Ellsworth resigns as Vice Chancellor and Dean

Devan Horne
Copy Editor

Vice Chancellor and Dean, Lucius F. Ellsworth has resigned from CVC to head to the UVA campus in Charlottesville, VA.

Ellsworth, a graduate of the University of Delaware Graduate School where he earned a degree in history, will attend UVA as a senior scholar and professor of history.

Before Ellsworth came to Clinch Valley College in 1990, he was associate executive director for academic affairs for the Tennessee Higher Education Commission. From 1984 to 1986, he held a similar position with Florida's nine-campus university system.

From 1969 to 1984, he combined teaching and administrative duties at the University of West Florida. In addition, he has written and/or co-edited eight books, and numerous articles on economic and business history.

Ellsworth felt resigning was the best alternative solution under the current circumstances. "I was thinking about the appropriate thing to do when there was a change of chancellors...I thought the best thing to do was to let the incoming chancellor choose his or her own vice chancellor," said Ellsworth.

Ellsworth feels that he has "filled the shoes" of Vice Chancellor and Dean successfully judging from the opinions of several students and faculty. "That is for them to judge, not me," said

Ellsworth.

"Under Dr. Ellsworth's leadership, Clinch Valley has had increasing success in recruiting a strong and diversified faculty and staff," said UVA President John T. Casteen. For example, Casteen noted nearly 40 percent of the faculty are women, and most of them were hired during Ellsworth's tenure as the college's chief academic officer. He has also helped attract more African Americans to the college.

Casteen also praised Ellsworth's work in establishing partnerships with community colleges and school districts in Southwest Virginia, including a new institutional policy for transfers from the region's two-year colleges. Ellsworth was named co-chair of a state Council of Higher Education standing committee on transfer policies.

His other achievements of administration include the development of a state-mandated assessment program, a new center for instructional improvement, increased funds for faculty development, the formation of a faculty senate, and improved student services on campus, said Casteen.

Although he is leaving, he said he has enjoyed himself here. "I met the person that I'm happily married to - I love the people in the area," said Ellsworth.

Although his replacement has not been found, he hopes that he or she will continue to carry on with plans currently in the making, such as the 21 Century plan and he hopes the funding will improve so they can spend it on the plan.

Ellsworth also hopes to see new building a strong library, and graduate programs in the future.

"I hope my replacement will continue

My only regret is that I can't do everything in a day or a year," said Ellsworth.

Riots and film galvanize black empowerment

Karen Neustadt
College Press Service

College campuses throughout the nation will celebrate Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday Jan. 18, marking the end of a year of unprecedented black empowerment fueled by the fires of Los Angeles and inspired by a film about the life of Malcolm X.

Racial incidents and institutional neglect brought a flurry of peaceful protests, sit-ins and demonstrations by mobilized African-American students, some of whom say they have a powerful new sense of identity and purpose.

While King is being honored on most campuses, his message of peace that galvanized the civil rights movement of the '60s has been modified by the more urgent motto "by any means necessary" adopted by slain black leader Malcolm X.

Some students suggest that resurgent interest in Malcolm X clothing, hats, buttons and T-shirts is connected with feelings of disenchantment with current black leadership.

"People are more aware of their heritage. I think people are finally beginning to recognize we don't have to sit at the back of the bus, that we are a viable presence," said Iyailu Moses, director of the African-American Cultural Center at North Carolina State University

The New Black Empowerment

The L.A. riots and a movie about the life of a famous black activist have given African-American students new purpose in the fight against racism, although followers of Malcolm X and Martin Luther King Jr. disagree sometimes about the direction protests should take.

Bush leaves office... A UN job for George?

B.Wesley Adams
Staff Writer

Since it is too early in Governor, I mean President, Clinton's administration to write anything, I'd like to take some time to write about George Bush.

Most former presidents ride off into the sunset to work on their Presidential libraries, write their memoirs, and enjoy their much deserved retirement. But I feel George Bush still has a lot to offer before he retires to the old Presidents' rest home. With fifty years of public service experience locked up in his head, it would be a shame to let that resource go to waste. We should find George a job and put that skill and know-how to work.

The question is what job is George Bush most qualified for. I'm sure that he's over-qualified to work at a fast food joint. And despite his experience in the oil industry, I think it is best that we find him a job in the public sector.

First, he is an able administrator, as his years as CIA Director and with the GOP National Committee have proven. From his years as an ambassador to China and to the UN, George has become a master at international affairs, as demonstrated during his presidency. However, Bush is more comfortable with appointed positions than he is campaigning for elected offices. Secondly, he is not very effective in partisan politics. When he had a 90%+ public approval rating, he still couldn't effectively push his programs through Congress. George was too kind and gentle to play political hardball.

So we have a whiz at international affairs, administrative duties, and handling appointed positions. But he should stay away from elected offices that deal with partisan politics. Wait a minute. I've got it! The perfect job for George Bush: Secretary-General of the United Nations. It's an appointed post in an organization with no political parties. The Secretary-General oversees the UN Secretariat, the UN's administrative bureaucracy. It is high time we have had an American UN Chief. The UN is almost fifty years old, but there has never been an American UN Sec-Gen, despite the fact that the USA pays almost a quarter of the UN budget. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali's term ends in 1996, and he hasn't been too popular, as protests in Bosnia and Somalia have shown.

Let us write, call or fax Bill and tell him to push the UN Secretary Council to nominate a man who will tame the UN's bureaucracy. A man who knows his way around the international community. A man who will stand up to tyrants and help the downtrodden. Our man, George Bush.

Student expresses opinion of homosexuals in the military

Ray Board
Staff Writer

Homosexuals in the military? President Clinton supports the idea that homosexuals should be allowed to serve this country in the military. The Chiefs of Staff do not support this concept. But is this issue important to the average, ordinary citizen?

The military is not a democracy; it is a hierarchy. There are no labor unions to protect the enlisted and each person must obey the orders of his or her superior. People are put into situations in which they have no control; made to sleep in tents with twelve or more people, sleep in open bay berthing with 100 or more, share the same bathrooms (including showers) and basically live and work in very close quarters. Males and females are separated for obvious reasons. These situations are controlled as much as possible and still tensions rise and tempers flare.

The military quit segregating blacks and whites before the civil rights bills were passed, but in many situations blacks and whites were never segregated because it was impossible. The homosexuals would scream discrimination if homosexuals and heterosexuals were segre-

Letters to the editor

Student submits apology

To: Students, faculty and administration of Clinch Valley College of the University of Virginia

As a result of an incident occurring Sept. 3, 1992, I would like to admit my error and apologize to everyone for violating college policy. In writing this letter, I am not merely clearing my conscience. The writing of this letter is a sanction handed down by the Administrative Hearing Board; because of the appeals process at Clinch Valley and my inability to meet with my attorney, this letter is being written four months after the incident occurred.

I was in violation of Rule #4 on page 78 of The Source; the rule states, "State law prohibits...possession of an alcoholic beverage by a person under the legal drinking age." As a minor, my possession of beer (less than 12 cans) in the trunk of an automobile made me in violation of policy.

I was also in violation of Rule #9 on page 77 of The Source; this rule states, "Violation of college policies or of college regulation, including regulations concerning the registration of student organizations and the use of college facilities."

Although I admit my error and I am truly sorry that the incident occurred, I feel that my punishment was more severe than the sanctions stated on page 81 of The Source which states that for the first offense a letter of warning. I can see no positive results in making this violation a public matter. It appears to me that the only purpose is to embarrass me further. There have been many alcohol violations on the campus of Clinch Valley and to my knowledge no other student has had to write a letter of this nature to be published in The Highland Cavalier. I realize that the Administrative Hearing Board may use its own discretion in applying sanctions but nowhere in the student code does it say that discretion may exceed the offenses as listed under sanctions applicable to residential students. Further, it is clear that additional sanctions may be used depending upon the violation itself. There is nothing in the handbook that allows additional sanctions depending upon who the student is or what position they might occupy.

Dr. C. Brooks reviewed my appeal to the case and denied any appeal. She also explained that "failure to complete this sanction will result in additional disciplinary action."

After a telephone conversation with Dr. Ellsworth, my attorney was informed that further appeals and questions would have to be taken up with the University of Virginia's General Counsel in Charlottesville, Va. After discussing the situation with my parents and attorney, we decided not to pursue the issue although my attorney and parents feel that the punishment did not fit the crime.

Negative Campaigning results in freedom of speech lawsuit

(College Press Service) SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A Santa Monica College student who was barred from taking office as student government president because of negative campaigning has been reinstated by a federal judge.

School officials also agreed to pay Patrick Ortega $33,500 in legal fees stemming from his lawsuit, which charged that his freedom of speech had been violated.

During the fall election, Ortega placed an advertisement in the student newspaper with a headline, "This Mouse cost you $15,000," and said the student government spent the money for a "junker" to Walt Disney World. The ad was in reference to a student government association meeting held at the theme park near Orlando, Fla., last summer.

The college's board of trustees rescheduled another election in October to try to settle the dispute; any form of advertising could be used.

Ortega sued, saying his freedom of speech had been violated. A federal judge issued a temporary restraining order that installed Ortega as president of Associated Students.

College officials agreed not to fight the suit and paid Ortega $33,500 for legal fees and a $2,000 stipend as the student member of the college's Board of Trustees.

Rape on Florida campus results in sexual assault charges

(College Press Service) DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Bethune Cookman College officials are studying ways to make the residence halls more secure after four Bethune Cookman students were arrested and charged with sexually assaulting a 14-year-old girl on campus.

The victim told that on Dec. 1 a man stopped to talk to her at a gas station in Daytona Beach. They drank alcohol and smoked marijuana in a campus parking lot. She was then taken to a dorm room and sexually assaulted, police said. After reviewing the case, prosecutors decided to charge the men with assault rather than rape.

Arrested and charged with lewd and lascivious assault upon a child were Octavia Samon Jefferson, 19 of Vero Beach, Fla.; Marlin Keith Jones, 18, of Pompano Beach, Fla.; Christopher Jason Graddy, 19, of Lakeland, Fla.; and Albert Simpson, 19, of Jacksonville, Fla. All four students lived in residence halls at Bethune Cookman.

A college spokeswoman said the administration is investigating the security in the dorms. She said the suspects were automatically suspended and will remain so until the case is adjudicated.

Violence rocks nation's campuses

John Williams
 College Press Service

A shooting spree at Simon's Rock College that left a student and a professor dead was one of several recent violent incidents at colleges and universities nationwide during December.

Two Mississippi State University students also were shot to death while on a date, and five students died in an apartment house fire near Southern Illinois University.

Wayne Lo, 18, a student at Simon's Rock College, an exclusive school for gifted students in Great Barrington, Mass., was arrested and charged with two counts of murder, four counts of assault with intent to commit murder and four counts of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon.

Lo, of Billings, Mont., gave no motive for the shootings, police said. He is accused of killing Nacunan Saez, a language professor from Argentina, and Galen Gibson, an 18-year-old sophomore from Gloucester, Mass. Saez died of a gunshot wound to the head and Gibson was shot in the chest. A security guard and three other students were wounded in the Dec. 14 melee, police said.

Lo allegedly purchased a semiautomatic rifle and ammunition at a gun shop in nearby Pittsfield, Mass., on the day of the shootings, police said. The shooting began at a campus security booth, where a guard was critically wounded and the professor killed. Gibson was killed in the library, where another student was wounded, and two more students were shot and wounded in a dormitory.

Lo then went to the student union and called the police department, officials said. Several students said Lo had become withdrawn in weeks prior to the shootings.

"We are particularly concerned about the process by which Mr. Lo obtained a gun and ammunition," said Berkshire District Attorney Gerard Downing. "The apparent ease with which one can obtain dangerous weapons remains a grave concern to all who witnessed the savagery of the Simon's Rock shootings."

Meanwhile, police in Starkville, Miss. were investigating the murders of two Mississippi State University students who were shot and killed near the school Dec. 11.

A university spokesman said there were few clues to the murder of Jon Stephen Streckler, 19, of Natchez, Miss., or his girlfriend, Pamela Tiffany Miller, 22, of Jackson, Miss., who were on a date. Both had been shot in the head.

"There are no known motivations, no arrests, no clues," the spokesman said. A murder-suicide has been ruled out because of evidence at the scene.

Officials in Carbondale, Ill., were investigating the deaths of five foreign students at Southern Illinois University. They died when fire swept through their apartment. Arson was the cause of the blaze, officials said.

Four of the students died in the fire on Dec. 6, and the fifth died of her injuries the next day. At least 14 other students were hurt in the blaze, including some who were injured when they jumped out of the three-story building's windows to escape thick smoke.

The dead students were identified as Mazlina Ab Wahid, 28, of Malaysia; Kimioko Ajioka, 25, of Osaka, Japan; Ronald A. Moy, 23, originally from China but more-recently living in Chicago; Cheng Teck Wong, 23, of Malaysia; and Lai Hung Tam, 23, of Kowloon, Hong Kong.

New Orleans, LA- Making their third appearance in the National Invitational Flag Football Championship, the Cavs advanced to the round of sixteen. CVC was the smallest of nearly 200 teams participating in the tournament, including defending champion, Southeastern Louisiana University. Rapid Fire opened the show by defeating Valdosta State, 21-12. Rapid Fire dropped Central Missouri, 29-23, in a close game to advance into the field of 64. The next opponent for CVC was ACC powerhouse, North Carolina State University. Both offensive units were in fine form for this high scoring affair. Rapid Fire dropped the Pack Attack, 45-37.

As these three wins proved, Rapid Fire was a team to be reckoned with in this exciting tournament. Rapid Fire were then matched against the University of Charlotte. Rapid Fire defensive unit played outstanding, enabling Rapid Fire to post a 14-7 victory. Rapid Fire was matched up against Stephen F. Austin University of Nachodoches, T. Rapid Fire dropped a 27-12 decision, thus ending their spectacular run at a

Superbowl XXVII: Cowboys slaughter the Bills, 52-17

Brad Johnson
Assistant Sports Editor

For the Dallas Cowboys, Super Bowl Sunday gave them a chance to show their "in-your-face" attack to the nation. For the Buffalo Bills, it was another disappointment for the three-time defending AFC Champions. In the beginning, it appeared Buffalo might have a chance. After a blocked punt, Thurman Thomas powered in from two yards out to put the Bills up 7-

0. However, the roof soon collapsed on the Bills, leaving no survivors. Jay Novacek hauled in a 28-yard pass from Troy Aikman to tie the score. Moments later, Jimmy Jones recovered a Jim Kelly fumble and scored to put the Cowboys up 14-7. The second quarter escapades of Michael Irvin and Aikman technically put the Super Bowl out of reach. Irvin scored on passes of 19 and 18 yards from Aikman to put Dallas comfortably ahead. Buffalo could only score on a field goal from Steve Christie in the second quarter. However, the most impressive aspect of the game was the Dallas defensive unit. Led by Ken Norton and Charles Haley, the new and improved "Doomsday" defense forced a Super Bowl record 9 turnovers and roughed up Bills stars Thomas and Kelly. Although Frank Riech came in to throw a TD pass to Don Beebe as the third quarter ended, the lead was still 31-17 in favor of the Cowboys. The final quarter only added insult to the Bills' injury. Alvin Harper snared a 45-yard reception for a touchdown from Super Bowl MVP Aikman, who finished with 22 completions, 273 yards passing, 4 TD passes, and no interceptions. Emmitt Smith scampered in from ten yards. Smith, in another blue-collar effort, rushed for 108 yards on 22 carries. This score put the Cowboys up 45-17. It was only fitting that the Dallas defense score the final touchdown. Ken Norton, Jr., son of former WBC heavyweight champ Ken Norton, recovered a fumble and scored from 10 yards out to end the rout 52-17. In what has become an all too familiar scene, the Bills choked in the biggest game for the third year in a row. Against the New York Giants and the Washington Redskins, the Bills were at least competitive. The Cowboys completely wiped out the Bills, proving once and for all that the NFC is far superior to the AFC. The Bills are now able to join the ranks of the Denver Broncos and Minnesota Vikings, as teams who failed to win the Super Bowl despite repeated appearances. For the Cowboys, this could be the beginning of a new dynasty in the NFL. With a young team and top notch coach in Jimmy Johnson, the Cowboys should be a major force for years to come. Ask the Bills if you don't believe.

COWBOYS, see p. 7

COWBOYS from p. 6

gated; the heterosexuals would not be able to perform their jobs and would also scream for their lives.

Homosexuals do not belong in the military. Their mere presence would interfere with success of the military's objective. The incidents of friendly fire resulting in death during exercises and accidental deaths might increase ten fold. Desertion and paranoia would spread throughout the ranks.

Can you imagine a shower scene involving several men including a homosexual? Many of the showers in the military are similar to the ones found in gyms, a small room surrounded by ten or more showerheads.

I don't mean to discriminate or insult anyone but my experience in the military tells me that homosexuals don't belong in the Armed Forces. Every veteran with whom I've spoken has shared the same feelings.

I'm sure some will disagree with how I've presented my argument, with some of my ideas or with my entire opinion. However, I don't believe that this is an issue the president should make important and I don't believe the average citizen wants homosexuals in the military.
