Collins resigns as hall director

It is not uncommon for a college to lose an RA (Residence Assistant) over the course of a year. However, when a college loses a hall director, it becomes an event worth noting.

Troy Collins was the first hall director at Clinch Valley's newest residence hall, tentatively named New Hall.

Collins was hall director for Honors, Wise Inn, Townhouse Apartments, and the New Hall for a short period of time, and with a blink of the eye, he vanished. His departure surprised some but for Cynthia Crabtree, a New Hall resident, "I expected him to be gone by fall break."

Housing Director Mary Eubanks could give only the bare facts about Collins' departure. She stated that she drove him to the bus station on Sept. 5 and does not know his future plans. When questioned about his reasons for leaving, she could not give details, saying that she could not discuss personal issues.

Eubanks did make it very clear that Collins' decision to leave was his decision alone and the administration had nothing to do with his choice. Eubanks simply said, "He just decided to leave CVC."

Indeed, speculation and rumors are sure to continue, like those of the past weeks. Those who met Collins were sometimes shocked by his behavior.

Senior, Essie Lester, a resident at the New Hall, said that Collins made rude remarks in front of her and her roommates about religion and always seemed to be nosy. Lester said that Collins would pry into their bedrooms.

Rebecca Grumbacher, a second floor resident, commented on Collins' position saying, "He didn't act like an authority, but I think he was pressured to leave."

"I didn't like his attitude," Phil Hayes

Organizations encourage college students to vote

(CPS) - Democrats want you. Republicans want you. Rock stars and celebrities want you. Public affairs organizations want you. Politicians want you.

What those organizations want from you is simple: If you are 18 or older, you can vote. But to vote, you must be registered. And if you are the typical college undergraduate, between the ages of 18 and 24, you represent a segment of American culture that is perceived as being not likely to vote or to participate in the political process.

So college and university campuses nationwide have been targeted by private and public interest groups to register students and to get them to the polls on November 3.

"Students tend to feel left out. Candidates don't appear to be addressing issues that are of concern to students," said Becky Cain, president of the National League of Women Voters. "On the 20th anniversary of the right for 18-year-olds to vote, this group has the least percentage voter turnout than any other age group."

"Get them on the rolls, get them to the polls," said Mike Dolan, field director for the California-based Rock the Vote, a non-profit, non-partisan organization that has organized student voter registration drives nationwide.

Top issues that appear to be of concern to college students on the national level include the economy, the environment and abortion rights, activists say.

If students want to address these concerns, they must first register to vote, registration organizers say. That way, they can vote for candidates who most closely represent their ideals and ideas of what government should be, and what issues the representatives should address.

According to the Census Bureau, 28 million men and women in the 18-24 age group are eligible to vote, and approximately 40 percent of this group is registered. Among college students who are registered, 80 percent vote, said Jamie Harmon, president of the College Democrats of America.

"Many students don't feel they are a part of the American community. They don't have families yet, they don't have sunk-in roots, so they are not as politically active," Harmon said. "Political participation increases with age. We want to show students today that the political and governmental system isn't a joke."

The College Democrats are organizing a Victory Vote program on campuses nationwide, with the goal of registering 50,000 students this fall — ideally as Democrats. Having targeted about 500 college and universities in 15 states, the College Democrats plan to hold rallies, get publicity and have politicians form the local and national levels speak to

Opinion/Editorial

The HC asks you:

RIGHT NOW, who would you vote for?

"I'm not voting for either one. Their political aspirations are not concerned with the people. They're talking from the side of their necks."
-Melvin Jones

"Once again I'm gonna vote for Walter Moadale. I think his choice of Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate was a sound political decision."
-Jeremy Parrish

"I would definitely vote for George Bush because he served his country and he is also the incumbent candidate. Also, I am a Republican."
-Randall Osbourne

Fire alarm pranks are more trouble than they're worth

Wesley Adams
Staff Reporter

On September 4, at about 12:30 a.m., the fire alarms sounded at Honors A. The Klaxon noise arose many people who had turned in to get plenty of sleep for their 8:00 a.m. classes. They had to wait outside for the better part of a half hour until the Campus Police could deactivate the alarm. Then, no one could fall asleep until they finished resetting the alarm. And the reason for all those blurry-eyed students Friday morning was that someone pulled the fire alarm for no reason at all.

There are three reasons to NOT cause a false alarm; policy, social, and safety. It is against CVC policy to mess with the fire alarms except in a real emergency. When you are caught setting off a false fire alarm, you will face disciplinary action by the Residence Hall

Judicial Board.

Pulling the fire alarm can damper your social life. By triggering the fire alarm, it can put the whole hall in the bad graces of the RA's and hall directors until you are caught. And pulling the alarm late at night will make your fellow residents very ticked off with you.

Finally, setting off false alarms puts people at risk. After too many false alarms, they start to lose their effectiveness. People start to ignore the alarm, rather like the boy who cried "Wolf!" Any delay in evacuation in the event of fire can cause serious injury or death.

The fire alarms are not toys and none of us are supposed to act like children. Leave them alone unless they are needed. If you see anyone tampering with the alarms, notify your RA, the Housing Office, or the Campus Police.

Weekly Beefs

The following will be a weekly feature in The Highland Cavalier. These questions are composed from two boxes located in Cantrell Cafeteria and Zehner lounge. Any questions that you may have about CVC can be submitted anonymously in these boxes. Five of the most timely and pertinent questions will be chosen for Weekly Beefs.

- Why isn't there a change machine at the Wise Inn?
- Why isn't there a menu for the cafeteria?
- Why is there is nothing to do around here? We need more activities on the weekend.
- Why do the cheerleaders cheer to the fence instead of the fans?
- How come the water gives you bad breath?

The Highland Cavalier encourages all Virginia residents who have not yet registered to vote to do so. The Wise County Courthouse will be open to register voters on Wednesday, Sept. 23, from 8:30 a.m.-8:00 p.m. and on Saturday, Oct. 3, from 9:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. in the Registrar's Office. October 3 is the last day to register. You may also obtain an absentee ballot there.

POLLING HORRORSCOPES

by Dave Woodrum

Happy Birthday: Your special day will present you with gifts, love, fortune, and coupon for $1.50 off a fabric softener you never use.

Aries: While taking a walk in the park you will be approached by a stranger in a snazzy business suit and asked what you would do for a Klondike bar.

Taurus: Your key to wealth lies in your backyard garden hose and your intellect will come from reading out dated lottery tickets.

Gemini: Don't worry if your cat disowns you this week, it will be captured by a strange UFO and questioned.

Cancer: While digging around in a dumpster you will find a mysterious vegetable that resembles the face of Paul McCartney.

Leo: After staying up for days you will be perplexed from dreams involving Cindy Crawford, Captain Kangaroo, your uncle, and a cup of coffee from Grand Central Station.

Virgo: You will meet the mate of your dreams but all that you will be able to do is ask directions to Arby's in broken English.

Libra: Stay out of the kitchen after mid-night or risk discovery of the sink ogres.

Scorpio: Career disaster unfolds when you discover that your partner in crime turns out to be an escaped Mandrill from the local zoo.

Sagittarius: This is your lucky day! While walking down the street you will run into a tall spanish woman that informs you that a powerful nation capable of vast technological feats is located somewhere in the middle of your driveway.

Capricorn: The prize that you saved up 30 cereal box tops for turns out to be an Alien Artifact.

Aquarius: The visions of giant angry jelly beans coming after you aren't real. In fact, if you would stop smoking the plant food then you wouldn't get these silly delusions.

Pisces: You will be forced to see a shrink when you attempt to find "The Wizard of Oz" in the non-fiction section of your library.

Thought for the Day: Perhaps Broccoli is merely a Martian form of Calliflower.

Thought for sometime next week: If mirrors could talk, who would be more vain, the mirror or the viewer?

Apologies: I would like to apologize to all of you groovy SAQITARIUS READERS FOR NOT HAVING A PREVIOUS LAST COLUMN. FLYING SAUCERS HAD TEMPORARILY TAKEN CONTROL OVER MY COSMIC POWERS.

students. Tony Zagotta, national chairman of the College Republicans, said polls indicate the 18-24 age group favor Republican views toward government, society and the economy. His group will be working at the grassroots level on campuses, and won't be using celebrities or rock shows to attract potential Republican registrants.

College Republicans will be going door to door this fall to get students to register or vote by absentee ballot, Zagotta said. He called the Republican one-on-one approach a "tremendous opportunity" to get students to register in his party. The Republicans, he said, see students' concerns as being the economy, foreign policy and abortion. He said polls have shown the 18-24 age group is "not comfortable" with abortion.

Dolan, field director of Rock the Vote, said his organization is also working at the grassroots level to get students to register. Rock the Vote was founded in 1990 by leading record labels and musicians in response to perceived threats to artistic expression. It has since been broadened to include voter registration, especially for young adults, Dolan said.

Musicians and movie celebrities will go to campuses and hold rallies to make students aware of the political process and urge them to register.

"Having stars and musicians involved is intensive. It makes voter registration sexier," he said. "Celebrities want to get involved, and when they do, it makes political participation a little cooler."

Rock the Vote has registered approximately 100,000 young people in the past two years, he said, and many college and university students are included in the numbers. What concerns young people, he said, is having access to "the system," or being heard by politicians.

"We have seen the basic issue, and that is empowerment and access to the system," Dolan said. "Many politicians don't want young people voting, since young voters have no patterns of voting and are unpredictable. That makes politicians nervous."

The minimum legal age to register is 18. If a student goes away to attend school, he or she may register to vote in the town or city where school is located. However, the states have varying laws for residency requirements; there is no national law establishing uniform registration laws for all 50 states. An option is to vote by absentee ballot if students are registered in their home states, Cain said.
