SGA wants vote for color change

By Pamela Norman
HC Co-Assistant Editor

Do you know what CVC's school colors are? It was surprising to find that when this question was asked of several students (including seniors), there were at least six different responses. They were all wrong! These responses ranged from maroon and silver to burgundy and grey.

For those who would like to know, the official colors are red and grey, according to Professor Edward Henson. Henson, who was the one to choose these colors, said that red and grey were the original colors of the University of Virginia before they had established a football team around 1886.

But those original colors would not be known by looking around the campus at all of the shirts and sweats that appear in colors such as green, navy, aqua, and even hot pink. The SGA hopes to have all of this confusion cleared up by adopting new school colors and establish them with the student body.

The SGA will be holding a meeting open to all students to discuss the colors and what should be done about changing them. However, if the colors are voted on for a change it would not go into effect until the upcoming Fall semester. This delay is due to the varied costs involved. One of the main concerns of the SGA is that the athletic department would lose money severely over the

CVC Classroom faces problems

By Roy Russell
HC Staff Writer

It is early in the semester and already the new concept of the "Electronic Classroom" is facing numerous problems. The problems span from a high drop-out rate just after the first class to trouble with communication between Clinch Valley College and the University of Virginia.

It seems that the biggest problem facing this course is the fact that too many people are balling out prematurely.

Bill Conley, CVC Management Professor stated, "People don't understand the concept of the classroom, and any time something is not understood there will be a certain degree of fear present."

Conley feels that it is fear that is causing the early drop-outs and that once this method of teaching is accepted there will be more interest shown in the class.

Some CVC students, interviewed by the Highland Cavalier, said that the class consisted of curriculum unknown to them, and that the class seemed as though it would present a problem to their grade point average.

On top of everything else,

The theme and colors for the Spring Formal were voted on by the SGA on February 2, 1987, in Smiddy Hall. Chancellor Jerry Cardwell also spoke to the SGA members about changing the school colors as well as issues affecting the freshmen class and the whole student body.

The SGA voted for "Love Potion #9" as the theme for the Spring Formal and the colors of black, red, and silver for the decorations. The members also considered making it a "black tie affair."

Greg Lawson informed the SGA that the confusion over the school colors had left many students and professors wanting to change the school colors. He said that the committee would research the history of the colors and then have a referendum of students on the choices. The changes would go in effect during the fall semester.

Chancellor Cardwell told the members that if the student body wanted the changes, the college would be willing to pay for the changes that would have to be made in uniforms and repainting the gym.

On January 25, 1987, the late Gilbert Willey, CVC's first principal, came to a class with the death of William Lester Wilson. This name probably means very little to most people because they probably do not understand the significance of his name to the history of this college.

William Lester Wilson received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Pleasanton College in Pleasanton, Georgia, in 1921. The following year he attended graduate school at Princeton. He also taught at Wake Forest State University that same year. In 1927, he did graduate work in England and received his Masters of Arts degree at the University of North Carolina. In 1936 he was the co-author of college English (text) in journalistic work at the University of Mississippi in 1939. He then spent 1942-1943 teaching at Marian Institute in Marion, Alabama. After four years there he went to Georgia Tech until 1950. In 1950, he taught at the University of Richmond and came to Clinch Valley College in 1954 as a member of the first faculty.

Wilson taught at CVC until 1986 in which time he made an overwhelming mark on the institution.

Wilson was the editor of the Highland Cavalier and through his efforts, the early years with the paper serving as the first student editor.

Wilson also founded a sports club, an Exotic Club and a Chess Club. Those who knew him said that CVC's best and was a man who loved to teach and the best of his traits. When he visited the busy Guilford campus, he would be the first to greet you and take you to the dining hall. He would be the first to greet you and take you to the dining hall. He would be the first to greet you and take you to the dining hall.

Mr. Wilson, we shall always remember you and with deep appreciation.

Letters to the Editor

Submitter of letter feels Pro-Art's return not received warmly by CVC students

Dear Highland Cavalier Editor:

Pro-Art has returned to CVC, thank goodness, but are we making them feel very welcome? The members of Pro-Art obviously work very hard to offer the college quality entertainment at no cost to the student — so they deserve a little respect, right?

Last Tuesday, the cast of the musical Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat performed in the cafeteria during dinner, courtesy of Pro-Art. I could barely hear them over the noise and talking of the students. It was very disappointing that I could not enjoy the performance due to the rudeness of some of the students. I would imagine that it must have been rather uncomfortable for the performers.

Since Pro-Art is going out of their way to entertain CVC students, why can't the students at least show some respect? That is all I ask of the other students. If a student does not enjoy a performance they should not keep others from enjoying it also! I hope that in the future, when Pro-Art entertains CVC, that the students will find it in themselves to show them the respect that they deserve.

Expecting the best results in achievement

By Warren H. Wattenburger
Campus Minister

Again we return to the campus of Clinch Valley College — to the Dorm life and the agony of studies. The joys and excitement of the Christmas and New Years lingers within our minds. Yet we return to the campus relaxed and refreshed even though it is in the midst of the cold January weather. We now prepare to begin a new semester in the heart of winter. Before this semester is over it will be SPRING — so expect the best.

As we journey into life let us expect the best. One day a minister was talking to a lady at the beginning of a new year and he expressed "his hope that she would have the very best year ever." She responded by saying "I expect it to be just that." The truth is when you expect it and when you work for it and set your goals, the likelihood is you are going to achieve what you want and expect.

When the semester is over, I hope that you will have studied and worked in such a way that you will take pride in looking back over this semester and see the accomplishments and achievements that you have made. How are you going to measure this semester? I hope that you will have no regrets when you come to the middle of May. I trust that you will have advanced and achieved as you had expected, and that you will have all of the joys you had dreamed of having.

GIVE YOUR BEST AND EXPECT THE BEST!

Jerry Cardwell appointed as Acting Chancellor at CVC

By Kimberly Lee
HC Editor

to teach a College Introduction class that would be attended from the Dean of Students to the Resident Assistants would Clinch Valley College entered a new era on January 5, 1987, with the appointment of Jerry Cardwell as acting Chancellor of CVC. Cardwell was appointed to the post after Chancellor Ned Moomaw resigned in the midst of controversy. Moomaw had acted as Chancellor of CVC for 18 months.

Since being appointed Chancellor, Cardwell is bringing forth the many programs he was working on while he was Dean. One of these programs is a new advisory system that will make CVC unique among colleges in Virginia, as well as add what he feels to be a more personal touch. Under this new system, an advisor would advise 15 to 20 freshmen. The advisor would also be required by his advisees. This would allow the advisor to be in continuous contact with his advisees for the entire semester.

Also, all college officials promptly notified. Cardwell feels this system will aid in student retention here at CVC.

Cardwell also hopes to open a faculty advising center which would house the academic advisors, special services, career placement, upward bound and peer counseling all in one facility. The facility would be open a minimum number of hours a week.

Cardwell is currently talking to members of the local community and is trying to reestablish ties with the area community colleges. Cardwell stated that he senses goodwill and support and he feels that with the area community colleges and CVC working together, more students will enter the realm of higher education.

He is also working to reestablish and strengthen ties between CVC and Pro-Art and the Dock Boggs Festival.

Details of rights and responsibilities to each other are currently being worked out. Cardwell feels that if they can get some set agreements on the record then each group will be able to deal with the college no matter who is at the helm.

Cardwell wants to open the institution for internal and external communication. In doing so, he feels that faculty, staff, and students should recognize that they should act responsibly. As a gesture of this open communication, Cardwell had all of the time clocks removed. He also hopes to meet once a month with the executive committee of the faculty council.

Cardwell, who is planning on applying for the permanent position as Chancellor, stated that he wants to "Keep the institution providing the same kind of quality education as it has in the past."

Honors House based on the guidelines of mutual respect

By Gary Parsons
HC Staff Writer

The Honors House at Clinch Valley College has, since its beginning, stirred controversy among students. The reason for this is that very few people know the ideas and principles behind the Honors House organization.

The Honors House, from the time of its construction, had been intended to be an honors facility, according to Garrett Sheldon, faculty resident, along with his wife Elaine. He is director of the Honors House program.

According to Sheldon, in the beginning, the college had based admittance solely on grade point average and were unable to fill the facility.

After modifying the program and taking some of the emphasis off of GPA and placing it more on finding responsible people and giving the student inhabitants more of a leadership role, the Honors House has proven a working success, stated Sheldon.

The governing body at the Honors House is not a resident assistant nor is it the faculty residents. It is called the Honors House Council and is composed of representatives from each apartment, with an elected president, vice-president, and treasurer, according to Jeff "Ajax" Mullins, president of the Honors House Council.

Mullins said, "The council is responsible for making the rules that govern the House. These rules are few and are passed for the good of the residents. There are no closed dorm hours as residents are allowed to have guests anytime they wish as long as they don't disturb anyone, and are allowed to come and go as they please." In essence the Honors House offers "Freedom with Responsibility."

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon agreed that the House operates with the simple guidelines of mutual respect and consideration. They feel that in this type of atmosphere a lot of rules aren't necessary. So far, there have been only a few minor problems, but these have been handled successfully. The council emphasizes communication and educating people in the "Spirit of the place" before any disciplinary measures are taken.

My compliments to the House."

Chancellor Cardwell continued the support saying,

"The Honors House is one of the unique and positive things about this institution, because it recognizes students for their academic and social responsibility. It is a very positive reflection on the institution."

concern over the 45-55 percent of failure rate of freshmen last semester. He discussed plans to help freshmen and students cope with college through a faculty-advisory committee. Under his plan, freshmen would be assigned one of fifteen advisors. No more than twenty students would be assigned to an advisor. The advisors would be professors recommended by the student body who are highly capable to help the students. They will be called in before anyone else if the student is having physical, mental, or emotional problems. In other words, they will be the student's advocate throughout college.

The advisors will also teach a class to their students during the fall semester called Introduction to Clinch Valley College. This class will help the students adjust and allow professors to become acquainted with the students they advise.

Cardwell announced, "We are going to open a faculty-advising center." Special Services, Upward Bound, peer counseling, and career placement will be situated in one facility. This will allow students to have a centralized location in solving any problems or questions they have. In reference to the facility used, committee member Ron Heise said, "Some thought has been given to using the apartment building on faculty row."

color change. Chancellor Cardwell noted that if the colors were to change it would not be a problem financially.

So, when this is voted upon, what will the colors be changed to? Greg Lawson, committee chairperson of the SGA, said that "A lot of students have expressed an interest in orange and blue because these are the University of Virginia's colors, while others have suggested to keep the original red and grey." Lawson also stated that "both coaches Hall and Kiminske want orange and maroon, because blue is such a common school color."

Overall, student and faculty input is needed in the decision over the color change. Lawson stated "Student participation at the meeting will decide what colors will be voted upon. If you cannot attend the meeting and wish to express an opinion, suggest your ideas to either Amy Hodges, Toni Foster, or myself before the Monday meeting."

The SGA meeting will be held Monday at 4:50 in Smiddy Hall in room 100A, and everyone is urged to attend.

CLASS

Clinch Valley students said they had received a certain degree of ridicule from the UVa. students and that they did not take the class "to be put down."

Bill Lee, Professor of Business, stated, "I don't see how anyone can make an educated judgment about a class based on only one meeting. I'm sorry that they dropped out, but that is a decision they have to make."

Conley suggested another possible reason for the high drop-out rate by stating that the class presents a case study curriculum and that CVC does not possess the same teaching methods. He suggests that this also could have scared potential students away.

Both Bill Lee and Bill Conley felt that this type of class is definitely "a step into the future," and that as soon as the problems are resolved that CVC will benefit.

UVa and CVC's search for new Chancellor in process

University of Virginia President Robert O'Neil and acting CVC Chancellor Jerry Cardwell recommended to the Board of Visitors that the search for chancellor begin now. O'Neil sought expressions of opinion from the faculty and staff about the timing of succession on his visit to CVC on January 12. O'Neil said, "While there was some support for deferring the search, preference now seems to be to proceed as rapidly as possible in recommending to you a successor to Mr. Moomaw."

asking him to resign.

O'Neil commented on all the new programs at the college and how the close ties between the University and the College have been strengthened, including closer links with the Continuing Education Center in Abingdon (where a branch of Clinch Valley College has been established).

Acting Chancellor Jerry Cardwell addressed the Board of Visitors and said he has been out in the community mending any bridges that needed mending; that grievances have been settled; and that in the last two weeks he has spent time with the members of the General Assembly in Richmond. He reported that the assembly members are in full support of the college. He also stated that the college is healthy and strong and that the college is maintaining a healthy and strong relationship with the University of Virginia. Clinch Valley College of the University of Virginia is a coed, four-year, residential state supported liberal arts college.

Anonymous gift to CVC will establish new scholarships

A $100,000 anonymous gift to Clinch Valley College will establish a scholarship fund in memory of the late Colgate W. Darden, Jr., for needy students at the College, officials announced January 12. University of Virginia President Robert M. O'Neil and Jerry D. Cardwell, Acting Chancellor of CVC, the four-year branch college of UVA in Southwest Virginia, said that the scholarship recipients will be known as Darden Scholars. O'Neil was in Wise visiting the College Monday, January 10.

Former Virginia Governor Colgate Darden was President of UVA when three leaders from Wise County, Kenneth Asbury, Fred B. Greear, and William A. Thompson, Sr., approached UVA officials in February 1954 about creating a college in Southwest Virginia. Darden is widely credited with developing a long-range strategy that began with the September 1954 elevation of the UVA Extension Center in Wise to a branch institution. The General Assembly raised the College to four-year status in 1968. At $100,000, the anonymous gift is twenty times the size of the first State appropriation designated to the new school. The irony of that fact would not be lost on Darden, according to O'Neil. "It is truly fitting that such a gift honor Colgate Darden," said O'Neil. "Mr. Darden combined a lofty vision of the value of a branch of UVA in Southwest Virginia with the political acumen to make it happen. He would be delighted to know that needy but talented students in the area get the benefit of a college education with a reduced financial burden." Acting CVC Chancellor Cardwell said that the scholarship fund will help Southwest Virginia preserve its valuable human resources. "Scholarships have a direct, positive effect on the ability of Clinch Valley College to provide quality higher education for deserving citizens of Southwest Virginia and the Commonwealth," he said. "Such gifts not only make us more competitive with other colleges and universities, they also allow more students from this area to realize their full potential. We realize that the area's most valuable asset is its people, and we are pleased to receive this generous gift which will be a significant factor in keeping our citizens in this region of the Commonwealth." College fund-raisers said that the anonymous donor has pledged to add money to the scholarship fund gift if other donors can be found.

Two juniors receive Congressional Teacher Scholarships

Clinch Valley College has received notice that two current students, both juniors, have been awarded Congressional Teacher Scholarships. A total of 45 scholarships were awarded in Virginia, in amounts ranging up to $5,000. Hattie Jane Elkins and Jennifer Wilson, mathematics majors at Clinch Valley, will receive the awards granted by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia.

Eligible students must have been in the top ten percent of their high school graduating class, must be a junior or senior, maintain a grade point average of above 3.0 on college work, be in a teacher education program, agree to teach in Virginia and to teach two years for each year of scholarships assistance received. The scholarship becomes a loan if a recipient does not teach subsequent to graduation, and it must be repaid with interest.

Hattie Jane Elkins graduated from Coeburn High School and will receive her degree from Clinch Valley College in 1988. She is a member of the Sigma Zeta Math-Science Honor Society and the Darden Society, and is a work-study assistant in the Office of the Registrar. After graduation from CVC she hopes to teach in the Wise County Schools. She is the daughter of Alber and Shirley Elkins of Tacoma. Jennifer Wilson attended J.J. Kelly High School in Wise. She presently teaches remedial mathematics as a student assistant in the Department of Mathematics at CVC. After graduation in 1988, she plans to teach at a secondary school in Virginia. She, her husband James, and son Matt live on Pole Bridge Road in Wise. Sheila Cox, Director of Student Financial Aid at Clinch Valley, commented, "I am really pleased that we received two of the 45 scholarships awarded, especially since we had a limited time of two weeks to respond. This leads me to believe that next year we will get as many or more." Next year the scholarship will be extended to accommodate sophomores, and the following year freshmen will be eligible to apply.

The Scholarship covers full tuition and fees for one full year and is awarded to the high school senior with the highest score on the Sigma Zeta Mathematics Test and on the Sigma Zeta Science Test, held annually at Clinch Valley College.

Cassidy, a senior at Whitesburg High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cassidy. He won the Sigma Zeta Science Competition to become eligible for the Scholarship. The Joseph C. ## Lady Cavaliers complete season

By Bob Sloan
HC Sports Editor

The Clinch Valley College Lady Cavaliers finished their 1986-87 season on Jan. 29. The Lady Cavaliers wound up the year with a 2-14 record.

The two victories came on forfeits by Warren Wilson College midway through the season.

Coach Debby Kaminske was more than pleased with the team's performance on the year. "I could never be more proud of a group of young women than I am of this one," she stated. "To finish the season, these girls had to show a true love for the game of basketball, and they did."

Of the 10 players which started the season, only seven remained for the final game.

The players were Greta Trivett, Marla Popp, Tish Kilgore, Amy Marshall, Teresa Mathias, Sheila Sargent and Gwen James. Amy Goff also finished the season as the team's manager.

The Highland Cavalier staff would like to thank the Lady Cavaliers for the hard work and determination they showed in finishing the season.

Ball team participates in Adopt-a-Child

The Clinch Valley College baseball team participated in an adopt-a-child program earlier this month. The program provided toys and clothing for 26 needy children in the Wise County area.

"Coach Spenilla and the young men are to be commended," said CVC Interim Chancellor Jerry Cardwell. He stated the team showed "generosity and concern for others."

"This is in the finest tradition of CVC and a credit to our College," stated Cardwell.

CVC coach Ray Spenilla acquired a list of names from Social Services with the names and ages of needy youngsters in the area. He then gave each player the name and age of one of the youngsters, and in the afternoon each player went out and bought a gift specifically suited for the child he was given.
