O'Neil Resigns UVA Post

Kathryn Kelley
Editor-in-Chief

University of Virginia President Robert O'Neil resigned Wednesday, Oct. 4, citing an opportunity in another office of the University as his reason for leaving.

O'Neil is leaving to direct the new Thomas Jefferson Center for the Protection of Free Expression. His resignation is effective no later than Dec. 1, 1990 but could be as early as July 1 of the year.

O'Neil said that he will divide his attention between the duties of president and director if a replacement is not found by July 1.

A search committee has been set by Rector of the Board of Visitors Joshua Darden to find O'Neil's replacement.

Darden said that the Board will also work with the Faculty Senate and students to form faculty and students search committees within the next two weeks.

Darden said of the claims that the Board of Visitors asked O'Neil to step down that "This was a decision that he made because of a wonderful opportunity."

O'Neil said the claims that he was pressured were unfounded. "The only pressure that I felt was that created by an opportunity of which I had been aware for some time. I was aware that for someone in the First Amendment field, the directorship represents an extraordinary opportunity," he said.

According to Darden, the evaluation of O'Neil's performance in June was a matter of public record. He added that since that time the Board has taken no action regarding O'Neil.

With respect to whether his advocacy of expansion had an effect on his decision to resign, O'Neil said he will report on the growth issue shortly after Thanksgiving. "Now if that sounds like someone who is anxious to escape addressing an issue, that is a very strange way of doing it," he added.

O'Neil said that helping the Board to resolve growth issues, guiding the biennial budget request through the General Assembly, and making sure a new dorm is cited and all the necessary commitments are in place represented some issues he will attempt to resolve before he leaves office.

"I'd like to leave a fairly clean plate if I can." O'Neil said.

SGA continues talks on name

In the SGA meeting on October 11, President Eric Bowman extensively addressed the issue of a name change for the college. The members of the SGA circulated and signed a petition in support of the name change.

This week, members of the SGA who have volunteered to man a station in the Zehmer Building will be encouraging students to sign this petition. Bowman also mentioned that letters to the editor concerning the issue will be written.

Other SGA decisions included the following:

•A resolution was passed to make CVC's SGA President a non-voting member of the University of Virginia's Student Council. If the proposal passes the UVA Student Council, the president of the SGA will be required to attend at least 2 meetings year.

•On October 18, the homecoming opinion survey will be presented.

•The SEED Center will sponsor a dance with a live band on November 4. The tickets will cost $4 for CVC students, while the cost at the door will be $5. The proceeds will go to the local Leukemia Society. The SGA voted to purchase 100 tickets at the cost of $400 to give to students on a first come, first serve basis.

•In Bowman's plan to make Halloween a week-long tradition, the following activities have been tentatively scheduled this year for Fri., Oct. 28 through Tues., Oct. 31: Fri.--Costume Dance; Sat.--Road Rally, Midnight Madness starting at 12:01; Mon.--Monday Night Football, Papa Joe's; Tues. SGA-Faculty Scrimmage, Hypnotist at Papa Joe's, Bonfire at McCrarry Field or behind Gym.

New sorority takes its place in CVC society

Beth Finne
Assistant Editor

This semester, a new sorority has found its way to the CVC campus, though its faces are ones we've seen around for quite a while.

The new sorority is Phi Sigma Sorority, formerly known as the Little Sisters of Phi Sigma Kappa. As of August, all Little Sisters were disbanded from the national fraternity. The official reason cited was that the Little Sisters were a strain on the fraternity's insurance.

According to CVC's organization, Phi Sigma Sorority will still be identified with their brothers, but will be a separate and equal entity. Before, the brothers had control over the sisters, and were able to attend their meetings and could even control who pledged the Little Sisters.

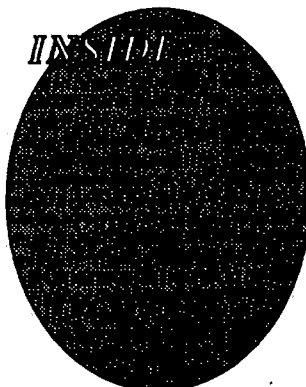

When it came time for them to strike out on their own, however, the brothers were of valuable assistance to them. Said Christine Bentley, "The brothers were very helpful and gave us advice about writing our new constitution and generally pointed us in the right

Students run for the hills on weekend because of boredom

To the Editor:
Clinch Valley College is boring! Unfortunately it's no a little boring it's completely boring. Maybe I'm wrong, but I don't think so. Activities that are offered such as intramurals and dances are simply not enough.

(as I have seen done) is actually sad. Does the administration really wonder why almost everyone who can go home on the weekend does? They shouldn't have to wonder, it's boring! Why would anyone want to stay?

The Greek organizations have tried to have activities, but they can only do so much. Almost always it seems as though they end up in trouble with the administration.

The grill on campus has also gone seriously downhill. It used to be a reasonably decent place to go, but not anymore. For those who don't believe me I will go back a couple of years when the student rock band "4-Play" entertained students in Papa Joes. The place was packed, everyone had a good time. Those who were old enough to drink could enjoy a brew, but regardless of that fact, everyone seemed to actually be having fun. Were those the "Good Ole Days", and are there no more "good ole days" to be had?

The Chancellor says he wants people to stay here in the weekends, could he possibly mean it? It's hard for me to believe. People do have to relieve themselves from terminal boredom. With enough boredom built up here in one week (enough to last the average person a lifetime) two days a week (the weekend) of relief would seem like a small amount of compensation. I'm not so sure if there is an immediate solution to this problem. There is however a solution lurking somewhere. Maybe people who actually realize the wants and needs of the students should be put in charge of selecting activities.

Seeing that there is absolutely no place in the area for students to go to socialize (no clubs that allow admittance to everyone with a college I.D.) maybe the administration should rethink the situation. Have they simply forgotten what it is like to be young?

College is a place to learn and that should not be forgotten, but it should also be a place that one can have fun and be able to look back on with fond memories. As it is right now, people may not look back at CVC with fond memories, they'll probably just remember how boring it was and that's sad. Hopefully things will change for the better at CVC, I certainly hope so before the number of students dwindles to nothing.

Respectfully,
James Ireson

Profanity offends accepted standards of society

Dear Editor:
It is disheartening to see how some people will, when a point strikes too close for comfort, resort to attacks on the person making the point rather than conceding the point or defending the opposing view with a sound counterpoint.

Some of the prohibitions are indirect (numerous passages speaking out against offending others); two passages are to the point against profanity (1 Timothy 4:7 and 1 Timothy 6:20).

The letter states that Mr. Davidson is sorry that Kelly Gene is offended by the language used by him and by the others on campus. That is commendable, even admirable. However, Kelly Gene is not the only one on campus or in the world, for that matter who is offended by that language.

Profane language is not only offensive to individuals. It is offensive to certain accepted standards. Most of these "colorful" words are listed and defined in the dictionary; they are described as being either obscene or vulgar. Checking the definitions of "obscene" and "vulgar" could prove to be very educational. (Source: The American Heritage Dictionary, Second College Edition.)

Who appointed Kelly Gene the keeper of your morals? That is no the question or the issue. The issue and the question is this: who gave you the right to violate our rights not to have our ears and our intelligence insulted by such language? To paraphrase the late Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., we have every right in the world to swing our fists at your nose, but we do not have the right to actually strike your nose.

You are supposed to enjoy life; the Bible does support this. And we do enjoy life to the extent possible and we do to have to harm or offend ourselves or others to accomplish this.

College name should honor ambitious SwVA woman

Dear Editor:
The question of changing the name of the college has arisen again, with either "Colgate Darden College" or "Darden College" as the proposals. Since changing the name from "Clinch Valley College" is important to many in our community, and Gov. Darden has already had a college of the University of Virginia named for him, I wish to suggest another alternative.

The college should certainly be named for someone important to the lives of people in southwest Virginia. It should also be named for someone who in her life and actions continued the best of Virginia's tradition. It would also be appropriate that a woman be recognized if the college is to change its name.

I propose that Clinch Valley College change its name to Mary Harris Jones College.

Seeds of friendship are to be cultivated in college

Jim Collie
Baptist Campus Minister

I have been reading an exciting novel by Marjorie Holmes. The Messiah is the final part of a trilogy about the life of Jesus. She weaves a rich tapestry against the Gospel accounts of the life and teachings of Jesus. I have just reached that part where Jesus becomes a fast friend of Lazarus. How good it is to have a friend.

How good it is to have friend and to be a friend. One of my favorite verses in the bible is John 15:15. Jesus is addressing the disciples. These fellows are both co-workers and friends. There must be a mutuality to friendship; that is why Jesus chose to call the disciples friends.

Friends do things for each other. But friends do not use friends. I have a coffee mug with Garfield and Odie on it. Garfield is riding on a skateboard pulled by Odie. The caption is "Use your friends wisely." I wonder how Odie would feel about that. Friends are to be treasured, not used.

Friends are to be trusted. Jesus trusted the twelve. One would prove unworthy of that trust. Trust is strong part of what it means to be a friend. We honor the trust of our friends by proving trustworthy.

College days are the time of many new friendships. Some of the strongest of lifelong friendships are made at this time. Remember John 15:15. To have a friend, you must be a friend.

Student sues twelve colleges for allegedly fixing tuition

Dacia Dorries

(CPS) — Taking his cue from a federal probe into whether some schools really do have to raise their tuition rates so fast each year, a Wesleyan University student has sued his school and 11 other private colleges, charging they illegally fixed their tuition prices.

Yet that is what some schools did, Kingssepp claimed.

In response to both the probe and the suit, moreover, "higher education institutions are running scared at this point," observed David Breneman, the former president of Kalamazoo College in Michigan now with the Brookings Institute in Washington, D.C.

Such practices, Kingssepp and other critics claim, explain why the schools, free of worry that the students they covet would

Student Roger Kingssepp claims the schools "engaged in a conspiracy to fix or artificially inflate the price of tuition and financial aid." Under federal anti-price-fixing laws, he's asking for triple damages on behalf of the 125,000 students allegedly harmed by the scheme.

to give us more information," said Wesleyan senior Brian Shott. Colleges, he complained, are acting like the victim, saying "we have to do it, it's not illegal."

"I don't think it's fair to students who economically might not be able to take advantage of certain schools to be forced out of the market," Kingssepp said.

Brookings' Breneman last year angered fellow campus leaders by asserting that some private colleges raise their tuition not because they need to, but because high fees make them look more selective and prestigious.

The suit apparently is based on a confidential Wesleyan memo, since made public, that indicates administrators knew tuition prices at 11 other schools for the 1988-89 year before the prices were made "official."

comment on the suit, because it's "totally separate from the government's actions," said spokeswoman Amy Brown.

It is illegal for competitors in any business to swap price information, or to divvy up potential customers.

She added investigators "won't rule out the possibility for requests for information from additional colleges in the future."

Pro-Art will present the Richmond Ballet performing the classic story of Coppelia

Pro-Art Association will present the Richmond Ballet in a performance of the classic story ballet, Coppelia, November 9 at 7:30 p.m. in Powell Valley High School, Big Stone Gap.

take advantage of lower prices at another campus, have raised their tuition at a pace higher than the inflation rate for nine consecutive years.

The talks, Kingssepp said in his lawsuit, "eliminate any real price choices" for students.

In addition to Wesleyan, Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Columbia, Brown, Princeton and Stanford universities Amherst, Dartmouth and Williams colleges, and the University of Pennsylvania are named in Kingssepp's suit.

"I think they're guilty," said Wesleyan sophomore Heather Rhoades. "It's pretty obvious."

Rhoades applied to six private colleges, including Stanford. The aid packages offered to her were so similar that money "wasn't really a factor."

Justice Department officials refused

Don't assume that colleges will put the students' best interests ahead of the institution.

If anything comes of the Justice Department investigation, the Kingssepp suit or any subsequent suits, some thanks should go to former Secretary of Education William Bennett, Breneman said.

Bennett, now heading the "war on drugs," made a habit of accusing colleges of setting tuition artificially high, because financial aid would fill the gap between what students could pay and what they end up paying.

"My sense is that a lot of his public comments helped set the environment" for price-fixing investigations, Breneman figured.

This year, students are paying an average of 5-to-9 percent more for college than in 1988-89. And by the year 2005, a college education will cost $62,894 a year, predicts Paine Webber, the investment firm.

"It's important for families not to be so naive," said Kalman Chaney, president of Campus Consultants, Inc., a Manhattan-based financial aid consulting firm. "You have to deal with colleges as you do any other service or product. Don't assume that colleges will put the students' best interests ahead of the institution."

INTERCOLLEGIATE FOOTBALL

Committee set up to investigate the possibility of CVC football

Sandra Stone
Staff Writer

For many years, students have approached the Chancellor of Clinch Valley College with a question concerning football. Will Clinch Valley College ever develop an intercollegiate football team?

The answer to this question is unknown at this time because the issue at hand is if intercollegiate football is feasible. Can CVC afford to establish a football team? We do not know.

Fourteen people, representing each county, have been chosen and assembled into a committee to decide an answer to this question.

During this semester, the committee met for the first time on the evening of October 4. At this meeting, the members questioned how viable the development of a CVC football team would be.

The possibility of a football team opened the door to many other questions. Could CVC raise the money to finance a team? Would CVC be able to secure an intercollegiate schedule? Where would the games be played? Could the college possibly obtain a contract to use a local high school football field?

When Chancellor Knight was asked about a rumor concerning the sponsoring of a CVC football team by a company, he replied that he knew nothing of such a proposal.

The football team committee was divided into sub-committees, consisting of three members each, to consider the different aspects of the question. Once all notes have been collected, the committee will set itself to the task of arriving at a conclusion.

Eleven members of this committee include the following: William H. Miller of Bristol, Chairperson; Ralph Cummins from Clintwood; Larry Bales from Abingdon; Ralph Hagy from Oakwood; Perry Cook from Richlands; Carroll Dale from Wise; Jim Wayne Childress from Vansant; Michael McGlothlin from Grundy; Michael Quillen from Charlottesville; David Jones from Pennington; and Doug Humphreys from Norton.

Of the remaining four members, three are faculty of Clinch Valley and one is a student: Richard Davidson from Wise, Professor of Education; Wayne Edwards from Wise, Assistant professor of Mathematics; Rex Baird from Wise, Professor of Biology; and Erick Bowman, President of CVC's SGA.

This committee will be meeting throughout the semester to investigate all the aspects of the questions with which it is faced. If the committee's findings show that the establishment of a football team is, in fact, possible, the idea will be presented to the faculty and students of CVC.

Making the purpose of the football committee clear, Chancellor Knight stressed that the committee was "not going to decide on whether or not we play, but if it's feasible."

direction."

When they wrote their new constitution, which incidentally was accepted by the SGA and ratified by all the sisters two weeks ago, they holed up for one weekend for a "constitutional convention". The sisters now have a new adviser, Jean Isaacs who works in the library, a new creed, symbol, and principles.

At the moment there are, all told, nine Phi Sigma Sorority sisters. Their names are Andrea Baker, Christine Bentley, Rachel Hegedus, Aimee Hunt, Liz Kelly, Milla Lopez, Wendy Pendleton, Jennifer Sizemore, and Ellen Smith.

Their principles are sisterhood, scholarship, statesmanship, and self-esteem.

Although they don't intend to rush until next semester, after things have settled down, they would like the students to know a little bit more about them. They are involved in local community activities like a Halloween party for local children every year at the Holiday Inn in Norton, collecting food for the Food Bank, participating in the MBOC Walk-a-thon in April, and adopting grandparents at Heritage Hall in Wise.

Says Ellen Smith, "We feel we're really on the right track, pulling this thing together. We just need now to get in touch with alumni and get them involved with us."
