New regulations enacted to make dormitory alcohol free

McCraray Hall

New regulations are being implemented this fall by the administration in hopes of reducing the cases of alcohol abuse in the Emma McCraray dorm.

Last year McCraray suffered $5,733 in damage, according to Director of Housing, Charles Engle. "I'd say a good portion (of the damage) is linked to alcohol,"

Engle added.

Approximately 80% of the disciplinary problems in 1986 were alcohol violations.

The dry-dorm policy has been considered for years, and was actually formulated last spring. Petitions signed by students in the spring semester of 1986 showed that many wanted the policy. "It's a lot quieter now," says returning student Mary Sharp.

Alternatives B6 was a conference held in Richmond, Virginia. One of the topics concerned alcohol, and how colleges and universities could make transitions to the new drinking age. One of the transitions made by Clinch Valley College is the new regulation for McCraray.

"We wanted McCraray to be a dry dorm, because for one, we care about the well-being of the students, and two," stresses Dean of Students Mike O'Donnell, "it is the law." McCraray houses 168 students, of which only 21 are of legal drinking age. The policy forbids the possession and consumption of alcohol, regardless of age.

The first offense for having alcohol in McCraray is a citation, conference with the Dean of Students, and a letter of notification to the parents. The second offense is the same, but the student will be on social probation for a period of six months. Penalty for the third offense is expulsion from campus housing.

"There have not been any complaints by the students," says Chancellor Jerry Cardwell. "In fact, one student I talked to said he agreed with the policy, and that we have done the right thing." Cardwell's main concern is the heavy drinking that leads to rowdiness. The disturbances cause many complaints along with physical damage.

Cardwell stated, "I know the dorm

SGA President encourages civic student participation

Jung K. Ko
SGA President

I should first say that I believe the philosophy I feel that the Student Government Association should adhere to. Tom Hayden expressed it best in 1965, in a statement about Third Participation. He says that "we will replace power rooted in possession, privilege, and circumstance by power rooted in love, reflection, reason, and creativity. As a social system we seek the elimination of a dominance of individual participation, governed by two central ideas: that the individual shares in those social decisions determining the quality and..."

The official school colors still remain a mystery

David King
Art Director

As a student of Clinch Valley College, I had never before realized that the school had an official color. After visiting the registrar's office and interviewing the store manager, I found that the color of Clinch Valley College was not mentioned in the registrar's handbook.

"What is this color?"

"I don't know."

"Is it blue or red?"

"I don't know."

"Is it maroon or grey?"

"I don't know."

"I think it's grey."

"I think it's maroon."

"I think it's both."

"I think it's neither."

"I think it's a mystery."

The actual answer for the greater part of my life has come from sources outside of Clinch Valley College. The official school color is actually a mystery, and no one knows for sure what it is. However, I have found a possible solution to this mystery in the form of a virtual reality of colors ranging from royal blue to hot pink. When asked what the official color was, bookstores and apparel stores replied, "It's maroon and grey." I then realized that the color of Clinch Valley College is not a color at all, but a combination of several colors. The official color is actually a combination of maroon, grey, and silver. This combination of colors is used in the official school colors, and the color of Clinch Valley College is actually a combination of these colors.

The search for truth must come from within

Campus Editor

Welcome to the halls of higher education. We are happy that you have chosen to be a part of the Clinch Valley College community as you continue your intellectual and spiritual journey.

As we begin the academic year, we are encouraged to remember one thing: education is a journey that we must undertake on our own. The journey is not a straight path, but rather a winding road that we must navigate on our own. The search for truth must come from within.

Students have rights to confidential educational records

The Register's Office at Clinch Valley College would like to inform students of their rights to confidential educational records. Due to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, the registrar's office maintains the confidentiality of student records. The registrar's office will not release any information without the prior written consent of the student. The registrar's office will release information only if the student has signed a written consent form.

ALCOHOL

is not just a party place. It is a social place, a gathering place. When I first moved to Clinch Valley College, I was surprised to find that a small college could host a full range of events. The first week was very successful, with only a few incidents. However, I was also surprised to find that the same student who was unable to control the situation was himself the best student in the class. It is not unusual for people to be responsible for their own actions.

CVC Lady Cavaliers to begin year in NLCWAA

Bob Sloan
HC Staff Writer

Following their departure from the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference last year, the CVC Lady Cavaliers will play this year in the National Little College Women's Athletic Association.

The NLCWAA consists of colleges across the nation which meet the association’s enrollment requirements.

"The biggest difference from last year will be the travelling," said Lady Cavalier coach Debbie Kaminske. "We did an awful lot of travelling to Kentucky colleges last year. This year we will play more in-state schools."

"Hopefully, the cut down in travelling will benefit the team academically," said Kaminske. She feels it will give them more time to study.

The NLCWAA has no set regulations on what colleges a team must play. Also, all teams in the association will make the playoffs at the end of the season - no matter what their record.

The national playoff tournament is scheduled for March 5 and 6. The site is yet to be announced.

Another important factor which determined the decision to join the NLCWAA was that closer colleges could be scheduled.

"We couldn't get Emory and Henry College on our schedule because their's was full, but what we're hoping for is a team which is nearby that could build into sort of a rivalry," said Kaminske.

The closest college on the team's 22 game schedule is King College in Bristol. Bluefield College is also on the schedule.

The Lady Cavalier's home opener is scheduled for Sunday, November 15 against Transylvania.

Intramurals bring fun, excitement to CVC

John Stith
HC Staff Writer

As returning students know and new students are soon to find out, intramurals at CVC are taken very seriously by those who participate.

The thrills and spills of football, volleyball, softball and basketball are once again scheduled throughout the year.

Women's basketball coach Debbie Kaminske, in her second year as intramurals director, is looking towards a new and exciting year. She does however, stress that players should be very conscious of the rules.

"Intramurals would run much smoother if everyone involved knew the rules and followed them to the best of their abilities," stated Kaminske.

First on the intramural agenda this year is flag football. Kaminske is expecting at least four to eight teams to begin the season on Sept. 16. Unless there is an excessive number of teams, each team will make the playoffs at the end of the season.

A team captain meeting was held on Thursday, Sept. 10 to inform each captain of new rules and to hand out game schedules.
