Five cars are keyed in the Honors parking lot

Dori Jackson
Staff Writer

"What a foolish crime this is. Anybody having a grudge against someone, who takes it out in this manner is childish," commented police sergeant, Steve McCoy, in reference to the recent vandalism in the honors parking lot. There are five reported cases of cars being keyed in the honors parking lot. All incidents occurred on the same night.

The five automobiles targeted on the night of the act were not parked next to each other; they were all parked in different areas of the parking lot. McCoy believes that the cars were not randomly keyed. "I think that the cars were keyed out of animosity and grudges against students," he reported.

All indications are that the cars were definitely keyed at honors, not elsewhere. Two vehicles were discovered with key marks in the commuter parking lot. One keyed car was also noticed in the McCraray parking lot. All of the cars had long key marks down the sides and on the hoods. No words or phrases were inscribed on the automobiles.

No suspects have been reported, nor do campus police have any leads of their own. Any person holding information on the vandalism is encouraged to contact campus police. "Any information given will be kept strictly confidential," stated McCoy.

The keying incidents are a misdemeanor crime of vandalism and destruction of private property. If the offender is found out, campus police will press charges and the person will be prosecuted. The person responsible for the vandalism will be held accountable for damages and all court cost proceedings.

Rick Boucher addresses women's issues during Women's History Month

Congressman Rick Boucher made a Women's History Month speech addressing congressional changes and legislation affecting women's issues Thurs., March 25 in the Chapel of All Faiths.

In the speech Boucher stated that those who say 1992 was the Year of the Woman (and it's over) "simply don't get it." In 1992 female members in the House of Representatives increased by sixty-five percent and by ninety-five percent in the Senate, yet Boucher said last year "was not the only [year of the woman, it] will be but the first of many."

Recent policies such as the Family Leave Bill and the removal of the Reagan Administration's Gag Rule were not just women's victories. The Family Leave Bill allows employees twelve weeks of unpaid leave for family emergencies, and without the Gag Rule, a doctor's right to completely inform patients of pregnancy options is ensured. Boucher said these are "issues in which all people have an interest and stand to gain" and fall under the category of family and public issues.

Boucher added that the Freedom of Choice Act to codify the Roe vs. Wade decision to legalize abortion will be passed as law. This Act entitles women to make their own family planning choices and not be controlled by the government, Boucher claimed. He added that he is not an abortion advocate, but "doesn't think the government should be the final decider of that most intimate of decisions."

Presently, said Boucher, the process of passing the Freedom of Choice Act is delayed because of various oppositions, controversies and conflicts over the

CVC celebrates Jefferson's birthday

Professor Henson has taught history at CVC since 1958. His scholarly articles on Southwest Virginia and other areas of the Commonwealth have been published in such journals as the Virginia Law Weekly, Virginia Cavalcade, Journal of Southern History, and the Virginia Social Science Journal. Some years ago Professor Henson published a booklet entitled Clinch Valley College And Its Area, and he recently wrote a detailed history of the College.

An open reception at the Chancellor's Residence will follow the lecture from 8:00 until 9:00.

Events on April 13 will begin with a luncheon and birthday party on the lawn near the College Theatre, from 11:00 to 12:45. All students, faculty, staff and friends of the College are invited. In the event of rain, the party will be held in Cantrell Dining Hall.

Special features are an appearance by "Thomas Jefferson," portrayed by David Browning, director of Lonesome Pine Arts and Crafts in Big Stone Gap, and music by Freddie Bradley's "Magical Mystery Tour."

The party highlight will come when the Alumni Association president and four past alumni presidents assist "Thomas Jefferson" in blowing out the candles on a six foot long birthday cake, prepared by Service Master food service. The first slice will be served to "Jefferson." The mid-day events are sponsored by the CVC Alumni Association and the SGA.

At 1:00 p.m., Jennings L. Wagoner, Jr. will lecture in the Chapel of All Faiths on "Thomas Jefferson and the Purpose of Education." Wagoner, a renowned Jefferson scholar who specializes in Jefferson's views on education, is Professor of Education in the Curry School of Education, University of Virginia.

Wagoner's most recent paper is entitled "Thomas Jefferson: America's First Education President." Others include "Dilemmas in Academic Management: The Jeffersonian Legacy," "Thomas Jefferson, Politics, and The University of Virginia," "Thomas Jefferson and Higher Education," and "Jefferson and the Meaning of Academic Degrees."

Writer believes United States is obligated to support Bosnia

Currently, the United States, Europe, and the United Nations are wrestling with how to end the war in Bosnia. The UN has placed sanctions on all of the combatants, sent troops to transport humanitarian aid, and helped draw up a peace plan. Europe has been trying to arrange a negotiated peace and has provided the bulk of UN troops and humanitarian aid in the former Yugoslavia. And the U.S. has for the most part allowed Europe and the UN to deal with the Balkan crisis, seeing to her own internal affairs.

Now the Clinton Administration is looking at ways of directly intervening in the Balkan war. They have ranged from sending in U.S. and European troops into the former Yugoslav republics and separating the combatants by force, to simply tightening up sanctions against Serbia. The one plan that seems to put the U.S. and European forces in the least danger is the one that lifts the UN embargo on arms to the Bosnians and calls for Western airpower against Serbian heavy artillery and supply routes, but no ground troops.

The Bosnian government supports this plan. They want to fight for their own independence. The Bosnian Muslims simply want Western weapons and airpower to provide for a level playing field against the superiorly armed Serbs.

The U.S., of all countries, should recognize this sentiment. In our own War for Independence, we looked to France for money and arms to fight the British and to the French Navy to counteract the mighty British Navy. But it was mainly Americans, led by an American general, that fought and won our freedom.

The U.S. and rest of the West has a strong interest in ending the war in the former Yugoslavia. There is a risk of the war spreading beyond Yugoslavia and into the rest of southeastern Europe, a region already unstable after the fall of the Iron Curtain. Russian nationals are already fighting in Bosnia is left unchecked.

As the lone remaining superpower, our great power means that we have a great moral responsibility. Unlike the European Community, the U.S. has the political means of providing a united front against Serbian aggression and the military means of backing up our will. As a civilization that cherishes human life and human rights, we should not allow the atrocities committed in this war to continue.

In our hour of need, during our struggle for freedom, we were granted the means of winning it. Now it is our turn to help a fledgling nation win its independence from a far crueler master. And we should help in such a way as to allow it to be the Bosnian's victory and not our own.

Morton, Carter play in TVAC all-star game

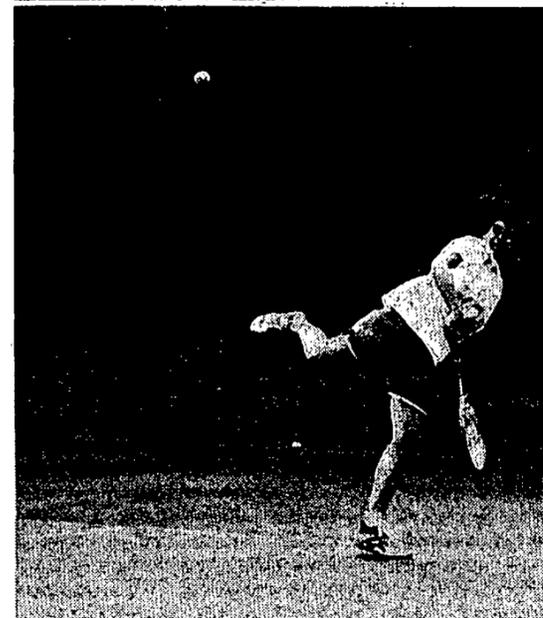

Brad Johnson
Assistant Sports Editor

Behind the performance of Bluefield star Fabian Horton, the North defeated the South, 102-95, at Milligan College in the TVAC All-Star game.

Clinch Valley College's Darren Morton and James Carter aided the North's win in this high scoring affair. Morton hit a three-pointer and Carter snagged several rebounds in the game. David Smith of King College won the slam dunk contest, while Craig Palmer of Milligan won the 3-point shooting contest.

In addition to his play in the all-star game, Morton gained a spot on the TVAC all-freshman team. Morton averaged 15.76 points per game for the Cavaliers.

Centre College hosted a track meet on March 20. Clinch Valley College students Melvin Jones and Mike Owens turned in outstanding individual performances. Jones received first place in both the shot putt and discus, while Owens placed fourth in the high jump and captured fifth place in the long and triple jumps.

An all-comers track and field event was held this past Saturday at Lynchburg College. Some of the schools represented were Liberty, Duke University, and Virginia Military Institute. Despite stiff competition, Clinch Valley College's Melvin Jones placed first in the discus and second place in the shot putt.

Practice sessions for all persons who attended the April 5th football cheerleader meeting will be held today through Friday from 6-9 p.m. in the gym. Tryouts for cheerleading will be held this Saturday at 11 a.m. in the gym.

All males and females are encouraged to attend. For more information, see Karen Hopkins at the CVC Bookstore or drop a note to her in campus mail.

"fundamental right from Roe vs. Wade." Once these barriers are negated, the Act will pass and "end all the debates and uncertainties" over the issue, Boucher stated.

The gains made from the last elections and new legislation are a good beginning, said Boucher; but "we still have a long way to go." Boucher hopes more women will become involved in public life and service in the future.

Women represent over fifty percent of the American population, Boucher said, and he "hopes the day comes when women in the public life represent their population ratio" and are as publicly important as men have been in the past.

Boucher said that we need a "pulling together of society," and as President Clinton said, "an America where we act together and no longer worry only about ourselves." Thus, those subjects called women's issues are actually everyone's issues, Boucher claimed.

A 7:00 evening lecture in the Chapel, entitled "Mr. Jefferson's College," will be given by Garrett Sheldon, professor of political science at CVC.

Sheldon wrote his doctoral dissertation on Thomas Jefferson's political theories, and in 1991 he published a book entitled The Political Philosophy of Thomas Jefferson. He also has published a number of scholarly articles on Jefferson, including an entry in The Encyclopedia of Political Thought, and he has presented papers on Thomas Jefferson at regional and national conferences.
