

Two candidates for position of Vice Chancellor/Dean interviewed

By Andrea L. Gonzalez
Two more candidates for the position of Vice Chancellor/Dean of Clinch Valley College toured the campus last week to meet with the community.

Kenneth Long, who is currently the chairman of the chemistry department of Westminster College, was the third candidate, of the seven potential replacements being reviewed this month for the Dean position.

Long said that one of the most important factors which influenced him to apply for Dean of CVC was "learning that the Chancellor is a person really committed to a liberal arts education."

Long has had previous experience in this office since he was once Assistant Dean of Westminster College. His educational background includes attending Goshen College in Indiana, receiving an M.A.T. in Chemistry from Michigan State University, and also a Ph.D. in Chemistry from Ohio State University.

In describing his administrative style, Long uses one word, "participatory." He says, "I see the Dean as someone to work with the faculty and not telling them what to do. I've learned that it's possible to work with faculty so that they improve classroom teaching. That's exciting."

Long also adds, "I think some of the experiences that I've had in other places, will be helpful...I've helped Westminster in the education program developed a college-wide internship program...and I think it can be beneficial to bring the perspective of other experiences to CVC."

George Culbertson, who is Associate Dean and Registrar here at CVC is the fourth applicant for the position of Dean. When asked what prompted him to apply for this position, he says, "Certainly my 16 years at CVC." He also adds, "I am a strong supporter of this school, the students, and what we're trying to do. This position presents opportunities to do new things. It's exciting."

Before becoming Associate Dean and Registrar, however, Culbertson was an administrator at CVC. During his 15 years here, he has been Assistant Dean for 12 of those years, and has had the opportunity to be involved in

Upcoming bids will determine fate of mandatory meal plan

By Kim Lee
Clinch Valley College is about to join the ranks of many other state and national colleges by way of a mandatory meal plan. Not only will next semester see an increase in tuition and fees, not to mention housing, but it will also see a mandatory meal plan put into effect, if things continue as planned.

According to Assistant to the Chancellor Steve Mullins, the institution of a mandatory meal plan at Clinch Valley is still not certain. He said that the contractor's bids for each meal plan must not be over $500-$800 per semester. Otherwise, there will be not be a mandatory meal plan at CVC, he said.

The Food Service Task Force met Friday, March 21, to discuss the food problem. The members of the Task Force reviewed the proposal made by Paul Cleary, the food consultant brought in to aid in the preparation of a new meal plan. It was decided by the Task Force to go ahead with the plan, as long as the bids stood between $500 to $600 per semester. Bidding for the plan has not, as of yet, been started.

The meal plan, which was proposed earlier this school year, would require that all on-campus students purchase a food plan. This will also include married students living in the trailers, and the apartment residents,

Student cost increases may force some students to withdraw

Several students of Clinch Valley College have informed the Highland Cavalier that they may not be able to continue at the College because of the huge increases of between 58-73% in the total costs for on-campus students.

The increase of 58-73% includes increases for: tuition, fees, rent, room deposits, and the mandatory meal plan. The cost of the meal plan has not been officially released by the College, however, for the purposes of this article, the Food Service Task Force figures of $1000-$1200 per year will be used to determine the total costs.

This year, the total bill for resident students was $2308 dollars which included tuition, fees, rent, and the room deposit. The room deposit is deducted from the students' bills, or is repaid to the students; half of the room deposit may be kept by the College if there is sufficient dormitory damage to warrant the deduction. Next year, much to several students' dismay, the total costs range between $3854 and $4004, depending on living quarters and meal plans. The room deposit has doubled, from $50 per year, to $100 per year next year.

If the increases are examined without taking into consideration the meal plans or the room deposits, the increases do not appear to be as devastating. According to a CVC press release, students from Virginia residing on campus next year will face only a $248 increase per year for dormitory residents, and a $398 increase for apartment residents per year. These totals are for tuition, rent, and fees, only.

It could be argued, and in one sense, rightfully so, that the students would spend a comparable amount of money for food with the mandatory meal plan as they would if they purchased and prepared their own food. It has even been suggested that a payment plan might be established that would enable students to make lump-sum payments for the meal plan. However, several students have indicated that they may not be able to make these payments. Others have informed the Highland Cavalier that they can eat with less expense by buying their own food. One student, a senior English major and a good student, is even considering dropping out of the College entirely because of the increases.

Virtually every change that involves expenses brings benefits and losses. According to Mr. Randy Gilmer, the College's new Public Information Director, the increases in student costs "will support much-needed faculty raises, increased student activities, and cover increased electricity rates," as stated in a Mar. 24 press release issued to the Highland Cavalier. However, even if freshman enrollment increases as expected by some sources, several of the students who have invested their bucks, sweat, and tears and who have been invested in by the faculty with their caring, energy, and guidance, may be forced to drop out or be forced to transfer to community colleges. Difficulties in retaining course credits - for students facing the option of transferring - raises an important question: What is to become of the students (however few or many) who will not be able to afford to pay for the cost increases and yet may not be able to transfer either and would therefore be forced to drop out of college entirely?

Also, what is to become of the college that helped develop these same students, but is now saying goodbye to them prior to their graduation?

Several students suggested that the meal plan should have been phased in, with only the freshman class being required to purchase the meal plan. If a meal plan contractor could not have been contracted with a phase-in, these students contended, then a meal plan should not have been instituted. If the College was so sure that the students will like the food, why didn't the College plan to guarantee the contractor that the entering freshman classes would be required to purchase the meal plans, and the College would guarantee a predetermined amount of money to the contractor to cover any unsold meal plans? With this plan, students currently enrolled who have already invested so much in their educations but who may not be able to afford the meal plans would not be forced to either transfer or drop out of college entirely.

CVC press release interprets student cost increases

Even though Clinch Valley College is increasing costs, it still is one of the best buys of all the four-year public schools in Virginia as well as the nation. In a state-wide comparison of the 1985-86 average costs, CVC was rated 13th of the 14 schools listed.

Public Information Director, Randy Gilmer stated that the increase in costs will support much-needed faculty raises, increased student activities, and cover increased electricity rates. The increases were recently approved by the Rector and the Board of Visitors at the University of Virginia.

The Virginia General Assembly recently approved a needed 12.5 percent raise for the faculty at CVC. Under a nationwide system of judging comparable schools against each other (called the benchmark system), CVC's faculty salaries rank 22nd out of the 26 schools. Clinch Valley has a three year goal to go to the 10th rank. In order to move to the 10th rank, CVC needs to up salaries from $25,621 this past year to $29,842. Clinch Valley is responsible for 30 of his knowledge, there have been no problems with the Office's new location. "Legally," according to Dean of Students Mike O'Donnell, "we are probably o.k., as long as we provide the service." O'Donnell indicated that he has not heard "any complaints about student health this year."

"It's not the ideal situation," admitted Nurse Anne Varner, "but I can go to where the student is" if he or she needs care. "To date," she said, "we haven't had to treat anyone who is unable to come into the office." Currently, the first floors of the Zehmer and Science Buildings, Smiddy Hall, the Library, the Theater Building, the Student Apartments, and McCrary have wheelchair ramps. The Office of Student Health is in the basement of McCrary, which requires that patients descend a half-dozen stairs. The Office of Student Health was moved from Cantrell Hall to its new location in McCrary prior to the beginning of the Fall 1985 semester. "It is more accessible to a large number of residents," Mullins said, but he also added that "the move... makes (Student Health) somewhat less accessible to commuters."

Skills to succeed in college offered

The Upward Bound Program at Clinch Valley College is now accepting applications for the 1986-87 school year. Upward Bound is a federally funded program that serves up to 60 students in its five county service area. This project helps provide students with the skills necessary to succeed in college. This includes schools in Scott, Wise, Dickenson, Russell and Buchanan counties. The project at Clinch Valley has been in operation since 1965. Tenth or eleventh graders who are interested in the program may apply by seeing their high school guidance counselor. Once an application has been completed, eligibility, according to federal guidelines, will be determined and an interview will be conducted by the project counselor. For further information, call or write the Upward Bound Office at Clinch Valley College, P.O. Box 18, Wise, VA 24293 - 328-2431, Ext. 224. The program is comprised of two components - summer and academic year. The summer component consists of an intensive six week program on the CVC campus. Students live in campus housing and attend classes designed to improve basic skills in English, math, reading, history, and the sciences. In addition to these classes, students can take supplemental courses such as Journalism, Appalachian Culture, and computer science. (Afternoons are spent in arts and crafts, tennis, swimming, music and drama classes and field trips.

Wise native to perform with Richmond Ballet

The Richmond Ballet, with Wise native Tracy Roberts from J.J. Kelly High School, will present one performance on April 8 at J.J. Kelly High School Auditorium in Wise. The Repertory Program will include Handel's Concerto Grosso as choreographed by Charles Czarny, Allegro Brillante choreographed by the late George Balanchine and danced to Tchaikovsky's third piano concerto, and Sundances, choreographed by Lambros Lambrou.

The Richmond Ballet is sponsored by Pro-Art Association and co-sponsored by The Kilne Foundation.

Concerto Grosso is Czarny's delightful salute to gymnastics and sports. It begins with four male dancers in warm-up suits, preparing for the exercises to come. The women join them, and soon they are moving through the music of George Frederick Handel while shadow boxing, skating, tightrope walking, playing soccer, and dancing the delightful "Karate Minuet" finale. Czarny is a free-lance choreographer and teacher who teaches modern dance at the Dutch National School of Dance in Rotterdam, but also moved throughout Europe, Israel, Canada, Australia, and the United States to choreograph various productions.

The audience will not see completely traditional choreography in Allegro Brillante, thought by many to be one of Balanchine's great works. The dancers purposely are not always in unison. Instead, Balanchine played with rhythm and counterpoint to create a visually exciting piece in which each dancer is extremely important. Balanchine, who entered the Imperial Ballet School of Russia at age 10 and traveled with the Soviet State Dancers before making his way in 1948 to the New York City Ballet, granted Allegro Brillante to The Richmond Ballet at his death.

Sundances is Lambrou's sensual celebration of a simpler way of life, choreographed to the contemporary Greek folk music of Yianna Markopoulou. This is an imaginative and seductive work embracing classical, contemporary, and folk dance styles. Lambrou is a native of Cyprus who began his training in his homeland, then traveled to London on a scholarship to the Royal Ballet School. His ballets have been included in the repertoires of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, North Carolina Dance Theatre, Indianapolis Dance Theatre, the Washington Ballet, the West Australian Ballet Company, Ballet Austin, The Richmond Ballet, and the National Ballet of Cuba.

One of the dancers with the company of The Richmond Ballet is Tracy Roberts of Wise, currently in her second season as a member of the professional company. Roberts trained at the Bristol School of Ballet, The American Ballet Theatre School, the Joffrey Ballet School, Boston Ballet School, the Washington School of Ballet, and the North Carolina School of the Arts. She has performed with the Young Artists of Dance from Wise, and the Oak Ridge Ballet and Intercity Ballet of Tennessee.

The April 8 performance begins at 7:30 p.m. at Wise. Ticket prices are $8.00 for adults and $3.00 for students. CVC students free. For ticket information or assistance with the handicapped, call (703) 326-2174.

This program is made possible by a grant from the Virginia Commission for Arts in partnership with the National Endowment for the Arts, a Federal Agency.

Two more dean candidates to visit CVC this week

all aspects of the academic administration.

Culbertson is a native of Wise County. He received his diploma from Coeburn High School, attended Emory

Henry for one year. He received a two-year certificate from CVC when it was still only a two-year college. He received a B.S., a M.S., and a Ph.D in Mathematics from VA. Tech and was involved in research at the Illinois Institute of Technology in 1965.

Culbertson says of his administrative style, "I would hope that I can deal with students and faculty from mutual respect. I like to understand issues before a decision is reached. I would try to work cooperatively with people. I think this produces better results."

There will be two more applicants visiting CVC this week. These two will be the final candidates. Students are encouraged to meet with these people and to make suggestions to the search committee.

Fraternity, apartment residents must purchase meal plan

as well as students living in the fraternity houses.

According to Mullins, there are three basic bids upon 19, 14, and 10 meals per week. The students living in the trailers, apartments, and fraternity houses would be required to at least purchase the 10 meal per week plan, even though they have the equipment to cook for themselves.

The administration looked upon this as a concession to these students. The other on-campus students would be allowed to choose among whatever plan best suits them.

In dealing with how to tell the difference between a 10 meal-a-week person and a 19 meal-a-week person, some form of identification will be used. One suggestion has been the use of an additional identification card, much like the cards students have now. As of yet though, no decision has been made.

According to Steve Mullins, the mandatory meal plan will aid in the developing of a college community that many feel is missing, as well as upgrading the food service situation. By allowing the students to congregate in one area, here the cafeteria, a sense of community and closeness may develop.

Since the Food Service Task Force has completed its job, Mullins said, it was dissolved and a standing committee has taken its place. According to Mullins, the purpose of this committee is to "...keep tabs on the incoming food service contractor to insure that he or she is providing quality food service." The committee, he said, will report the contractor, if for instance, french fries had been served "for six weeks" in a row that were less than satisfactory.

PID says student cost increases justified percent of the money for faculty salaries, with the state providing 70 percent.

"We of course do not like to increase the costs of getting an education, but we believe most people realize the increases are justified when they look at the benefits to be received by the students, faculty, and the College as a whole," Gilmers said.

The individual breakdown of costs includes a semester tuition increase of $48 to $552 for the 1986-87 school year. The required fees at CVC will be increased by $30 to $150 per semester for the 1986-87 school year for full-time students. This year CVC's student fees were the lowest of all of Virginia's four-year, state-supported institutions.

Part-time and out-of-state tuition also will increase. The charge per semester hour of credit for in-state part-time students will increase by $4 to $48 for part-time, while out-of-state tuition for full-time students will increase by $98 to $980 for the 1986-87 school year. Fees for part-time students will be increased $30 per semester. The student activity fee will be used solely for the purpose of student determined activities. Dormitory rent will increase from $960 (1985-86) to $1,050 (1986-87). Apartment house rent will increase from $980 (1985-86) to $1,200 (1986-87).

Required fees distribution for 1986-87, per student, per semester:

- Student Government Planned Activities — $35.
- Athletics — $35.
- Student Health — $5.

• Bond Issue — $75.
• TOTAL $150.
In 1986-87, Student Government will have approximately $54,000 in funds for student activities, more than a 60 percent increase over 1985-86. The Student Government Association will have complete control over the expenditure of these funds for student activities.

Do not create more problems than you can handle

By Warren H. Wattenberger

Shakespeare in "Romeo and Juliet," said, "Past hope, pasture, past help!"

When we are without hope then we are past cure and ultimately we are past help, unless there is hope in the human heart. Hope is what each of us need every morning when we get up. If we could just say, "Lord, this is Your day. This is Your work, these are Your opportunities and they are mine too; You gave them to me; I belong to You. Make this day what is ought to be." Then add a little prayer, "Help me to make this day exactly as I ought to be." Live one day at a time.

Some people are forced to live with misfortune. Many people are forced to live with trouble and difficulty. Had we known years ago the problems we were to face, we would have said, "Well, that is not possible!" But you see, we did not know about those things and God tells us that we only have to live one day at a time. He does not flash across the screen of life everything that is going to happen next week, next month, next year — we do not need to know that. All we need to know is that we can live one day at a time.

Even if misfortune comes and it will; even if we know trouble — and we will; you can maintain your composure amid the pressing duties of today in spite of all the difficulties that life presents if you have learned the secret of living one day at a time.

A wise professor at Emory at Oxford, Georgia used to say to his students "Do not dig up more snakes than you can kill." He was saying, "Do not create problems for yourself." That was a great statement and has to do with practical living day by day. Do not create more problems than you can really handle on a daily basis. Live one day at a time.

Bookstore management to change

By Peter Van Winkle

Next year's students could well be buying their books, sweatshirts and supplies from a private company.

Paul Cleary, a private consultant brought in by the college, made the recommendation that the operation of the bookstore be contracted out to a private firm.

According to Randy Gilmer, Director of Public Information, "The bookstore doesn't now offer all the benefits it could." Mr. Gilmer added, "A privately run bookstore could become a real asset to CVC and the community-at-large."

A privately run bookstore could offer a wider selection of pleasure books. Books not carried in stock could be ordered. The bookstore could also offer additional hours of operation as well as opening on Saturdays.

According to Mr. Gilmer, "Since a large book company can buy books in mass, hopefully they will offer lower prices."

Five potential companies have or will be submitting bids. Three of the book firms are Barnes and Kröbel, Wallace and Anderson. The last two companies names were not available.

The bookstore evaluation committee will be responsible for reviewing the bids. The committee consists of the chancellor, the academic dean, the business manager, one faculty member and one student. The committee will meet before the end of this semester to make the decision.

The new firm will take over operation on July 1.

Faculty Colloquium to be held March 31

Walter C. Crouse, assistant professor of chemistry and environmental science at Clinch Valley College, and Owen M. McIntyre, NA-CHURS Plant Food Company, have submitted the patent application entitled "High Nutrient Value Liquid Fertilizer."

The patent states the quantities of raw materials to be used and describes the manufacturing process. It is based upon research conducted and directed by Crouse while he was employed as Director of Product Research and Development for NA-CHURS Plant Food Company.

To learn more about this new liquid fertilizer, attend the Faculty Colloquium presentation by Crouse entitled "The Chemistry of Fertilizer", March 31. The Colloquium is to be held at 4:30 in the Science Building lecture hall.

Cavaliers drop first game of doubleheader

By Bob Sloan

Clinch Valley College, looking to pick up their second victory of the season, fell short Wednesday, March 28, as the Bulldogs of Bristol College came from behind to post a 5-4 triumph.

Jace Cuje, on the mound for the Cavs for the third time this season, allowed the Bulldogs only four hits in a strong pitching performance. Cuje gave up only one hit through six innings; Bristol tagging him for three singles in the seventh.

The Cavs jumped to a 2-0 lead in the third. After Bobby Tiller crossed the plate on a sacrifice, shortstop Tony Davis stole home on an inadvertent pick off play by Bulldog catcher Dean Baggett. CVC scored again in the fourth, extending their lead to 3-0.

Bristol finally got on the scoreboard in the fifth. Bulldog left fielder Wayne Lamplugold hit a towering shot over the head of center fielder Tiller for Bristol's first run and hit.

In the sixth, Bristol knotted the score at 3-3 after a throwing error by Cuje. After walking the first two Bulldog batters, Cuje, trying to field a sacrifice bunt by Bristol's Ron Knott, overthrew first baseman Charlie Gibbons. This allowed two Bristol runners to score.

After Bristol moved out to a 5-3 advantage in the last inning on three singles, the Cavs made a valiant effort to come back. Davis scored again on Len Sturgill single to pull CVC within one, 5-4. After a walk to Curtie Clayborne, Bristol brought in reliever Randy Pass to put out Arthur Mullins to seal the Bulldog victory.

Clinch Valley's record fell to 1-7 on the season.

Clinch Valley returns favor to Bristol

By Mike Wright

Roger Austin smashed a 3-2 pitch over the right-center field fence Wednesday off of Bulldog starter Cary Shumate, giving Clinch Valley College an 8-8 victory over Bristol College in the nightcap at Cavalier Field. The shot came with one man on, Arthur Mullins, in the bottom of the sixth inning and the score knotted at 6-6.

After dropping the first game of the double-header by the margin of 5-4, the Cavaliers were blessed with three base-on-balls in the first inning. A double by Bobby Tiller and a sacrifice fly by Ray Laster gave the Cavs a 2-0 lead going into the second.

But the Bulldogs struck back in the top half of the second stanza as Jaymie Jenkins tripled and Harold Watts doubled, tying the score at two a piece.

The Cavaliers, however, were not to be denied or intimidated and began to manufacture runs the fundamental way. Except for the round-tripper by Austin, long balls were indeed hard to come by. A single here, a sacrifice fly there, an occasional break or two enabled the Cavs to stay in the thick of things throughout the contest.

Cavalier starting pitcher Less Farrar ran into trouble in the top half of the fifth inning and was replaced by Austin. Austin did the job after coming in with the bases loaded by giving up only one run.

After the homer by Austin in the sixth, Mike West came in and got the save for the Cavaliers.

Tony Davis also turned in a fine offensive performance, collecting two singles and a pair of RBI's on the day.
