Jimson Weed, Coffee Night to celebrate College's anniversary

By Aubrey Bowling
Assistant Editor

UVA-Wise's literary journal, the Jimson Weed, will this year be celebrating the College's 50th Anniversary.

"The theme this year is our golden anniversary, our achievement for the last 50 years," said Dr. Gillian Huang-Tiller, a faculty advisor for Jimson Weed. "We want to highlight the College's creativity."

The deadline for poetry, stories, essays and artwork submissions for the Jimson Weed's fall issue is tomorrow, Oct. 15.

To coincide with the Jimson Weed's release will be UVA-Wise's annual Coffee Night, scheduled for Nov. 11. Not only will Coffee Night be the first time the 2004 fall issue of the Jimson Weed is made available to the public, but it will also honor Professor Sheri Reynolds as the event's special guest. Reynolds is an accomplished Southern writer whom Coffee Night guests will have an opportunity to hear read her own writings.

Students, faculty or anyone else interested in submitting something for the Jimson Weed should send them to 127 Zehmer Hall. Those interested can also send works through e-mail to jimson-weed@uvawise.edu in either Word-format attachments (PC or Macintosh). Anyone with questions about either the Jimson Weed or Coffee Night can contact Dr. Huang-Tiller by phone at 376-4552 or by e-mail at gch7u@uvawise.edu.

Students urged to heed Internet precautions

By Samantha Huff
Staff Writer

The Technology Support Services of UVA-Wise has recently sent out a Microsoft risk announcement to warn the faculty and students of viruses that could prove harmful to their computers. In early September, Microsoft announced that simply viewing a JPEG image file may allow unauthorized programs access to a computer. It is strongly urged that all Microsoft updates are applied to all of the computers on-campus to reduce the risk of viruses.

Steps that can help students and faculty reduce the risk of a virus are to only visit websites that can be trusted, to not open graphics files that appear as attachments and to not open files that come from unknown sources. Also, Technology Support Services urges students to purchase the latest, up-to-date antivirus programs to help in fighting off any potential security threats.

For further direction or information, visit the Technical Assistance Center, located in Darden Hall 110. The center is maintained by student assistants as well as the staff of Computer Services.

The Department of Mathematical Sciences will today and tomorrow host Dr. William Stout, a distinguished statistician and director of the External Diagnostic Team at ETS, the organization which administers the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) for students hoping to attend graduate school. Stout will conduct an informal gathering with students today, Oct. 14, at 2 p.m. in the Jefferson Lounge of the Student Center to discuss topics regarding graduate school and careers in academia.

Stout will also present two lectures tomorrow, Oct. 15, as a part of the ongoing 50th anniversary lecture series. At 8 a.m., Stout will present to College students a lecture in the Chapel entitled "The Re-parameterized Unified Model: A Psychometric Model for Doing Skills Diagnosis." Later, at 1 p.m., Stout will give a presentation called "Fine-grained and Cognitively Based Skills Assessment: A New and Golden Age of Testing." This lecture, also to be held in the Chapel, is intended for a general audience of students and educators, particularly those interested in psychology and testing.

Belk, Estee Lauder promote breast cancer awareness

By Kristi Foster
Staff Writer

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Many organizations and local stores help support this cause by making donations, or by just wearing a pink ribbon. Estee Lauder and Belk of Wise, however, want to do more.

This month, Estee Lauder is selling a mirrored compact with a jeweled breast cancer awareness ribbon on the top, a signature pink lipstick and a pink ribbon pin. Estee Lauder donates 85% of the profits to the Susan G. Komen foundation.

"It is about helping people, both men and women, become aware of the dangers that occur with breast cancer and to continue the search for a cure," said an Estee Lauder cosmetic consultant.

Belk is also working to help raise money for the cure. All customers are asked to donate one dollar to the Breast Cancer Foundation. With each donation, a name of a survivor or one who is currently fighting breast cancer is placed on a ribbon-shaped card.

The Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation accepts donations to help find a cure for breast cancer. The foundation has been a global leader in the fight against breast cancer for 20 years.

The foundation contributes through its support of innovative research and community outreach programs.

According to the Komen foundation website, more than 75,000 people help the cause by volunteering with Komen affiliations.

Choir members of past and present perform together at anniversary concert

By Brittany Padgett
Staff Writer

UVA-Wise's Chamber Choir presented a concert on Sunday, Oct. 3, at the Wise Baptist Church that was open to the public.

"The concert was a wonderful event," said Jane Meade-Dean, Director of College Relations. "Everybody left with a smile on their face. It was really special."

The Chamber Choir, under the direction of D. Michael Donathan, performed in front of a full house. Over 300 people were in attendance for the celebration of the College's 50th anniversary.

The College Choir, directed by Michael D. Cox, also performed.

As the concluding part of the concert, both the Chamber Choir and the College Choir performed together with alumni and community members who had been involved in College choirs of the past. "Dogwood and Rhododendron," the school song, was performed by the men of the Chamber Choir, and "Remembrance" was performed by the entire Chamber Choir.

Both choirs concluded the concert with "The Old Irish Blessing."

Education students bring 'Funtasia' to area kids

By Rimee St. John
Staff Writer

The Students of Virginia Education Association (SVEA) at UVA-Wise presented "Funtasia" for children in the local area. It was held on Saturday, Sept. 25 from noon until 4 p.m. at the lawn by the lake.

"Funtasia is like going to a fair for children and always winning a prize," said education major Jenny Marshall.

Admission to Funtasia was free, but tickets for games had to be purchased at the entrance for 50 cents. At the games, children were awarded tokens, which were traded for a variety of prizes. Snacks were also available for children and their parents at discounted prices.

Activity centers featured The Very Hungry Caterpillar, Shrek, Disney Princesses, Super Heroes, Strawberry Shortcake, Raggedy Ann & Andy, Lilo & Stitch, Sesame Street and The Wizard of Oz.

The SVEA includes faculty as well as students who are pursuing a major in education. Education majors helped collect money, sell snacks, run games and handout prizes. Volunteers not affiliated with the education major also helped.

The SVEA has been holding Funtasia for several years now, but it formally went by the name of "Disneyworld." Two Funtasia events are held annually -- one in the fall to help the group raise funds and the other event held in the spring with no money involved.

Reading clinic benefits area children, improves teaching skills of senior education majors

By Megan Short
Staff Writer

On Sept. 28, UVA-Wise began a free reading clinic for primary school students, directed by senior education majors. Thirty children in grades one through four were accepted to participate in the clinic. The clinic is held every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 4:15 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., and the children are required to attend the clinic for at least 40 minutes each day. The children are assigned a tutor to help them with reading comprehension, writing, spelling and phonics. Each participant is tested on their reading abilities and work one-on-one with the tutor to strengthen weak areas. The clinic benefits not only the children but also the College students tutoring the children. The education majors improve their teaching skills, which will help them in their future teaching careers. For more information on the reading clinic, contact Catana Turner, associate professor of education.

Nintendo to release new dual-screen portable Nov. 21

The Nintendo DS is the latest handheld gaming innovation from Nintendo. The DS ("Dual Screen") will be released on Nov. 21 at a suggested retail price of $149.99. One of the most notable features of this system is the use of two LCD screens. The concept behind the "dual-screen" feature is for players to be able to play a game from two perspectives at once (in certain games one screen could be used for action while another displays item lists, or one screen could serve as a map of the entire area so players don't get lost). Both of the screens are three inches in length, and are capable of reproducing 3D graphics that run at roughly at 60 frames per second. The DS' graphics engine is actually more powerful than that of the Nintendo 64, quite an impressive feat for a handheld system.

Another innovative feature of the DS is that it comes equipped with touch-screen capabilities on the lower screen. This enables players to not have to rely on frantic button-pushing all the time: menus and perspective shifting can all be done with a light tap of a finger or a stylus instrument (one is included with the DS' packaging). There is also the possibility of voice recognition gameplay due to the microphone port that is included in the system. It is quite possible that a player will be able to perform several actions or chat online with other players just by talking.

Wireless capabilities also come into play with the DS. Players will be able to connect locally to up to 16 other players, with a range of 30 feet guaranteed (although it might prove to be a larger range in some cases). Not only can a player chat with other gamers and play against/with them with no connecting wires, but the technology the DS system uses allows for a wireless LAN connection, which could provide an outlet for a seemingly infinite amount of gamers to come together at certain gaming hubs. The wireless capabilities also include game sharing, so that if one player has a game card installed then all of the other gamers can play that game as well.

The sound is 16-channel and is capable of providing for expanded use of voices and music, as well as a more immersive gaming experience, and the DS has a headphones port in order to transmit sound to the player. The battery in the DS is rechargeable and the system is designed to be low on energy consumption. There are also power management features: a player can put the DS into Sleep Mode or Standby Mode if they wish. The DS is also capable of playing Game Boy Advance titles, so a wide array of games is already available to players.

Preview
Street Fighter Anniversary

Other features include voice-over-IP telephone capabilities and downloadable content. Also, when the DS launches next month, it will include "Picto-Chat," a wireless messaging game/application, and a demo of first-person shooter "Metroid Prime Hunters."

Super Mario 64 DS
Platformer: Nintendo DS
Publisher: Nintendo
Genre: Platformer

One of the most notable launch titles for the Nintendo DS is Super Mario 64 DS, a remake of the classic Nintendo 64 game. A remake status, however, doesn't make this Mario game simply a copy of the older version. Instead, Nintendo has gone out of their way to make this title seem like a truly original experience specifically designed for its new DS handheld system. Players can choose to be Mario, Luigi, Yoshi or Wario and battle it out with three other gamers in a wireless Versus mode. Each character has special abilities that players should make note of and use. Only one of the gamers needs to have the Super Mario 64 DS game card in order for everyone to play.

In the single-player Adventure mode, new worlds have been added, and the amount of stars to collect has risen from 120 to 150. Several mini-games and puzzles have also been added to utilize the DS' touch-screen capabilities. The lower screen serves as a layout of the area a gamer is currently progressing in, while the top screen displays the action that is currently taking place. The graphics are quite impressive, and the game is looking just as clear and sharp as it did on the Nintendo 64 in 1996. Fans of the original version of Super Mario 64 will most likely be interested in playing this expanded, reworked title that helps to demonstrate just how different a classic gaming experience can be on the DS.

posed events for this semester include a Madden football party and visits to the Emory and Barter theatres. Before finals week they plan to have a

Mario and co. return with launch of Nintendo DS

Not to be confused with Nintendo's other portable, the Game Boy Advance SP, the Nintendo DS is a dual-screen gaming portable. The DS will allow for wireless gameplay, downloadable content and voice-over-IP telephone usage. The lower screen, much like a PDA, will be touch-sensitive to either players' fingers or to an included stylus. Both screens will also be backlit, and the DS will have more graphical power than the Nintendo 64. Above, the DS is seen running launch title Super Mario 64 DS, in which players will control Mario and his friends in the top screen while using the map and camera controls on the bottom screen.

One of the premier launch titles for the Nintendo DS will be Super Mario 64 DS, an update to the classic Nintendo 64 platformer. Starring (counterclockwise from left) Wario, Mario, Luigi and Yoshi, the new game will feature new levels and a collection of minigames that take advantage of the DS touch-screen capabilities.

Collection
Platforms: Playstation 2, Xbox
Publisher: Capcom
Genre: Fighting

Most fighting game fans have at least heard of the long-lived Street Fighter series, if not played a game themselves. In order to celebrate its fifteenth anniversary, Capcom has put together two titles that may very well be considered two of the best games in the series. The first game in the Street Fighter Anniversary Collection is called Hyper Street Fighter II, which is essentially a combination of all previous versions of the second Street Fighter game. What makes Hyper so interesting is that it enables players to choose from different versions of a fighter and have them fight against a character from another version of the game. Chun-Li from Street Fighter II, for example, is able to battle against Ryu from Super Street Fighter II Turbo. Because moves and other features were added and/or altered for each of these renditions of Street Fighter II, a player will have a different experience playing each game's version of a character, and a lot of variability is available.

The second game in the collection is the arcade hit Street Fighter 3: Third Strike, a title that had only been previously available on Sega's now defunct Dreamcast system. It is pretty much a flawless conversion of the arcade game and has beautiful 2-D graphics that flow well when it comes to the busy fighting action.

As an added bonus, an edited version of the anime film Street Fighter II: The Animated Movie will be included in the collection for a limited time. Xbox owners also get the added treat of being able to play against other players online via Xbox Live.

Highland Players hosting activities to 'get people to have fun with theater again'

By David Stanley
Staff Writer

The Highland Players are looking to get the campus involved with theater. Proposed events for this semester include a Madden football party and visits to the Emory and Barter theatres. Before finals week they plan to have a cabaret, also known as a talent show.

"All we want to do is get people to have fun with theater again," said Kate Daub, a sophomore theater major. "If we can get people having as much fun as we have in the theater, then our theater program could grow greatly."

Lady Cavs volleyball team defeats rival King College to claim 8-game winning streak, first-place position

By Ilmee St. John
Staff Writer

The Lady Cavs volleyball team played their biggest rival on Tuesday, Oct. 5, overcoming King College. The game was held at 6:30 p.m. in the Greear Gymnasium.

Only three of the five games had to be played in order for the Lady Cavs to come away victorious. The crowd was chanting,

"Sweep," as fans ran up and down the court carrying brooms, signifying the Cavs' three-game sweep over King.

"It was one of the most exciting wins of my life," said senior player Kellie Burke. "We've been working toward this goal for years, and now it has happened and it's the best feeling in the world — especially with this group of girls!"

With the victory, the volleyball team claimed an eight-game winning streak and a first-place position as they continue battling through the season.

Cavs football team loses Homecoming game vs. Belhaven

By Daniel Lechy
Sports Editor

The Blazers of Belhaven College came into town on Oct. 2 to face the UVa-Wise Cavaliers during Alumni Homecoming weekend. Fans and players before the game honored student Dean Shwartz for his efforts in the war in Iraq.

The UVa-Wise Homecoming game started off great, with an interception by Tim Smith on the Blazers' opening drive. Quarterback Josh Mabe drove the Cavs 54 yards and capped off the drive with a 21-yard pass to Dieontea Stewart, who led all Wise receivers with 42 yards. Mabe then scored to increase the lead to 14-0, on a 6-yard run. Josh Mabe finished the day 9 of 23 for 114 yards, with one passing touchdown and one rushing touchdown.

The Blazers, however, came out hot in the second half, led by quarterback Brian Zbydniewski, who finished the game with 250 yards passing and 2 touchdowns.

The Cavaliers were hurt by 4 penalties and going 2-13 on third down conversions. Even though Belhaven turned the ball over 4 times (3 INT, 1 fumble), it proved to be not enough. After scoring 0 in the first half, Belhaven scored 28 points in the second half to spoil the Homecoming game for UVa-Wise. Belhaven defeated UVa-Wise 28-21.

This was the first win for Belhaven against Wise in 4 games.

Larry Smith was the leading rusher for Wise, with 65 yards. On defense, freshman Ben Robertson was the leading tackler with 15, while senior Josh Hamm had 13 tackles.

Next up for the team is Georgetown (Ky.) College on Saturday, Oct. 16 at 1:30 p.m., at Georgetown.

Flag football competitions begin

By Danielle Benton
Staff Writer

The leaves are falling and there's a chill in the air. It's flag football season again for intramural sports participants. Chris Davis, Coordinator of Recreation and Intramurals, is impressed with the high participation levels in the sport this year.

"Since last year, there are four more men's teams and three more women's teams participating in flag football," said Davis, who is beginning his fourth year in the position.

Even though the champions of the end-of-season tournament receive T-shirts and all-campus points, many individuals have other reasons to participate. Sophomore Terri Anne Hill said laughingly that she plays flag football with her team, the Pink Ladies, because "it is another chance to try to beat [her] softball teammates" on an opposing team.

The 7th Annual Flag Football Scramble will be hosted by UVa-Wise on Nov. 7. Small colleges from the area will be invited, including Virginia Intermont, Pikeville, Mountain Empire Community College and Emory and Henry College. Two UVa-

Wise teams, drawn at random, will be allowed to participate.

The regional flag football tournament will be held in Wilmington and the team will consist of players chosen by Davis based on statistics that his supervisors are keeping records of throughout the season.

The final encore to the flag football regular season will be the national flag football tournament, which is held annually in New Orleans. The champions of the tournament at the end of the season will be the UVa-Wise representative in New Orleans from Dec. 27 through Jan. 1.

'Old School' Month brings kickball, dodgeball to campus intramural sports

By Mark McIlalley
Staff Writer

The Intramural Department has decided to switch things up by bringing "Old School" Month to UVa-Wise. The old days of the elementary school courtyard games have returned.

Intramurals Coordinator Chris Davis decided to bring these sports to the College to switch things up more on campus for intramurals.

At the beginning of October, UVa-Wise intramural teams were allowed to sign up for the first intramural kickball tournament and the double-elimination tournament began on Oct. 4.

Five men's teams and four women's teams were included in this tournament. During the men's championship game on Thursday, Oct. 7, Pi Lambda Phi defeated Gamma Chi Omega, and the Pink Ladies won the women's championship game.

The next old-school tournament is the intramural dodgeball tournament. Teams will sign up for this sport later in the year.

As the school continues to grow, the staff continues to work on ways for students to get involved. If all goes well, "Old School" Month may become a new tradition here at UVa-Wise.
