy Ball for getting the high school forensics meet and drama festival back on campus at CVC. Henson said that the importance of having young people on campus cannot be underestimated.

'Sweetheart' Dinner offered

The cafeteria will be serving a special dinner Thursday, February 13, 1986 from 4 p.m.-5 p.m. The special is a "Sweetheart" Steak Dinner. In order to ensure that enough food is prepared, tickets will be sold for this dinner. You must purchase a ticket by Tuesday, February 11, 1986. Tickets will not be on sale after Tuesday, nor will you be able to pay at the door. Price per ticket is $3. The dinner will consist of a 6 oz. Ribeye Steak, Steak Fries, Salad, drink, and dessert. Tickets will be on sale beginning February 5.

Fire destroys biology professor's self-built A-frame home

By Joyce Lamb
 Professor Rex Baird and his wife, Sally, left their house Sunday morning at about 10:40 a.m. They were going to church to hear the morning service. Afterwards they enjoyed a pot luck dinner at the church and visited the nursing home across the street from the college.
 When the Bairds returned several hours later, their home, located in Wise on 185 Nottingham Avenue, had burned. Lost in the fire and smoke were almost all of their possessions as well as a family pet, Rocky, a small house dog—apparently a victim of smoke inhalation.
 According to Fire Chief Jack Tolbert, the fire may have been caused by the ignition of creosote and other combustible material in the chimney. The fire, which possibly began near a flue port on the ground floor of the three story A-frame house, cracked the brick and mortar of the fireplace and spread upward to the joists of the first floor ceiling.

Although the fire stayed inside the house and did not penetrate the exterior walls or roof, Baird said the house sustained so much damage that it cannot be repaired.
 Baird, along with family and college student help, had built the A-frame himself. Baird has built or remodeled several houses and commercial buildings in the area, including houses owned by CVC faculty members R. Heise and D. Rouse.
 According to Baird, he and Mrs. Baird are presently staying at the house of a neighbor who is wintering in Florida. Shortly, the Bairds plan to move into a house adjacent to the burned home, a house formerly owned by Baird and which is "the first house we lived in when we came to Wise," Baird said.

 Mr. Baird and his wife, Sally, would like to express their thanks to their friends at CVC, the town of Wise, and local churches for their help.

Inter-faith Ecumenical Service to be held Wednesday

By Fr. Joseph D'Aurora
 Campus Minister
 A special Ash Wednesday Ecumenical Service will be held Wednesday, February 12, 5:00 p.m. at the Baptist Student Union. Inter-faith in nature, the service is being tri-sponsored by the B.S.U., the Wesley Foundation, and the Catholic Campus Ministry.
 Father Joseph D'Aurora, Campus Minister, will be celebrant; Maria Portuondo will be Minister of Music. Students from all three denominations, Baptist, Methodist and Roman Catholic, will serve as Lectors for the Liturgy of the Word. A Lenten Fish Fry will immediately follow the service at 5:30 p.m. Cost is minimum. Both events are open to students and faculty.

The Virginia Society for Hospital Public Relations and Marketing is once again offering student aid to qualified students through the VSHPRM Scholarship Program.

Offered annually, the scholarship is open to full time rising seniors and juniors attending a Virginia college or university. The Society awards one scholarship for $1,000 and one for $500 to financially aid students in their studies.

Hospital public relations varies widely from one hospital to another, but the work often involves writing, editing and design for hospital publications and advertising, photography, market research, media relations, preparing audiovisuals, and participating in fund drives. VSHPRM sponsors a state-wide internship program in hospital public relations designed to introduce students to this profession.

For more information on the VSHPRM Scholarship and Internship Programs, contact your financial aid office. The deadline for applications is March 28, 1988.

Heartbreaking losses continue for hard-luck Clinch Valley Cavaliers

By Mike Wright

The Clinch Valley Cavaliers must surely be wondering where lady luck and that elusive entity called victory are hiding after their emotional loss to Milligan College Tuesday night, February 4.

After dropping three consecutive contests by the margin of seven points or less, the Cavaliers on this occasion saw a 14 point first half lead vanish into a one point loss, 69-68.

In fact, the final four seconds in this non-conference affair provided an appropriate conclusion to another frustrating chapter in the 1985-86 Cavalier book.

With only 1 second remaining on the game clock and Milligan on top 69-68 Cavalier coach Barney Hall called time out to set up a desperation shot. Forward Hobby Stuart leaped high in the air and promptly sunk a twenty-five foot jumper from the top of the key. Here is where the jinx took its most vivid form.

The two NIAC officials ruled that the buzzer had sounded before the ball left Stuart's hand. After careful observation it appears that a judgment call may have prevented a victory for the struggling Cavaliers. The officials, in a Highland Cavalier interview, said the game clock could have read 1 second, but that the buzzer beat the shot. Did human error by the time keeper or an out-of-sync clock prevent the Cavs from winning?

After jumping out to an early 29-15 first half lead, the Cavaliers suffered a tremendous blow when center Rob Stoss was forced to leave the game with a knee injury.

"The turning point was when Robb went out of the game," said first year head coach Hall. "When Rob went out our inside game went with him."

The departure of the Cavalier big man opened the gates for the much taller Milligan contingent. As a result the Buffaloes out-rebounded the Cavs by a 21-13 margin.

With the outside shooting of point guard Roby Witcher and the inside play of forwards Trevor White and Mryln Roberts, Milligan cut the Cav lead to 39-30 at the half.

CVC began the second half slowly. It was not until the 15:20 mark of the half when the Cavaliers finally got their first bucket. The result of this dry run closed the gap to 41-38.

Milligan took its first lead of the night at the 1:13 mark when Witcher hit a twenty foot jumper from the left baseline.

After Stuart brought the Cavs within a point at 69-68, the stage was set for the disputed finish.

On witnessing his team fall to 3-12 in the KIAC and 7-19 overall, coach Hall said he was "very proud" of his team's performance. "We can't ask our men to play any harder than they did tonight," he said.

The Cavaliers were led in scoring by Stuart's 22 points; Teammates Curtis Clayborne and Les Farrar tallied 19 and 13 points respectively.

Milligan College placed four players in double figures — Witcher 18, White 15, Roberts 14 and Byron Cox 12.

King downs Cavaliers 97-93

By Mike Wright

Losses by seven points or less seems to be an unwelcome tradition for the Clinch Valley Cavaliers this year.

In Bristol, Saturday night, at the King College gym, the Tornados edged the Cavaliers, 97-93, despite the Cavaliers having five players in double figures.

In the losing effort, Curtis Clayborne tossed in 22 points for CVC. The Cav record dropped to 6-19 with the loss.

Rob Stoss added 17 points while Kelth Runyon contributed 13, Hobby Stuart 12, Winston Terry 10 and Les Farrar 15 for the Cavaliers.

On the King side of the ledger, Jeff Trigg poured in 26 points while teammate Jeff Richardson added 17, Jeff Pardue scored 13, Joey Salyer added 12 and John Mason contributed 11 points.

King, which led at the half 49-47, improved its record to 11-12.
