

Brickett brings new ideas to SGA

By Kimberly Lee
HC Editor

By now, many of you know the results of last Wednesday's elections for SGA and Honor Court. But, how well do you really know those whom you, the students, have chosen to represent you? The Highland Cavalier felt that you should meet those whom you have elected.

Jeffrey Brickett, a rising senior from Louisa, Kentucky, was elected as the next Student Government Association President. Brickett, who is majoring in Economics and Philosophy, has high hopes for his administration.

Fostering many new ideas, Brickett's main goal is "to get students to be more active."

He hopes to form many committees, concerning everything from housing to the food service, on which students can serve and participate. He also feels that the budget, which the SGA allocates at the beginning of the year, can possibly be done more fairly, with a lot more people happier as a result.

Brickett encourages student attendance at the SGA meetings and hopes to move the meeting to a time when more students are available to attend.

Brickett is also a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, the Judd Lewis Society, and the Chancellor Search Committee.

Elected as Vice-President was John Barton, a rising senior from Council.

Barton is a chemistry and math major and is involved in many other activities as well as being a member of the SGA, including Honor Court, the BSU, Chancellor's Host, Up With People, and Sigma Zeta.

Barton sees his main goal as vice-president of the SGA as "to create better representation for each and every student and to promote an even greater number of activities than are already available."

Barton feels next year's SGA will be a team that will be able to work together. He also feels that Brickett has many fresh ideas that could benefit the students.

He stated, "It's (next year) going to be interesting."

Outpost, Highland Cavalier select staff for '87-88 year

By Pamela Norman
HC Co-Assistant Editor

The Publications Committee held interviews last Tuesday to fill the job positions on The Highland Cavalier and the Outpost, CVC's newspaper and yearbook.

The Highland Cavalier will once again be headed by Kimberly Lee. Lee, who replaced Andrea Gonzales after her resignation at the beginning of the Spring semester, has an optimistic outlook about the future of the newspaper. "I want to keep The Highland Cavalier at it's present level of journalistic quality," said Lee. Lee is a rising junior from Jonesville, VA. She is majoring in Business Administration and History.

Robin Poole, who took over the previous Editors' position who resigned last semester, was appointed Editor of the Outpost for the upcoming semester. Poole has high hopes for the yearbook. "We are going to try to pull it's reputation out of the mud," stated Poole. The Outpost has had problems in the past with organization and Poole hopes this will change with her upcoming plans. "We are going to get it (the Outpost) together next year and really put it back on it's feet," said Poole. "we are going to get it ready and see what direction we need to get it going in and see how we can make it better." Poole, a senior, is from Abingdon, VA.

The Highland Cavalier will be full of old faces holding new positions next semester.

SGA Debate successful

By Kathy Kelley
HC Co-Assistant Editor

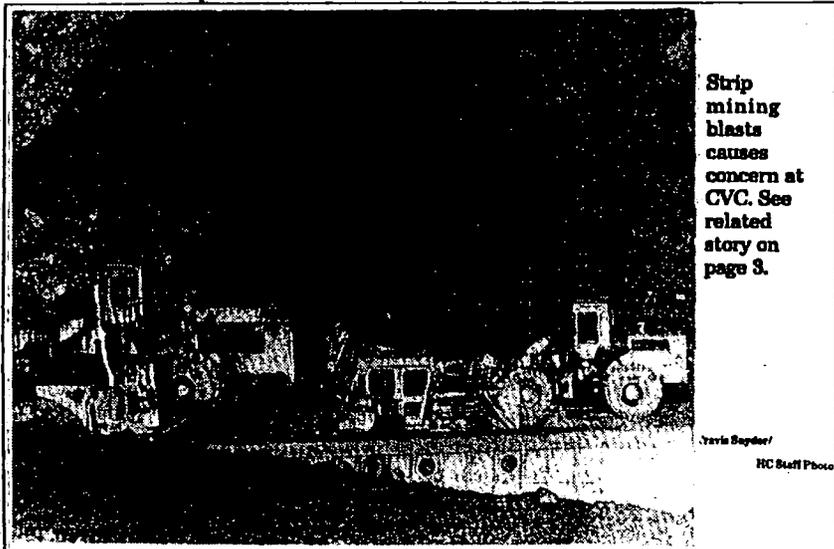

Nervous chattering. The straightening. Throat clearing. Seat shuffling. Despite their nervousness in their undertaking, the candidates prepared to give their views on major issues confronting Clinch Valley College next year at the debate last Tuesday.

Jeff Brickett, William Kimbler, and Matthew Potest were the SGA candidates vying for the presidential spot. Jeff Brickett is a junior majoring in economics and philosophy, Matthew Potest is a sophomore majoring in business management, and

Jeff Brickett gave specific examples on the major subjects needed to be dealt with by the SGA next year. He tackled the problem with the meal plan by saying the meal plan is good but it alienates the commuters. "The students need to 'shake up' the administration if they are not satisfied with the 5 to 6 percent increase in the meal plan," he said. He plans to go to the National Student Government Association if the students have problems in getting the meal plan changed.

TV and radio station needed for communications at CVC

By Rod Mullins
HC Staff Writer

Clinch Valley College is moving up the ladder as an established institution in Southwest Virginia. But with these improvements and additions Clinch Valley College lacks a true formal communications department. Although the college newspaper provides an opportunity for students to write and gain journalism experience on a lower level, CVC does not have a radio broadcasting or television broadcasting department.

There have been several rumors about a movement to set up a radio station here on campus. In order to keep CVC competitive in the communications department, the college needs an on-campus radio station.

CVC students need another form of training in the communications field other than The Highland Cavalier. The Cavalier is an excellent form of training for communication majors wanting to focus on journalistic writing skills. An on-campus radio station would offer a chance for students to learn broadcast skills as well as office management skills and sales skills for prospective business majors.

A radio station could work here at CVC. With partial funding from the VA General Assembly and the Student Government Association, the station could be established. Arrangements with the Federal Communications Commission could be made concerning equipment, tower height requirements, and frequency. After purchasing either new or used equipment from a broadcast company or bankrupt radio station, Clinch Valley College could have an exclusive on-campus radio station catering to the students and promoting Clinch Valley College athletics. An on-campus radio station could do wonders for CVC athletics and handled in the right way, CVC could have a broadcasting department ranked as excellent for a local scale, on-campus radio

With recent developments such as the electronic classroom and the proposed graduate degree study program with UVA and Virginia Tech, Clinch Valley College is moving up in this area as an innovative institution. With the establishment of a radio station and then perhaps a television department, CVC will be a true communications training ground for students. It is our hope that the administration, and the SGA will consider this. This is vital to the growth of CVC.

Student feels meal plan regulations unfair

To the Editor:

As I write this letter my stomach is churning with hunger and growling at me like a hungry dog wanting to be fed.

Wednesday, April 15, I ventured forth into Papa Joes, the world renowned four star restaurant, and proceeded to give my order to the girl behind the counter. When she asked me if I had eaten dinner I jokingly said no, so I would not seem like a pig. She told me she was serious and that if I had eaten dinner I could not use my meal ticket to get food in the grill.

I drill with the Navy reserves one weekend a month and April 11 and 12 was one such weekend. Four meals are served over the weekend, none of which I was able to attend. At $4.50 a meal I was out a grand total of $18.00.

I feel that since I paid for the meals I should be able to use them as I please and that American Food Management should not be able to keep me from using them. The fact that they limit the amount of purchase to $2.50 is enough, but telling me that I can not use the money I have already spent is going too far.

The main reason I am writing this is because in the past this so called "taboo" act has been allowed and I feel that AFM is being inconsistent in their regulations. Also if I pay for something, I expect to be able to collect, no matter when and where I want to.

I feel strongly that the administration should review the contract they have with AFM and should take action if no such stipulation is found.

American Food Management is gaining power by shorting the students out of their rightful food and they will continue to enforce more rules if they are not met with appropriate power.

Sincerely,
Roy D. Russell

Student wants the right to eat her meals

To the Editor:

On April 15, I was refused to be served a snack at Papa Joe's because I had been served dinner in the Cafeteria earlier. I had two meals left on my meal ticket for the week (about $9.00 worth) and they told me that I could not use these meals up. I would not have gone to Papa Joe's except I was hungry because dinner was awful.

I feel that if I have extra meals left on my plan at the end of a week that I should be able to use them up. They are my meals!

All the American Food Management is doing is making money out of the meals we do not eat. (They are already making enough money off what they charge for the food they serve.)

I consider it to be to my descretion to use up all of my meals I am allotted for a week.

I realize that this is the first year that the meal plan has been in action, and they have a lot of problems to work out, this should be one of them. I feel they need to do something about the meal plan since the college is growing and more students will be coming in.

Thank-you,
Teresa G. O'Neil

We must look at our lives to seek the top priority

By Warren Wattenburger
Campus Minister

What are your priorities? What do you do first? I heard a young adult being interviewed on the radio recently. He was asked, "What do you want in life?" He answered, "To have a good time!" If that is his aim, he will be greatly disappointed before the journey is over. Issac is an interesting person. He married Rebekah and was about to leave Gerar to go to Egypt. The Lord appeared unto him and said, "...Sojourn unto this land and I will bless you..." Genesis 28:3. He stayed in Gerar and the Lord blessed him and he became a very wealthy man.

He had many flocks and herds. Issac dug again the wells that Abraham, his father dug which the Philistines had filled with dirt. The first well his servants dug, caused the herdsmen of Gerar to quarrel with Issac's herdsmen and he moved on and dug another well. They quarrelled over that one also. He moved on and dug a third well and they did not contest this well. Issac said, "The Lord has made room for us and we shall be fruitful in this land." Issac went up to Beersheba and the Lord promised to bless him. Issac built an altar and he worshipped God. Next, he

Questions raised about strip mine blasting at CVC

By Rod Mullins
HC Staff Writer

Carroll Dale, president of Strouth Coal Company said in an interview last Wednesday that the company is checking into everything possible concerning blast vibrations that have brought concern by students and faculty at Clinch Valley College.

The blasts, which have been the cause of concern for several weeks at CVC, have led Dale and his company to conduct an investigation as to what is causing the blasts to cause so much vibration. The blasts have not been ruled as the cause of the cracks at the Honor's House.

"We're checking every possible thing," said Dale, after a test blast was conducted Wednesday. A full report has not yet been compiled, mainly because the company has not discovered anything. But Dale added that the company is trying to "be as careful and considerate as possible" about the operation.

Company officials were on campus recently to conduct tests with a seismograph. They measured the strength and effects of a blast and found that the company was well within the blasting limits set by federal and state mining regulatory departments.

Dale pointed out that "vibrations can upset people" but the students must get use to it while the company continues with its operation. He added that they are trying to schedule the blasts at times when they will not cause problems. "There's no room to mess up," he stated.

There have also been questions raised as to when these blasts have been set off. Dale cited the students claim of a blast at around 2:30 p.m. on Thursday afternoon and that the test blast conducted at 5 p.m. that same afternoon could not be compared to the 2:30 blast. According to Dale, the company was not blasting at the time.

"The only thing we can do is monitor our own shots; keep it in control." Dale also said he had personally been on the grounds of the operation, or on the grounds of CVC, all but one time during the blasts.

A story in the March 31 issue of The Coalfield Progress stated that Dale and the company had requested the Virginia Division of Mined Land Reclamation to investigate the blasts. Dale said the investigation was still "on going" for the DMLR, and that Strouth was continuing its own as well.

The operation has also expanded its boundaries in the licensed permit area to include an extra 20 acres near the parking lot at the top of the hill on the CVC campus.

Dale said also that students should make note of a blast and then report it to the college or the coal company for further action.

The ground could be cited as being responsible for the abnormal vibrations. Dale explained that the ground underneath CVC is what is called "Gladeville Sandstone." The way the stone runs underneath the college could be "the heart of it" and perhaps is causing the shockwaves and

Chancellor Cardwell cites changes for student housing

By Roy Russell
HC Staff Writer

A lot of changes are being formulated by the administration of Clinch Valley College. Student housing is not being left out. Plans have been made to extend the amount of living space available for students on campus, and the results are visible.

The fate of the Fraternity houses is a matter of great concern to a lot of students. Jerry Cardwell, Acting Chancellor, stated, "Fraternity houses need to be worked on or relocated all together." Cardwell also stated that contrary to popular belief the fraternities will still be located in the same place in the fall semester.

Cardwell plans to take a tour of all fraternity dwellings at the close of the semester and will make a judgment based on the tour.

There is a plan for special purpose housing, which would provide living spaces for special organizations, but this plan will not be put into effect for a few more years.

Cardwell has discussed a few options with the presidents of the fraternities concerning their being placed in Crockett. If this were to take effect it would become necessary to provide more rooms for the displaced students.

According to Cardwell, if Crockett were to become the new location for the fraternities, they would be required to meet a minimum amount of members willing to live there.

The school would lose revenue if they did not enforce such a standard.

To accommodate the recent increase in students, the college has proceeded to build a new dorm and has purchased townhouses in Wise. The new dorms will house 46 students and the Townhouses will hold 36. Cardwell stated that the space available will depend greatly on the incoming class of freshmen.

Clinch Valley is growing fast and a lot of changes are being made. Hopefully in the near future a lot of the problems facing the administration will be solved and the college will be on the road to turning dreams into reality.

Michael O'Donnell is issuing a humble challenge/request to all CVC student groups to consider, please, helping raise money for Mountain Empire Older Citizens via their annual walk-a-thon. If interested and/or need more details, please contact Rosemary Mercure in the CVC library.

Sam Bass was once again appointed Business Manager for the Outpost. "Sam is a real good worker, he keeps me informed on what we have or don't have as far as resources," said Poole. Bass is a rising senior from Big Stone Gap.

Roy Russell, who has worked with The Highland Cavalier as a reporter for a year is the new photographer for the Outpost. "I don't really know him all that well," admitted Poole, "but I have heard is is a very good photographer". Russell is a rising junior from Virginia Beach, VA.

George Burgan, a native of Pennington Gap, was elected as Treasurer. Although Burgan has never been on the SGA before, he feels that he is up to the challenge.

His main goal as Treasurer is, "to work with the other officers, representatives, and students in achieving a better atmosphere for communications and growth at CVC."

George Burgan

Burgan feels the elected officers and representatives can compromise when needed to have a better SGA. This, in turn, can only benefit the students.

The office of Secretary is held by Sheila Marshall, a rising junior from

Sheila Marshall

Nickelsville, VA. Sheila has hopes that a more student involvement in SGA will result in the upcoming year. Sheila hopes "to see the Parliamentary procedure taken more into consideration (in the SGA)."

Sheila is a member of the Honor Court, Alpha Delta Chi Little Sisters, and the Wesley Foundation. She also serves as a Student Host.

Brickett compiled statistics against the present meal plan. He said there were 300 people on the meal plan this year which paid a total of $330,000 dollars for it. Of that amount the administration got 40 percent for overhead costs such as garbage collection. 91.8 percent of the students he polled said they wanted the meal plan substantially changed.

On the issue of how to allocate money fairly to various organizations, Brickett felt the commuters are also left out. He said it was very unfair for commuters to pay the student activity fee when they usually cannot participate.

In addition, he proposed a way to allocate money to the various organizations on campus fairly. "Allocation of money will be given to those who need it the most," he said.

Brickett plans to use the student activity fee in a Student Government Association Scholarship to give $200 each to outstanding students in the categories of math and science, business and social sciences, and humanities. He also wants to sponsor weekly coffee hours for students to voice their concerns.

Brickett emphasized using subcommittees to get students more interested in taking a direct and active role in student committees. He wants the various organizations on campus to send representatives to the SGA meetings to express their opinions.

The final important issue addressed by Brickett concerned the problems of safety and violence plaguing the residents of McCraray Hall. Brickett stated, "I don't feel there is a problem of violence in McCraray." He concluded by stressing quiet hours to solve the noise problem.

William Kimbler had different views on how to deal with the various problems at Clinch Valley College.

As for a protest against the meal plan, Kimbler said, "The meal plan comes through the administration... The SGA has no say-so in the matter." He emphasized that someone could not go up to the administration and talk them into dismissing the plan. However, he felt the students should have a say-so in the meal plan.

Kimbler believed people taking less than 15 hours at the college should not have to pay the student activity fee. He did state however, the money from the student fees was not only for full-time students.

To encourage students to participate in campus activities, Kimbler urged students to ask him, if elected, for what they want. He said, "I think the school needs to get where they can get students interested," as he believed there were very few activities this year.

Kimbler felt he could get more communication between the SGA and the students by using the gym as a meeting place for the weekly SGA meeting instead of a classroom.

Although he said he does not live in McCraray Hall and could not give a good judgment on its problems, Kimbler knew there were complications last year. "The SGA should get together and form some sort of deal in McCraray," he said.

Matthew Poteet made important points in his opinions of the issues. He felt the meal plan was a good deal. Since the meal plan is covered by financial aid, he felt that students would be better off to take a stand for it.

On the other hand, Poteet thought the student activity fee was here to stay. But, "it should be allocated so that every organization will be given a part of it."

He felt the SGA should plan entertainment more carefully next year. While on the entertainment committee this semester, he found that only the types of music the members liked was played. "We should have different types of entertainment for students, especially on weekends."

The major means Poteet planned to use in getting more students involved in the SGA was to hold the meeting during the school day at the built-in convocation block instead of at 5 p.m. on Mondays.

Finally, Poteet agreed with the other candidates in saying there was not a problem of safety in McCraray Hall, and the SGA didn't have authority in this area. While a Resident Assistant this year, he only dealt with isolated events occurring that were destructive. He stated there were already quiet hours enforced.

vibrations being felt by the students.

Although the blasts have not been ruled as the culprit in the discovery of cracks in the Honors House, Professor Phil Shelton of the Science Department at CVC, stated that the Honors House may not be built on bedrock but on "unconsolidated" ground. Blasts could be amplified into more stronger vibrations and could possibly cause some damage. However, Shelton said he would have assumed the contractors building the dorm would have known about it beforehand. Shelton added he did not know if the cracks at the Honors House could be attributed to the blasting.

CONCERN FOR HIGHER EDUCATION.

Since being elected to the Virginia House of Delegates in 1982, Jim Robinson has fought long and hard for Clinch Valley College. Through the powerful House Finance Committee, on which Jim ranks number 8 in seniority, and with the support of his fellow Southwestern Va. legislators, Jim has been responsible this past session for the following budget amendments:

- $360,000 to purchase additional dormitory space through the acquisition of CVC Townhouse Apts.
- $35,000 for the purchase of a fine arts center.
- $75,000 for the branch of the Institute of Government and two new full-time positions.
- $98,000 for a computer to aid in administrative and academic needs.
- $220,000 to purchase property adjoining the college.
- $25,950 to fund new full-time positions due to a growth in enrollment.
- 7.5% faculty salary increases.

This amounts to a total of over 800,000.00 dollars this past session alone. Jim Robinson feels that this amount is necessary in order for CVC to remain a hallmark in higher education in Southwest Va.

On June 9, 1987, Jim is going to call on YOU for support in the Democratic primary. Please don't toss aside over five years of service, loyalty, and dedication. On June 9th, vote to re-elect Jim Robinson to the Va. House of Delegates.

Thank You.

ROBINSON.

Sweep two

Cavaliers drop Ky. Christian

By Bob Sloan
HC Sports Editor

The Clinch Valley College Cavaliers swept a pair of ball games from Kentucky Christian on Friday, April 10. The Cavaliers let their bats do the talking as they handed the Knights losses of 11-4 and 7-6.

In the opener, the Cavaliers drew first blood as they jumped into an 2-1 lead on first inning runs. In the second frame CVC broke out the bats and rallied for seven runs on a three-run home run by Matt Sturgill and a two-run blast by first baseman Lynn Sturgill.

Kentucky Christian came back to score runs in the fourth and seventh, but it was not enough as the Cavaliers went on to capture an 11-4 victory.

Righthander Aut Mullins went the distance on the mound for the Cavaliers to balance his record at 1-1. Lynn Sturgill, along with his home run, collected a triple and scored four runs to lead CVC.

The Cavaliers needed extra innings to nail down the sweep in the nightcap. CVC held a 6-3 lead after four innings of play, but the Knights hung tough and added runs in the last three innings to even the score at the end of regulation.

After both teams could not put a man across the plate in the eighth frame, CVC reliever Mark Angles got into trouble in the ninth by allowing Kentucky Christian to place runners on first and second with no outs.

Cavalier coach Ray Spenilla opted to bring in Miller Castle to pitch out of the jam. Castle came through by setting down the next three Knight batters to give CVC a chance to put the game away again.

The Cavaliers came through this time. With Mark Hall on second base, the splinter of Matt Sturgill erupted once again as he hammered out a double to bring Hall across the plate for the winning run.

For his ninth inning pitching heroics, Castle was awarded his second win of the season. For the game, Sturgill as credited with two hits and three runs. Centerfielder Bob Tiller went 2-3 in the nightcap.

Hill to play at CVC

Kelly Hill of Warren County High School has made a verbal commitment to play women's basketball next year at Clinch Valley College.

Kelly is a 5-9 forward/guard who averaged 20 points, 14 rebounds and six assists per game this year. She was an All District first team member, and a second team All-Region member.

"Being 5-9, Kelly gives us the option of playing her at off-guard or forward because of her development in high school at both positions. Plus, no matter where she plays she gives 100 percent to the team," said Clinch Valley's women's basketball coach, Debbie Kaminske.

Kelly is the daughter of Rick and Sandra Hill of Front Royal, Virginia.

CVC dance ensemble to debut Thursday

The Clinch Valley College Modern Dance Ensemble, comprised of eight dancers of varied backgrounds, will make its debut on April 23, 24, and 25, when it holds its Spring Concert at the Chapel of All Faiths on campus. The Concert will begin at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, and 2:00 p.m. on Saturday.

The program for the Concert will include elements of Modern Dance, Ballet, Jazz, and Ethnic Dance. The accompanying music will also reflect a variety of sound, from Classical to Folk to Rock. The goal of the Ensemble is to gradually increase the proportion of Modern Dance in its programs, while continuing to offer a variety of dance forms.

The director and choreographer of the group, Elaine E. Sheldon, decided to form the group after observing the talents of students in her Jazz class at Clinch Valley College in 1985. She believed that a showcase for the many talented dancers at the college would be a valuable experience for the dancers, the college, and the community.

The members of the Clinch Valley College Modern Dance Ensemble include: Miltzy Church, Sheila Hillman, and Leigh Ann Skeen of Wise; Cynthia Whitaker of Norton; Laura Epps of Newport News; Jeanette Fuller of Stafford; Carolyn Miller of Marion; and Eva Rudolf of Springfield, Virginia. All are current students at Clinch Valley College.

Sheldon has studied dance at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque Dance Theatre, Princeton (New Jersey) Ballet School, University of Maryland, and the Bristol Ballet School. She has taught classes at the college for the past four years, and had done choreography for the Clinch Valley College production of "Snoopy", and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" in Big Stone Gap.

Students projects impressive at SW Virginia Science Fair

When CVC sponsored its first science fair for area high school students, the competition was only sub-regional. The fair has come a long way since then, and CVC was proud to recently sponsor and host the Eighteenth Annual Southwest Virginia Regional Science Fair.

The fair was held on Saturday, April 11, and was quite extensive. There were a total of 128 exhibits at the fair, with topics ranging from simulated rainstorms to aerodynamics to computer programming in a total of 14 divisions of competition. There were students from 16 different schools competing for various prizes and honors at the fair.

The competition at the fair was fierce, and tension mounted as the awards ceremony drew near. Finally, at 4:30, the entire fair migrated to the Science Lecture Hall, which soon filled to the point of standing room only.

There were plenty of awards to go around, however, and many students walked away with one or more awards from the fair.

The ceremony opened with awards from various special-interest groups, including awards from the Air Force, Army, and Navy. After these awards were given out, the division awards were presented. There was a winner from each division, and honorable mentions as the judges deemed appropriate. Finally, after all these prizes and awards were given out, the four largest and most impressive awards in the fair were announced.

The first of these awards to be given out was the Joseph C. Smiddy Scholarship, which pays for full tuition and fees for one year and is renewable for up to four years. It was awarded to the best exhibit by a senior at the fair. The award was given to Michael Dean Sexton of Marion Senior High School on "The Effect of Drag on Nose Cone Aerodynamics."

The second and third awards were given to the top two exhibits in the entire competition. The awards consist of an all-expense paid trip for the students and their teachers to go to the International Science and Engineering Fair in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Chadd Smith, a freshman from John I. Burton High School, was presented this award for his project entitled, "Pendulum Studies III: Chemical Oscillators." Chris Kellog, a junior at Patrick Henry High School, was given the second such award for his project "Artificial Intelligence: A Computer Learns Mathematics Through an Understanding of English."

The fourth, and perhaps most prestigious of these prizes, went not to a particular student, but to the school which had the best overall exhibits. To decide this, any school with five or more winners of awards was considered. The school's five best award winners were considered and the school with the best overall combination of the five won the award. Five schools qualified for this award: Abingdon, John I. Burton, Marion, Patrick Henry, and Rich Valley. Marion High School, with five division winners, won the award.

Alcohol and Drug abuse seminars

There will be two Drug and Alcohol Abuse Seminars held at Clinch Valley College on April 16 and 22. The seminars will be held in Central Hall, room C-206, from 1:30 to 3:30.

Conducting these seminars will be Nancy Gliner and Norman Winegar, Gliner, along with being the Clinch Valley Public Relations Officer, is also the college's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Education Coordinator. Winegar is a licensed clinical social worker.

Both Gliner and Winegar are Certified Substance Abuse Counselors.

The seminars are open to all CVC faculty, staff and students.
