Bond issue may fund "connector" project

A state bond issue may provide CVC funds for projects, such as building a "connector" between Zehmer Hall and the Science Building.

According to CVC Associate Dean George Culberson, along with the "connector", Del. Richard Cranwell (D)-Roanoke proposed a bond that could provide for Zehmer Hall renovations, a John Cook Wylie addition, a new maintenance building, and new handicapped accesses.

If funded, the "U"-shaped "connector" will join the west-side of Zehmer and Science. It will house classrooms as well as the new Southwest Economic and Educational Development Center.

Equipped with an elevator, the building will make Zehmer and Science handicapped assessable, Culberson said.

The state may provide $2.1 million for Zehmer Hall renovations.

"The Zehmer project is possible because of the age of the building. When state buildings reach a certain age, they are ready for renovation," Culberson said.

The library addition and new maintenance building, according to Culberson, were proposed through a state planning process that uses a set formula to assess construction needs.

In the proposal, $1.4 million may be set aside for the library project while $400,000 could be allotted for the maintenance building.

An addition $221,000 may be used for ramps and other structures that would make campus more handicapped assessable.

Gov. Douglas Wilder has proposed a different bond plan that would fund all projects except the "connector".

The various bond issue plans are now being discussed in General Assembly.

If approved by the Assembly, the bond plan will need a referendum to be passed.

"I was raped," student said

Editor's Note: It is The Highland Cavalier's policy not to publish names of rape victims. Names have been changed to protect all parties involved.

Lisa used to jog by herself on campus. Now she doesn't even like to go in the bathroom alone.

Last semester, Lisa said she was raped and beaten by three male CVC students. They allegedly followed her into a room taking advantage of her intoxicated condition.

According to Lisa, a local doctor treated her for bruises found on the neck, arms, back, leg, and pelvis region saving, "she had never seen anybody bruised as I was."

"I laid on the examining table and cried the whole time," Lisa said.

Besides physical abuse, Lisa was also emotionally affected by the alleged incident.

"I went through a stage that I didn't feel anything for anybody," Lisa said. "Anything I cared about and I thought could hurt me, I'd push them away."

Lisa's friends have also noticed the change in her personality.

"She is not the same person that she was before it happened. She was very trusting, honest, open, just friends with everybody," Lisa's roommate said. "She never has a kind thing to say about people anymore. She won't say a kind word about any guy I know."

Stress from the alleged incident almost caused Lisa to withdrawal from CVC. But school was less painful than returning home.

"I couldn't go home and look my Mom in the face everyday. I have just as much trouble facing her as I do them (alleged attackers). She used to jog by herself on campus."

Students discharged from campus

CVC students Mr. Ali and Chris Baker were given two days to vacate Crockett Dormitory on Feb. 5 after the Judicial Board of Resident Judiciary said that their behavior endangered the health and safety of others.

All and Baker were allegedly accosting fellow residents and defacing school property.

They accused us of harassment and vandalism," Ali said.

The charges presented by the Judicial Board were found under the Residential Student Handbook presented to students when they entered their prospective dormitory.

The defendants in the case were charged under XVII, Residence Hall Judicial Board Article C, No. 9.

Judiciary Board Chairperson Amy Clark speculated that there is some question as to whether the defense was knowledgeable about the Residential Student Handbook guidelines for harassment. Under XVII the Harassment Policy states:

"Trust and tolerance for ideas, values, and beliefs shaped the foundation of this institution. Any harassment because of race, sex, religion, handicap, or age is against college policy and federal law."

Freshman SGA representative, Karl Leach, said that the trial was "a miscarriage of justice" and that people prosecuting Chris Baker and Mr. Ali are biased.

Clark cites in a letter to The Highland Cavalier, the following response:

"Correct procedure was followed in every aspect of the hearing that took place on February 5. Both Parties involved in the hearing were given numerous opportunities before the hearing began to make any special requests known, in terms of problems with any persons serving on the board."

"It should be common knowledge that when persons are involved in hearings, association with any organization, whether it be persons on the board, or complainants or defendants, becomes irrelevant."

Contest promotes STD awareness

Lori Little
Assistant Editor

Ever since Magic Johnson tested positive for HIV in 1985, the nation has shocked by the news of AIDS. AIDS is real and it can be contracted through sexual practices.

The Student Health Services of CVC is educating interested students how to avoid sexually transmitted diseases (STD's). STD's include AIDS testing, risky practices, and where condoms are used. Students may also be required to come back to school one to two weeks before classes start in the fall to receive training.

The Student Health Services is also implementing a Peer Education Program. This program allows students to be trained on presenting campus sexual health information such as consent, substance abuse, and sexual orientation.

NAIA National poll ignores Lady Cavaliers' upset win

Michelle Napier
Co-Editor

Last week's NAIA Top 25 National Poll ignored the Lady Cavs victory over the fourth best team in the nation, King College Lady Tornadoes. The Lady C's 57-50 season opener win was still marked with a less than desirable 38-32 record, which has held on the top 25 since the season began. The Lady C's have been performing quite well, however, and are currently ranked 16th in the nation. The Lady C's have a chance to make a bigger impact in the national polls if they can improve their record.

The Lady C's were led in scoring in the Kayla Capps's 26 point performance. The Lady C's also had a strong defense, limiting the Lady Tornadoes to just 32 points. The Lady C's are currently on a 5-game winning streak and are looking to maintain their momentum.

Season win mark two wins away

The Lady Cavs moved within three spots of CVC's season victory record and pasted the Lady Cobras of Warren Wilson College Saturday, 68-54. Despite 23-4 season, the Lady Cavs extended their winning streak to five games and their five-game home record run to 24-1. If the Lady Cavs can win two of their last three games, they will set a new season win record for the team.

CVC struggled early in the game without the services of starting point guard Paula "Cricket" Adam's. The Lady Cavs were able to go out and to make her first start in the tournament. McDonald should fit in nicely with the Lady Cavs. The Lady Cavs are currently ranked 16th in the nation.

Local band wins contest

David Woodrum
Staff Writer

Trespasser, a local rockabilly band, has had some good fortune lately.

After winning a WDRC sponsored contest at the Starburst Bar in Clintwood, Will Henson and fellow band members of Trespasser rocked in on their prize, 16 hours recording time at the Nashville Studio.

Henson has several memories of the event that took place late last November. Perhaps the best of these was using the same restroom as Johnny Cash, Henson said.

The producer told the band to do everything he said and the overall place was described as being "pretty cool."

One of the highlights of the recording sessions was the breaks. Henson said they would walk around the block and people would point out various country music stars for him even though he had no idea who they were talking about.

Trespasser has other good news; they are putting out a single.

De La Soul

Greer Gymnasium was rocking Friday, February 7, and yet there were only 40 plus students within its walls. Students were treated with a concert by the hip hopping of De La Soul.

The concert was slated to start at 8:00 p.m. but due to sound and lighting difficulties, the concert did not begin until 8:00 p.m.

The treat of the whole event seemed to be the ecstatic performance of M.C. Ruff & Obsession. The lyrics of new hits like "No Half Steppin" and "I Can Make U Dance" had students wanting more even after they stepped off stage.

The intensity climaxed once De La Soul hit the stage after an 8 minute delay. The Bohemian funksters resurrected their cryptic, funky sound..."Saturday's," and "Ring Ring Ring (Ha Ha Hey)."

The highlight of the performance was when the group performed their infamous "Me, Myself, and I.

The concert was controlled by twenty security guards made up of the Highland Cavalier football team. There was only one incident the whole night, involving a student jumping on stage. That student was escorted out of the gym and was not allowed to return.

The alcohol policy was in effect and there did not appear to be a problem. George Burgen summed up the events of the evening by saying "the concert was a total success."

knowing something is wrong," Lisa said.

According to Lisa, both friends and school officials tried to convince her to go to the authorities with her story.

Lisa said she did not want her family and classmates to know about the alleged incident. She said she just wants to forget about it.

"The only reason I'm doing this interview is because I want it to be safer to be here... All I have is a few bruises and a few internal scars, but the next person may not be so lucky," Lisa said.

As advice to other women on campus, Lisa said, "Don't ever drink by yourself. Lock your doors."
