Disciplinary Board formed to aid student responsibility

Beth Finne
HC Assistant Editor

This semester, students will have a chance to run for office and be part of the Student Disciplinary Board.

The Board is intended to be an "elected" board by the students to adjudicate disciplinary problems which are not handled elsewhere in the college," according to Dean of Students Michael O'Donnell.

Years ago, a Student Disciplinary Board existed at CVC, but it "drifted into oblivion" because it was not needed. It was not until Moomaw was Chancellor that the idea came up again.

With the support of O'Donnell, a constitution was put in the works, and the idea was discussed with the SGA and the Administrative Council. A final draft of the constitution is being reviewed now by the Administrative Council, and if it passes, elections will be held this spring.

The main purpose of forming this body of students, says O'Donnell, is to help students assume responsibility for their own lifestyles and conduct. The Board's jurisdiction is in areas not handled by the Honor Court, nor directly involving the police. The whole process of going before the Board involves a series of events that include going before the director of housing, the dean of students, the Student Disciplinary Board itself, the dean of students again, and finally, as a possible appeal, the chancellor.

The length and time involved for a case, says O'Donnell, gives the "opportunity to reach a solution at several points along the way." Another goal is to make the Board as functional and effective as possible, but to keep it from being unnecessarily formal. The ability for multiple appeals also keeps it as nonlegislative as possible.

In the case of punishment for a ruling of guilty, disciplinary action by the college would be initiated by the Board. In fact, a case has already been heard by an ad hoc Student Disciplinary Board and the results were very positive.

Commented O'Donnell, "It worked, period. I am very pleased that it worked so smoothly, so well, and so fairly."

As far as who is eligible for being elected, any student in good standing can campaign and hold office.

"Nov. 21st" resolution proposal reconsidered by SGA

C. Edward Elkins
HC Staff Writer

The SGA listened to a student's proposal for reconsideration of the "Nov. 21st" Resolution in their meeting last week.

Allan Lovelace, a CVC senior, asked SGA President Kim Lee if the SGA's agreement last semester to post an agenda would be enforced. He stated that he had checked the door to the SGA office that day and had not found one posted.

Lee responded that the SGA will have a limited agenda of old business posted outside the SGA office, and the members passed a motion to post an additional copy of the agenda in the lounge at Zehmer Hall for commuter students.

In an interview after the meeting, Lee stated that she felt a student referendum for the resolution unnecessary. In response to whether or not the real reason for her refusal was a fear that the referendum would not go her way, she denied these allegations by stating, "I feel that most students are rational, and if both sides are aired, both pro and con, then most students are going to have to say, 'that's going to impair the SGA's ability to function effectively'."

Most rational students will do that."

Students are reminded that during last semester's SGA meeting where the Nov. 21st Resolution was originally debated, several members of the SGA made statements

New screening process for English majors in effect

Christal Tackett
HC Copy Editor

Declaring a major at Clinch Valley College will no longer be a matter of rushing to the registrar on deadline day to grab the proper form, fill it out, quickly get the necessary signatures and hotfoot it back to the registrar to turn it in.

Bureaucracy has once again made itself known at our secluded institution, and it is wearing a sign that says "assess you"—the "you" being the English program here at CVC and future English majors.

A state-mandated assessment program will be implemented periodically to note and record exactly what is being done in the English program. As a result, a process for screening potential candidates for formal entrance into study for the major will be used. This process—effective immediately—applies to all students who have yet to formally declare their major in English.

The Department agreed on the following process:

- The candidate must submit a GPA of at least 2.5 in English courses attempted
- The candidate must submit two letters of recommendation from members of the department
- The candidate must present a letter of application and an essay of at least 500 words explaining the reasons why he or she wishes to major

Student writes about life in an off-campus trailer park

Angela Cramer
HC Staff Writer

After living on campus for one and a half years, I decided to plunge into the unknown world of a trailer park, not far from Clinch Valley College.

My best friend tried to persuade me to stay on campus because of the costs, and unexpected problems that could occur. Well, the problems did arise, despite my earnest optimism.

For starters, I never imagined a toilet could cause so much trouble. After waiting a whole week for my water to be turned on, I came home from work to find my hallway soaked from a ferocious leak. It was awful.

After that problem was fixed, the chain broke, so to flush it I had to stick my hand in the tank and lift the port-hole lid. The toilet still suffers from a small leak, but I have my trashcan under it.

To save money, it is a necessity to have a roommate, because expenses certainly add up.

My first mistake was not finding out whether or not the water or electricity was hooked up. Neither of the two were, so I had to fork out over $200 for hook-up and deposit. Needless to say, I was not too pleased.

I have not received a bill yet for water or electricity, so I keep my heat at 50° when I am not home, and at 58° when I am.

It is also important to ask the landlord before renting if the place is furnished; some are, some aren't. If you don't have a truck, like I do, then it is going to take many trips back and forth from home to furnish your house.

Even though it sounds like I am complaining an awful lot, I enjoy my place, and would never consider moving back into McCrarry. My studying has at least doubled since I moved, and, considering I enjoy cooking, I have my own kitchen at my fingertips.

Commuting to school is no problem, since it takes about as long to get to the campus as it does to walk from McCrarry to Zehmer. I have, however, a couple of parking fines collecting dust on my dashboard. Being new at this, sometimes I park in the wrong spaces by mistake.

As a sophomore representative of the SGA, I wanted to explain the coffee situation to those commuters who, like me, need their coffee in the morning.

If you read last week's paper concerning the $1,200 SGA spent on coffee for one semester, you should be able to understand why a cup costs a whopping .20 cents. Stop complaining, or buy a meal plan. Then you can get an unlimited supply of coffee for an even larger price.

I feel the SGA does a reasonably good job of representing the commuters, although I do wish now that I hadn't voted "yes" to raise the fine on parking tickets.

Student says article exhibits "mud-slinging" tactics

Point Blank is exactly what the article written in this week's paper drew. Mud-slinging when trying to make one's self feel more esteem is demoralizing to one's self and unprofessional... to say the least.

The article about the Nov. 21st resolution was not written well. Any good writer/reporter should have his or her facts straight before writing an article and it is crucial if you are going to bad-mouth someone, or some organization such as the SGA.

The resolution proposed by Tim Collins did NOT request an agenda be posted before every SGA Meeting. You may ask yourself how I am so sure of this FACT. The answer is... I suggested it. I suggested that an agenda be placed in Smiddy, Zehmer & the library. I'm not tooting my own horn, but it was a less time consuming, less red tape resolution than was Collin's.

Collin's resolution, which was well-prepared and presented, in short requested that any pertinent or controversial issue that was to be voted on be printed in the Highland Cavalier for all to see and decide if they would attend the following meeting. The only thing wrong with the resolution is it wastes a week and the Highland Cavalier is not obligated to print everything it receives.

The SGA was not the only people "attacking" Collins. The majority of the people consisted of the student body. If the writer of point blank had stayed for the entire meeting and had taken notes, many erroneous statements could have been avoided.

As far as the SGA being afraid

Green expresses appreciation for those who Adopt-A-Highway

To the Editor:

The enthusiastic response to the Adopt-a-Highway Program is extremely encouraging to the Wise Clean County Committee.

The Virginia Department of Highways and transportation and the Virginia Division of Litter Control and Recycling are doing an excellent job with this program. Lewis Ferguson is especially to be commended for his enthusiastic work in organizing the groups in wise county for the highway department. Lewis has signed up more groups and covered more miles than any other county in Virginia. This is quite an accomplishment and certainly deserves special recognition. The groups that have recently adopted highways also deserve special recognition. We would like to commend Riverside Inc., Trinity Life center church, Disabled American Veterans Chapter 56, Southwest Oil Co., Leo's Pest Control, Valley Volunteer Fire Department, Duncan Gap Freewill Baptist Church, Appalachia Lions Club, Norton Kiwanis Club and J.I. Burton Key Club.

We would also again like to recognize the groups that have previously adopted highways.

They include Paramount Coal Corp., Fraley's Inc., Glamorgan Coal Corp., local residents of the Hurricane Community, Young Homemakers of Virginia in Pound.

Appreciation is also extended to these groups that previously adopted highways: Wise Kiwanis Club and circle K Clubs, Spring Collieries Inc., Barnette Contractors, Environmental Monitoring Inc., Wise Lions Club and AMS Ecology Club, Wise Radiator Service, Coeburn Lions Club, B.F. Robinette Contractor, VICC, Power Equipment co., local residents of Wise, Clarence Williams, Big Stone Gap Lions Club, Dominion Bank of Big Stone Gap, Pound Lions Club, Coeburn Kiwanis Club, Norton Lions Club, Coeburn High School Alumni Association.

CVC honored for its teacher prep plan

Clinch Valley College received excellent marks for restructuring its teacher preparation plan, a move mandated last year by the State.

All 37 institutions which offer teacher preparation programs in Virginia were directed by the State Department of Education to revise their elementary education majors.

Clinch Valley's plan was reviewed by Dr. Terrel H. Bell who evaluated it as a "very impressive proposal." Bell is a national consultant and former Secretary of the U.S. Department of Education.

Bell noted the CVC plan reflects awareness of current trends in teacher education and unequivocally limits professional education coursework. He said the student teaching and field experience component of the plan is "a very strong feature" which "should provide students with rich and rewarding growth opportunities as they become oriented to teaching."

He commended the Clinch Valley College staff, which developed the plan. The committee was chaired by F. Wayne Wheatley, director of the teacher education program. Other faculty planners were Jerry D. Cardwell, vice-chancellor and dean; George E. Culbertson, associate dean and registrar; Richard A. Davidson, professor of education and chairman of the education department; and Lana W. Low, associate professor of education. They were assisted by Rue Gembach, administrative assistant.

The revised plan allows students to take more liberal arts courses to provide for intellectual growth, and to concentrate on the academic major rather than professional education. Students will complete an observation phase or elect cooperative education prior to a full semester of student teaching in local schools.

The revised plan takes effect for freshman entering Clinch Valley College in the 1989 fall semester.

Chronicle publishes Sheldon's paper on teaching philosophy

Greg Platt
HC Staff Writer

Our country is built on the notion that established ideas should never be blindly followed without constant questioning. In this way it is assured that ideologies don't become stagnant and outdated.

Apparently though, there is a strong movement among the extreme left and extreme right academia to teach only established ideas. An example of this is Alan Blume's recent book, The Closing of the American Mind, which argues for a return to the classics but has been criticized for having a conservative political bias.

Garrett Sheldon, chair of the department of social sciences, strongly disagrees with this teaching philosophy, and this is made clear in his paper, "Three Cheers for Intellectual Detachment or 'The Opening of the American Mind'" that will appear in The Chronicle of Higher Education to be published this Spring.

The paper was positioned on the last page in The Chronicle, which is considered to be a great honor.

In his article, Sheldon cites John Stuart Mill in presenting two reasons why intellectuals must be free to investigate controversial ideas. First, there is a possibility that these unpopular ideas could be correct. Second, the truth will be strengthened, even if the unconventional ideas are wrong, by the exercise of refuting them.

Sheldon uses the term intellectual liberty to denote the idea of what some call the "free marketplace of ideas." This is the foundation of Anglo-American academic freedom.

According to Sheldon, it requires much knowledge and temperament to give an impartial account of an opposing viewpoint but that this is what should be expected from professors. College and university professors should present all sides of a controversial subject in an impartial way.

Sheldon quotes Thomas Jefferson in his remark about UVA: "Here we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, nor to tolerate any error so long as reason is left free to combat it." He also asks us to recall Socrates' definition of wisdom in thinking with openness, tolerance, and humility.

A book Sheldon is developing previous book, The History of Political Theory: Ancient Greece to Modern America, is being used as a textbook at Clinch Valley College.

CVC submits budget amendments for General Assembly's consideration

Fenni Baker
HC Staff Writer

During recent meetings of Virginia's General Assembly, Clinch Valley College submitted their request of legislative budget amendments for 1989.

The nine amendments the college is requesting are listed in order of priority:

- Fine Arts Center Planning Funds. The preplanning for this project has been completed. The money will be used to increase space for conferences, public meetings and fine arts programs for both regional and college needs.
- Staffing and Operation of SBED Center - $300,000. This money will be used for the salaries and travel of the staff of the Seed Center and the marketing of the center.

• Upgrade Electrical Service and Improve Facilities - $40,000. This will be used to improve the electrical systems in the Science Building because it is now insufficient for the science equipment the college has ordered. The money will also be used to improve the other facilities the college has.

• Acquisition of Property. There are 20 acres of land adjoining the campus and three houses that the college would like to purchase.

• Basic Operational Budget Support (OTPS) - $145,000. These funds would be used to restore some of the funds, other than personal services funds, lost to inflation since 1982. It would also be used for proper upkeep of equipment purchased through the Higher Education Equipment Trust Fund.

• Additional Positions -

Thompson to participate in Howard University program

Sharon Culler
HC Staff Writer

Daphne Thompson is a sophomore who will be participating in a unique internship operated through Howard University.

Thompson's actuarial internship will allow her to work for a large insurance company for eleven weeks during the summer. During the internship, she will be given a project to work on during the summer. When applying for this internship, Thompson had to submit a complete resume and go for an interview. She found out about the internship while she was enrolled at Howard University last year.

When asked what her plans for the future were, Thompson said that she would like to return to Howard the next academic year. She says that she plans to continue her Math/Economics double major and hopes to continue participating in the internship program until her graduation.

Thompson stated that her long-term plans are to "help give black Americans a more stable economic foundation, so that they may become a more viable part of American society. That's what everything I do right now is working toward: That is what I have decided is to be the purpose of my life."

Before I begin my review of Shooting Rubberbands at the Stars, let me define the meaning of the term "bohemian." The bohemians were the original hippies.

At what time did the original hippies come around? Mid 70's? Wrong! When I first applied to CVC? Wrong again! They didn't even arise originally in the mid-sixties. It was in the 1840's in Paris when they first roamed the earth.

Steven Crane, a popular author on witchcraft, was a member of this hippy organization. The 1840 Bohemians believed in free love, free thinking and no rules for living. They lived in a constant state of poverty while housing themselves in attics and basements.

Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians are a mixture of philosophical, directions-to-life lyrics and tight musicians with interesting modern ideas. With the radio being flooded with "feeling sorry for myself" lyrics and so-called heavy metal bands that insult one's intelligence, it's great to hear a song like What I Am on the radio.

The second song on the album, called Little Miss S, is probably my personal favorite, along with She. In conclusion, let me say that it would really be great if this band became a major influence in the 1990's. The band possesses a very realistic image of life and society in the late '80's. They don't rely much on Top 40 gimmicks nor do they endorse Pepsi—that's two points in their favor. Buy this album and, if you're smart, you'll see a little bit of yourself in their music.

Well, it looks like adios for now, and next week I'll be reviewing the newly-found lost tapes of "Bullwinkle 'Moose Sings Elvis Presley Hits in the Shower." Don't miss it!

His playing and style is very innovative and a refreshing change from the three-chord headbanging style of what we're forced to see on the deceased MTV.

The singer, Edie Brickell, can't be compared to Janis Joplin's style, but at times that seems like an insult to this new, clear-thinking lead singer. She has a confident, easy-going voice with a much more devastating effect on the listener than the tiresome, predictable voices of Heart and Lita Ford.

The guitarist is Robbie Blunt, who once filled Jimmy Page's shoes as Robert Plant's musical sidekick.

In other business, SGA members discussed possible ejection of members who miss more than three meetings without a viable excuse. Involuntary ejection from the SGA is called for in the SGA constitution.

An alternative to spending $400 for the coffee in Zehmer Hall was suggested by Matt Hopkins, junior representative. In the Jan. 24 SGA meeting, the members voted to use the money to subsidize the cost of the coffee, since last semester's bill for supplying free coffee totaled $1,200. A motion was passed to check into the possibility of purchasing coffee vending machines as a solution for the problem.

A central issue in the meeting was discussion about the plans for this year's Spring Formal. Suggestions for the theme song ranged from "I Want to Have Some Fun" to "Don't You Know What the Night Can Do" to "Moon Over Bourbon Street."

Colors for the Spring Formal were also suggested, and the choices were narrowed down to two suggestions: blue, white, silver, and black, and red, black, and silver.

O'Donna Ramsey

Meet Jeanette "Jeannie" Knight.

Most students probably know her as the wife of CVC Chancellor Jim Knight; she has also become a major part of college and community activities.

Knight served three years as mayor of Due West, South Carolina, and was in the middle of her second term when she resigned to move to Virginia with her husband.

"It was an interesting job. Small towns have the same kinds of problems that big towns have, they just don't have as many people to solve the problems," Knight said.

Knight said her adaption to the Wise County area was not difficult. "The people are so nice. It's not hard at all."

She went on to say, "The mountains are an added excitement. We have lived here about seven months, and already I find when I go back to South Carolina, I miss the mountains."

Knight now resides in Wise with her husband, six year-old daughter, Anna, and a large gray cat named Smokey, but says she is looking forward to living on campus when the new chancellor's residence is completed.

Living off-campus doesn't prevent Knight from becoming involved in college activities. She helped with the campus Christmas decorations and activities last semester. Knight also involves herself in the social activities of the college and is a member of the International Club.

According to Daisy Portuondo, CVC special projects coordinator, Knight is a member of the Board of Directors of the Pro-Art Association and is in charge of the art exhibits that have been coming to CVC.

In addition to college activities, Knight also involves herself in community activities. She is a member of the Norton Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW), and serves on the advisory board of Appala-

Soon, CVC may be included in the Virginia Work Study Program which would place students in public service jobs in the area.

Sheila Cox, Director of Financial Aid at CVC, has written a proposal to be brought before the State Council of Higher Education. Should the proposal be approved, the program would be effective in the fall semester of the 1989-90 school year.

Job placement would be based on financial need and is only available to full-time students. Employment opportunities would be restricted to public and nonprofit organizations such as Mountain Empire Older Citizens or local hospitals.

Students who are placed in these public service jobs would be given a maximum of 20 hours a week during regular school terms and 40 hours a week during vacation periods and summer sessions. Students would earn wages equaling those of present employees doing the same job.

According to Sharon Daniels, wages in most cases should exceed minimum wage. Daniels also says that it is hoped that the job placements can be related to the declared major of the student.

This type of program should be beneficial in promoting college and community relationships as well as giving the student needed experience.

$350,000. The recent growth of enrollment justifies the 6.5 faculty positions the college is requesting.

• Air Condition Building - $125,000. With these funds, the college plans on having an air conditioning system installed in Zehmer Hall.

• Future Role and Direction of CVC - $75,000. These funds would allow consultants, travel and surveys to determine the future direction of CVC.

• Campus AV and Computer Network - $200,000. This network would allow AV and computer signals to be transmitted between campus buildings. It would provide video access in all classrooms and selected offices.

Even though the College has asked for these funds, it doesn't mean that the General Assembly will allot them. The General Assembly must first read the proposal and then vote on the amendments.

It is possible that CVC's proposals won't be approved or that CVC will only receive a part of what they requested.

Clinch Valley Cavaliers suffer heartbreaking loss to King

John Gillenwater
HC Sports Writer

"I can't ask for anymore than they are giving me," said Cavs coach Barney Hall after Monday night's heartbreaking one point loss to King College.

This was one of the last six losses that the Cavs have suffered due to a close margin in score.

The Cavaliers had a balanced offensive attack for the first time this season. All of the starting line-up were in double figures, including Mark Cooper's three three-point shots to add to his total of thirteen for the night. Center Scott Compton, who led the Cavs in scoring, had seventeen points, including a crowd-pleasing, electrifying slam dunk early in the second half.

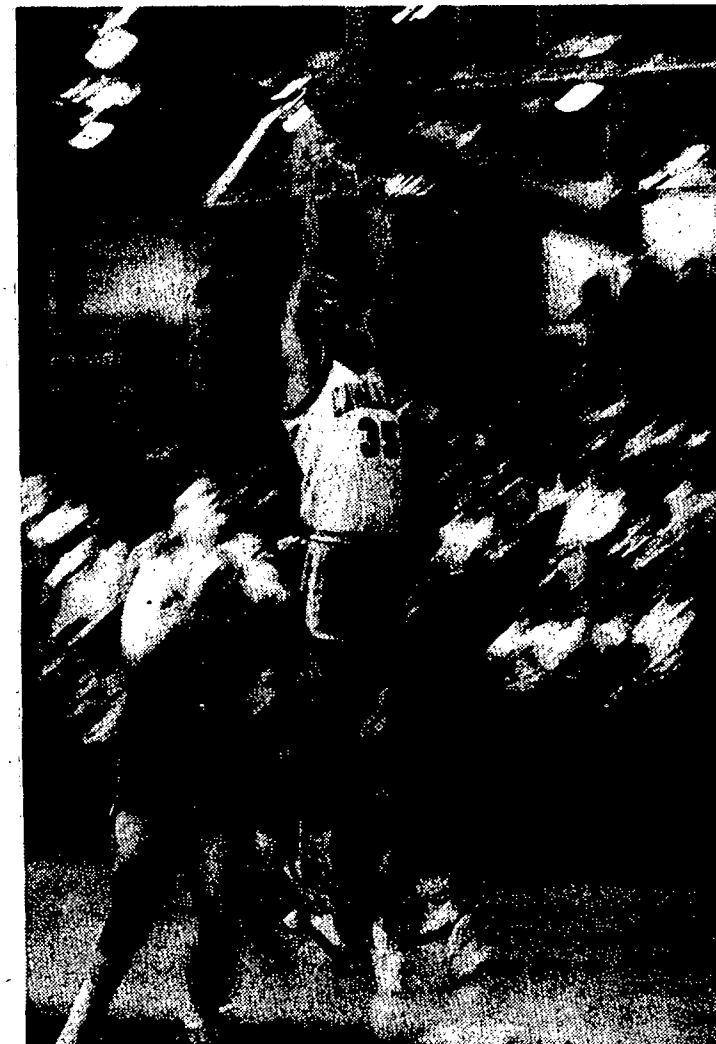

The Cavs and Tornadoes traded baskets throughout the nerve-racking, climatic game. The spectators were held in suspense all the way to the end of the game. During the last few seconds of the game, the Tornadoes scored and this put them in the lead by three. As the buzzer sounded to end the game, forward Keith Ingram was fouled; he made both foul shots to bring the Cavs within one point. However, the game was narrowly won by the King College Tornadoes.

King's coach Randy Unger felt that it was both a big win and a good win for the Tornadoes.

"We were very fortunate to win," added Unger, after complimenting Hall's excellent coaching of the Cavaliers.

Although the Cavs didn't pull it out, Hall feels that his team played a very hard-fought game. He believes that the team put forth a good effort, but that they are lacking some fundamentals that would have made a difference in the game.

After the Cavs loss to King Tornadoes, their record now stands at 5-10. The Cavalier's next home game will be Monday, February 6th. See you there!

Scott Compton shook the backboard and thrilled the crowd as he pushed down this two-handed dunk early in the second half.
