Cavaliers hope to improve with young players

By Bob Sloan
HC Sports Editor

Clean off the old spikes and break out the catcher's mit, it's baseball season once again. The Clinch Valley College Cavaliers are ready to take the field with plenty of new faces and a few old ones to show them the ropes.

Fresh off a record setting season, Coach Ray Spenilla's Cavaliers will be trying to improve on the mark they set last year. In his first year of coaching at CVC, Spenilla lead the team to more wins than any other Cavalier team has collected before. Spenilla is hoping to improve on that mark this season. It won't be easy.

This year's Cavalier squad has a much different look than last year's team - stronger in some areas and weaker in others. Spenilla did an incredible recruiting job over the summer and it shows. Ninety percent of the team is freshmen. Only six players are returning from last year's roster.

Don't let the inexperience of these rookies fool you though, most of these new players come to CVC with outstanding high school credentials. They have the skills, it is only a matter of putting them to use.

Probably the brightest spot for the Cavaliers this season is depth. The team has virtually doubled its roster since last year, which should help their pitching rotation and allow some of the fielders a few extra days of rest.

"I feel like we should be improved in the hitting department and also defensively," states Spenilla. "Our major areas of concern are developing pitchers who can throw strikes and stay ahead of the hitters, and having our young catchers mature quickly in all defensive areas."

Last season the Cavaliers hit .291 as a team, an excellent mark itself. If this year's team can match that mark, they will be in good shape.

The Cavaliers will be missing two of their top bats from last year's line-up, shortstop Tony Davis and catcher Ron Whitten. Davis lead the team in hits, home runs, batting average, and stolen bases, easily the Cavaliers' top offensive weapon. Whitten was the Cavaliers' RBI leader and was also tops in doubles. Someone will have to step in and fill the space these two left behind if

"Star Trek" raises question about Star Wars plan

By Rod Mullins
HC Staff Writer

Space...the final frontier. These three words began every installment of the classic television series "Star Trek" over twenty years ago. Yeah, it was weird sometimes and yeah, it was science fiction but "Star Trek" had good to excellent stories and more importantly, a social comment on the events of the day.

Now, twenty years later, creator Gene Roddenberry wants to take "Star Trek" where Kirk, Spock and Bones never went before. He wants to start a new generation.

The familiar crew of the U.S.S. Enterprise will not be staples of this new bold venture. Instead he wants new characters, new ships and in Roddenberry's words, "(to) comment on the issues of today." With the series to be set 150 years ahead of the television series and the four major motion pictures, Roddenberry and his writers will develop stories out of issues present in today's society. With the problems existing in the world today, Roddenberry and his writers will not have a lack of story ideas.

Nineteen years ago, sci-fi writer Norman Spinrad wrote the episode "The Doomsday Machine," about a roving "planet-killer" that had been programmed to kill or destroy anything in its path. After a reference to the then 1968 present day H-bomb and the realization of what the thing was, Captain Kirk destroyed the machine, but not before an important message was raised. Nuclear weapons are going to be our "doomsday machine" if we don't stop the acceleration of tensions between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. Back in 1968, people laughed at the episode and said it would never happen. Now we have broken treaties, broken promises and heated words between our leaders and nations. Now the "doomsday machine" actually exists.

This new weapon is the highly touted S.D.I., Strategic Defense Initiative or better known as Star Wars. This weapon is said to be the defense weapon to prevent the United States from being destroyed in a nuclear attack. What if by some fate, the United States' S.D.I. system does not work in an actual attack? And if all of the U.S. arsenal of offensive nuclear weapons have been reduced or eliminated by the president. The result is simple...we are sitting ducks. But by some chance, an offensive mode has been added to Star Wars to seek out and destroy all Soviet cities in the event of an attack of the United States. The final result is the "doomsday machine" carrying out its set programming to destroy anything and everything it can. Maybe that theory is far out, but the Soviets have made it clear that if we deploy S.D.I. they will push forward with their own system and the Arms Race will be accelerated to new heights.

Besides nuclear weapons and defensive systems in outer space, Roddenberry and his crew will probably look at other issues affecting the world today such as apartheid, religious hatred, poverty, and terrorism just to name a few.

There is one issue I hope to see raised in the new series and that is the issue of racism. Back in the 1960's, "Star Trek" was unique in the sense that it had an interracial crew. Racism was also on the decrease in the late 60's and almost nonexistent in the 70's. Now racism has emerged from its remission to wreak havoc in the 80's. I hope Roddenberry expands on this and then will express his feelings about what is going on today. I am sick of hearing about the race issue and whether or not blacks are equal to whites, and I am also sick of hearing about the Klan and their all out push for "white power." If "Star Trek: The Next Generation" sets out to comment on this in its first season, I will be happy, but I won't be satisfied with just one effort by Roddenberry.

Roddenberry said in an interview four months ago, that if the executives at Paramount Television told him not to touch a story idea with a ten foot pole, he knew that it was the one to write on. There are other problems facing the world and our society today and I have only touched on two that seem to be on the mind of most people. The whole point is we have to lay aside our differences, our previous beliefs and work together for a better tomorrow. That was and is the whole idea of "Star Trek."

In closing, I hope this is not an attempt for Gene Roddenberry to make money out of something he didn't before. Let me explain. When the first series ran, he received no royalties or profits from "Star Trek", nor did he receive any after it was put in syndication. Now he's back with a new series. There is nothing wrong with making money, the thing is I hope he doesn't try to make a profit and ignore what made the first series a success. If he does that, everything that made "Star Trek" unique, will be ruined.

Student outraged by other students' behavior at Arlo Guthrie concert

To whom it should concern: I would like to take this opportunity to publicly apologize for the outbursts of ignorance by fellow Clinch Valley College students at the Arlo Guthrie concert.

Without getting too personal here, some members of a group of students attempted to heckle and disrupt the very special performance by Guthrie. These individuals were sitting near the far corner of the gym on the bottom of the bleachers.

Guthrie, as he revealed in his anecdotal stories, has had to put up with a lot of misconceptions in the past about his intentions. Not one to be easily dismayed, Guthrie took the outbursts Feb. 26 in perfect stride. He rightfully humiliated these students - much to the delight of the audience - and yet instead of feeling ashamed, the hecklers continued!

Guthrie literally returned these students to the "hole" (as he called it) they figuratively crawled from. Or was it the other way around? Did he figuratively return the hecklers to the hole they literally crawled from?

If CVC is going to continue to have quality entertainment, these types of ignorant outbursts by CVC students will have to cease.

Sincerely,
Alan K. Lovelace

Thoughtful effort must be taken during demanding experiences

By Warren Wattenburger
Campus Minister

Some time ago during a television show a comedian turned to the director offstage and asked; "Now where do I stand?" With appropriate wise cracks he found the mark on the floor that indicated his position for the next scene.

If we could have watch rehearsals for the show we would have seen how important it was that the actor stand on the right mark. Where he stood made a difference to the camera man who must get the right angle. It made a difference in the quality of the picture we saw on the T.V. screen for the lighting had been carefully tested at that spot; make-up and costumes had been checked in that lighting. It made a difference in the sound, for microphones had been placed to pick up his voice at that exact point. And it made a big difference to the other actors. If he did not stand on his mark it meant that they could not stand where they were supposed to.

No wonder he stopped the show to ask, "Where do I stand?" It was essential that he stand at the right place! Sometimes we, too, have to pause and ask, "Where do I stand?" Every day we have experiences which demand that we take a stand, that we show by our speech or action what that stand is. Unlike the television actor we do not have clearly marked places on which to stand. For us it is a matter of finding where we must stand and this takes thoughtful effort. There are times when we must find a place to be alone to rethink

CVC: A History

By Gary Parsons
HC Staff Writer

On March 8, 1966 Governor Miles Godwin signed into legislation a bill, to take effect at the beginning of the 1968-69 academic year, that would make Clinch Valley College a four year school. CVC, an already reputable two year school had, like the University from which it was spawned, become a four-year institution. This announcement meant that CVC had to gear for rapid expansion to accommodate for the requirements of producing four-year graduates.

The first order of business was hiring more faculty, who were qualified to teach the higher level courses. Among the new faculty hired that year were Rex Baird, Mike O'Donnell, Dick Peake, Augusto Portuondo, and Betty Humphreys just to name a few.

Another major move by UVA was the granting of the title of Chancellor to Joe Smiddy, who up to that point had served under the humble title of director. This gave Smiddy the power to make the decisions called for in governing a four-year institution. There were also nine academic departments created for the expanded curriculum.

The late 1960's and early 70's were turbulent years on most college campuses but, the students of CVC found the pen mightier than the sword and expressed their concerns in a very respectable and decent manner, through the school paper and heated discussion. While other schools battled to maintain order, Clinch Valley continued to grow and make preparations for the future.

In 1970 McCrarray Hall was completed and the Methodist Church contracted the United Student Center for the use of CVC students. There were also nine new faculty positions created and ground was broken for the new $447,388 administration building.

In 1972 you could buy a meal plan which provided five meals a week for only $78.00 a semester. The first National Social Fraternity on campus, Phi Sigma Kappa, was founded and Rick Nelson played the Homecoming that year.

There were many famous performers who came to CVC during the early 1970's. Reo Speedwagon, Atlanta Rhythm Section, Tom T. Hall, and Earl Scruggs were just a few of the acts listed.

In 1974 Clinch Valley dedicated a new indoor convertible swimming pool, and a year later the enrollment had grown to over a 1000.

Things looked bright for CVC in the mid-70s, but there were problems ahead for the College. In the next ten years a major administrative change would cause an internal conflict within the institution, a conflict that would make us ponder the past and question our future.

SGA makes decision on bands

By Kathy Kelley
HC Co-Assistant Editor

The bands performing at the Spring Formal were announced to the SGA by its president, Rusty Necessary on their February 23 meeting in SH100.

Necessary informed the members, "We got Cheese and the Meats." The members voted last meeting to sign Threshold as the first choice and have a combination of The Edge and The Seventh Wonder as the second choice.

However, Threshold and The Edge were already booked on the date of the Spring Formal. Necessary struck an agreement with the promoter in which The Seventh Wonder will play alternate sets with Cheese and the Meats.

Necessary added when Cheese and the Meats performed at UVA, they were a big hit, and UVA is trying to book them again.

In addition, The SGA voted to give Alpha Delta Chi Little Sisters $150 out of their initial $300 request. The funds were needed to cover expenses for the basketball tournament they were sponsoring. SGA Treasurer Jeff Mullins reasoned that $150 would cover their expenditures for the trophies, concession supplies, and referees, as they already had $450. Toni Foster, an SGA representative, added that if they lost money on the tournament, they could come back to the SGA and ask for more, as long as they provided proof of their losses.

Seminar deals with information

By Scott Lammers
HC Staff Writer

At 1:30 P.M. on Wednesday, February 2, 1987, Bill Stutzer presented a science seminar on genetic recombination.

Stutzer explained to a degree how new genetic combinations and mutations can occur. He used a set of two double-chain DNA molecules as an example with the phage lambda virus and the E. coli bacterium for specific cases. He pointed out that recombination may vary with the individual organism in how it occurs, emphasizing that his example, while skillfully presented, was extremely limited in the topic.

Stutzer further pointed out the importance of research in genetic recombination in that it may be helpful in agricultural research and in treating genetic diseases and disorders.

portion of a seminar course which all science majors are required to take. Since he was a biology major, Stutzer's topic was, quite obviously, closely tied in with an important topic in biology: genetics. In order to come up with a specific topic, Stutzer "thumbed through a magazine," decided he liked a story on genetic recombination, and centered his presentation on that area. He then worked on his presentation from the beginning of the semester, putting in uncounted hours of effort into his work.

"coach" (an instructor with specialized knowledge in the field of their chosen study) to choose an appropriate topic, research it effectively, and present it with a proper level of accuracy and detail. Also, these students are required to attend the presentations. They must take notes on the presentation and give the student who have the presentation critiques which the presenter will use in conjunction with a videotape of the presentation to write and turn in a self-evaluation.

According to Stutzer all of the students must choose a topic appropriate to their science major working with a the team is to even get close to the .291 mark.

To fill those gaps, three other statistic leaders from last season will be donning the Cavalier uniform once again. Third baseman Roger Austin, centerfielder Bobby Tiller, and first baseman Lynn Sturgill will be expected to bring experience and sparks to the Cavalier batting order.

Miller Castle and Chip Martin are just two of the new faces that will step into the batter's box for the Cavaliers. Castle, a pitcher-outfielder, hit .475 and was All-Southwest District in 1986. Martin, a shortstop from Chilhowie, is expected to be another fine hitter. Several others are expected to fare well at the plate for the Cavs.

As for pitching, one of the Cavaliers' weak spots last year, the team will have its ace back. Jace Cuje, who led the team in both wins and strikeouts last year will be taking the mound for his final season. Along with Cuje, Aut Mullins will be seeing duty as the team's top reliever. Mullins the team lead in wins and complete games with Cuje last year.

There will be lots of new faces on the pitching rubber for the Cavs this season. Bill Higgins and Steve Campbell look to be the top newcomers on the pitching staff. Higgins, a crafty lefty from Castlewood, has excellent off-speed stuff and has good location.

Campbell, a Christiansburg native, brings with him a good fastball and curve. In 1986 he was named All-New River District.

Defensively, the Cavaliers will have to prove themselves. Austin and Sturgill will be the only infielders with experience. Martin will have a tough time filling the hole Tony Davis occupied between second and third last year. Tiller will take charge of the outfield from his centerfield position.

Probably the toughest job will lie with J.K. Perkins, the team's new catcher. He will be expected to lead the team and call many of the defensive changes from behind the plate.

The Cavaliers open their season March 17 here at CVC against Bluefield College. Game time is 1:00pm. Like all Cavalier baseball games, it will be a double-header.

Overall, the team looks young, but definitely has potential. Win or lose, Clinch Valley should prepare themselves for some exciting baseball in the coming months.

CVC Professor Donathon relates Paris experiences

Greetings from "Le Monde." Paris, the center of the universe as the French like to think. Paris and its environs with a population of some 14 million inhabitants including dogs (watch where you step!) is the most magnificent city in the world. Ask a Parisian, he/she will tell you that there is no need to speak other languages (especially English) and go to other places, because everything is here.

And indeed, there are many things here - art, music, dance, theatre, CULTURE, the city reeks of it. Museums and art galleries including the Louvre, where I spent four hours one Sunday afternoon and never did see it all (did see the Mona Lisa and Venus de Milo, though). The Paris Opera built during the reign of Napoleon III, (whatever happened to Napoleon II?), with its controversial ceiling painted more recently by Chagall, where I enjoyed an international production of the opera "Elektra" by Richard Strauss. La Madeleine, Notre Dame, St. Sulpice, St. Germain des Pres, and numerous other churches, all beautiful structures in stone and stained glass. At Notre Dame I had the privilege of hearing a recital on the largest organ in France, followed by Mass celebrated by Cardinal Lustiger of Paris.

And walks and more walks to see the various quarters like the Latin Quarter where the many buildings of the University of Paris, including the Sorbonne, are located. Montmartre, a district famous in the late 19th century for its bohemians and now famous for its prostitutes. The Avenue des Champs Elysees with its overpriced stores for tourists, the Rue de Rivoli, le Marais where I live, famous for its old buildings, the "house" across the street called the Hotel de Seus, completed in 1507 (that's even before Keokee was founded!), is one of the oldest buildings in Paris.

Even though Paris is a living museum, it is also a modern and very busy city with one of the best subway systems (the Metro) in the world, two major international airports (so the Americans can come to visit) including the ultra-modern Charles de Gaulle Airport which looks like something out of the future, the Pompidou Center (you have to see it and experience it to believe it!) and traffic that likes to run down foreigners!

And then there's the food! Try to order from a French menu with a knowledge of French that is limited to "Bonjour," "Merci," and "S'il vous plait." DISASTER! I could always go to McDonald's on Rue Berger, but I refuse to eat "fast food" when I can have agneau, canard, creuettes grises, jambon, and my favorite, pate a l'arachide and confiture on fresh bread.

WOW!
I now know how it feels to be a foreigner in a foreign land. And I'm not convinced that after almost two months here in Paris that I will ever be anything but a foreigner.

So the next time you see a foreigner in Wise County, smile, say hello, introduce yourself, make him/her your friend, and remember "Dr. D. in old Paris."

'Til next time from Vienna, Austria, HAVE A NICE DAY!

Freshman players and Coach hold high hopes for upcoming season

By Pamela Norman
HC Co-Assistant Editor

The Clinch Valley College Cavalier baseball team is hitting off the 1987 season with a team of almost entirely freshmen. With such a young team, one would most likely be apprehensive about having a winning season.

Coach Ray Spenilla is not. He has high hopes for the young Cavaliers squad.

Spenilla feels that the team should be improved in the hitting department, and also on defense. Since the team is about 90 percent freshmen, he feels that a heavy emphasis needs to be placed on developing pitchers who can throw strikes and stay ahead of the hitters. His other concern is maturing the young catchers in the defensive areas.

The freshmen on the Cavalier team are: Jerry Tarr, Castlewood, Va; Mike White, Castlewood, Va; Jeff Salyers, Nora, Va; Jeff Kite, Castlewood, Va; Chip Martin, Chilhowie, Va; Miller Castle, Lebanon, Va; Keith Wallace, Council, Va; Steve Campbell, Christiansburg, Va; Dan Haley, Norfolk, Va; J.K. Perkins, Grundy, Va; Donny

Lee, Bristol, Va; Matt Sturgill, Wise, Va; Eric Clark, Bristol, Va; Jeff Gregory, Glade Spring, Va; Richard Kirk, Big Stone Gap, Va.

Because of his late arrival at CVC last year, Spenilla was unable to do much recruiting for the program his first year. Nevertheless, Coach Spenilla guided the team to a record-winning season in his first campaign. He hopes to improve on that record this year.

With only six players returning from last year, the young players will be depended upon to produce. From the experience these young players bring with them, they definitely have the ability.

Spenilla: more than a coach

By Roy Russell
HC Staff Writer

Ray Spenilla, coach of the Clinch Valley College baseball team, is more than just a coach. He is considered by most of his players, as well as many students, to be a very good friend. Spenilla is the type of person you can go to with a problem and, chances are, he will lend an ear and offer his assistance to an unlimited extent.

"I try to treat my players like they were my own kids," says Spenilla. He does this by offering his care and assistance as much as he can.

Spenilla, a native of Castlewood, attended college at Eastern Kentucky University where he developed his baseball skills to the utmost extent. While playing at Eastern Kentucky, Spenilla broke five hitting records and in 1976 served as hitting instructor, ranking the team fourth nationwide in batting while doing so.

Before coming to CVC, Spenilla coached baseball at Castlewood High School. During his tenure as coach at Castlewood, he led the team to a remarkable 125-15 regular season record. Along the way, Spenilla accumulated seven Coach of the Year awards.

Outside of coaching, Spenilla enjoys fishing, collecting baseball cards, and helping young children develop their skills in baseball. He has two children and, though teaching and coaching takes up a great deal of his time, he still finds time to spend a lot of quality time with his family.

Spenilla is a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity and feels very strongly towards fraternal organizations.

While in college, Spenilla achieved many academic and on the field on honors, including the Dean's Lists, the President's Honor Roll for Scholar Athletes, and was an Outstanding Male physical education Scholar from 1970-1974. He graduated with a grade point average of 3.4.

Here at CVC, Spenilla feels strongly about the baseball program and hopes that it will mature greatly in the years to come. He feels that coaching is a good place for him to be because he enjoys being around people and baseball at the same time.

Social Services receives grant

By Christian Burnette
HC Staff Writer

The Wise County Department of Social Services has received a $30,000 grant from the Virginia Department of Social Sciences to conduct Parenting Training classes. These classes will be held for approximately 30 families identified as being at risk of losing their children to the foster care system.

The Lonesome Pine Office on Youth submitted the proposal for the Replacement Preventive Services Grant on behalf of the Wise County Department of Social Services. This grant will offer 22 two hour sessions of Parent Training in the homes of families having need for the services.

Volunteers from Clinch Valley College will be utilized to assist the social worker in providing the training. The training will involve the use of audio-visual materials, written material and role playing techniques.

The program will also provide training to social workers and volunteers in order to prepare them for implementation for the grant objectives.

To become a volunteer or for more information on this new program that begins July 1, please contact Paul Kuczko, Director of the Lonesome Pine Office on Youth at 328-4493.

Guthrie performance a success

By Jeff McFarland
HC Staff Writer

Arlo Guthrie carried on a tradition last Thursday night, Feb. 26, as he charmed another audience with his unique music and stage personality.

More than 200 people showed up at Greear Gym to hear the legendary 60's music star entertain the crowd with short folk songs and provide hilarious stories in between.

Performing for almost two hours, Guthrie sang a few old familiar songs such as "Motorcycle," from his album Alice's Restaurant. The set also included "Amazing Grace" and "This Land is Your Land," the later being the well-known folk song written by Arlo's legendary father, Woody Guthrie.

Between most songs, Guthrie would tell tales of how he developed particular songs or of past experiences which received much laughter from the audience. He also expressed several of his own political and philosophical views throughout the show. Guthrie has been singing songs and telling tales for over 25 years now. He has recorded 16 albums, including his latest, the soundtrack for an upcoming movie about his father, entitled Woody Guthrie, Hard Travelin'.

Among his other credits, Guthrie wrote and sang the state song of Massachusetts and has performed in five movies. One of his most favorite memories, however, is performing a Woodstock in 1969. "It was a great experience," stated Guthrie, "because it was a piece of history. You don't get that many people in the music industry together at one time that often."

"Every generation gets a shot at being in moment of history," stated Guthrie.

Guthrie has his own brand of entertainment which has become a tradition in folk music history. His father would be pleased. The people who attended his concert here at CVC were.

Seminar given on population

Chris Dotten, an Environmental Science student, will give a seminar on Friday, March 6, at 1:30 in the Science Building Lecture Hall.

The seminar will deal with fluctuations in natural populations and opposing views as to whether the population changes are cyclic or random. Everyone is encouraged to attend.

Student company to be formed

Clinch Valley College is in the process of forming a Student Company which will be called STUCO. This student ran company will be involved in actual work projects with several of the businesses in our area.

The company would like to invite interested students who would like to gain actual work experience to join.

Anyone interested can contact Bill Lee in Smiddy Hall or contact Valerie Stanley, Campus Mail Box 5504.

Keep America Beautiful Week '87

The Wise Clean County Committee, in cooperation with Keep America Beautiful, Inc., and the Virginia Division of Litter Control, will observe Keep America Beautiful Week '87 during the week of April 26-May 2.

Each day of that week will have some special theme or activity. All civic clubs, church and fraternal organizations, and any other group in and around Wise County are invited to participate in any way they see fit.

For suggestions and information call Dennis Ireson at 328-1000.

SGA/Honor Court Elections

Elections for Executive Council and Class Representatives for SGA and Honor Court will be held April 8 in the Zehmer Building from 9 to 3:30. To qualify to run for President the student must be a rising Junior or Senior and have a GPA of 3.0 or above.

Class and honor court representatives must have a 2.0 or above and have petitions signed by their classmates. Petitions may be picked up from Rusty Necessary or Rich Davidson and are due by April 1 so that their names may be placed on the ballot.

Fraternity greets new members

The brothers of Alpha Delta Chi would like to congratulate the following men on becoming brothers: Joseph Ratliff, Bradford Rose, Anthony Short, and Eural Viers.

We would also like to congratulate the following women on becoming little sisters: Beth Caramanica, Kim Mayes, Reka Mullins, Laura Tate, and Mitzi Trammell. We feel that the above individuals will be fine additions to our organization.

Those were the days...

When the Lady Cavaliers were State Champions

By Nadine Boggs
HC Staff Writer

No rebounds. No dunk shots. No free throws, but plenty of home runs, stolen bases, and triple plays.

Women's softball at CVC may be a sport long gone and forgotten by many, but the few that do remember may recall those two short years in which games were played, trophies were won, and spirits soared. The team brought the college its first and only state championship when they won the 1980 Women's State Softball Tournament held at Virginia Wesleyan College in Virginia Beach.

So why was such a promising athletic program abandoned? Perhaps a more revealing question might be - How did the program survive for as long as it did?

When the team was first

The Clinch Valley Lady Cavaliers - 1980 State Softball Champions.

organized by a few interested students, there were no uniforms, no equipment, and no ballfield. It was only through the persistence of coaches Marilyn Pace and Bobby Waddle and the enthusiasm of the players that the team did so well.

When questioned, Waddle explained the circumstances surrounding the team's troubles. He said it was the inability to acquire proper funding that played a major role in the team's demise.

Except for a $100.00 contribution from the college, all of the money used to back the team was raised by the players and the coaches. The coaches were not paid for their efforts, which placed even more of a burden upon them.

While Waddle undertook the responsibility of seeing that a ballfield was prepared, Coach Pace took out a personal loan to help pay for various expenses.

Kelee Gonzales, one of the team's star players, said that no money was ever really expected and that they "...knew there wouldn't be too much support from the school." She also added that "...the program hadn't been established for any length of time."

After only the second year, the program was faced with the departure of Coach Pace and the arrival of a new coach whose interest was in tennis.

So, although the team experienced a lot of interest from the students at the time, it was unable to overcome its troubles and thrive. The team had to be satisfied with a brief but shining moment in CVC sports history.

experiences and conversations. We have to recall what we have read, what teacher and friends, and parents have said about some particular question. Again, we have to call on others to help us as we try to find the place where we stand. And often we must turn to God and to the Bible for guidance.

fraternity that supports its own national charity and that without the fraternity's aid the charity would not be in existence today.

Incorporated in the discussion were touching stories that professed the success of the program.

In conclusion to the prosperous weekend, the brothers of the Virginia Tech Chapter threw a "Beach" party which boasted seven tons of sand and provided everyone with an unforgettable weekend.
