New bypass may compromise College research sites while reducing downtown traffic congestion

While it may compromise the College's scientific research sites, the new bypass that will connect to the back of the campus may also help in preventing traffic in downtown Wise, including two-lane traffic near the College, thus helping some drivers avoid slow traffic situations like the one seen above.

By Donna Gibson
Staff Writer

On March 8, in the J.J. Kelly gymnasium, a public meeting was held by the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT), the Town of Wise and Thompson and Litton Engineers and Architects to discuss the VDOT proposal to create a four-lane highway. The new four-lane highway would connect US 23 and the industrial park near Lonesome Pine Regional Airport and may potentially affect the College's wetlands and outdoor research sites for the science department while also reducing traffic in Wise.

Several representatives from UVA-Wise were on-hand to express their concerns for the environmental impact of the proposed route, which would include a connection to the bypass that would enter the back of the campus. Because of the connection to the back of the campus, many of the science department's wetlands, ponds, mine reclamation, and soil chemistry research sites would be compromised.

Tim Mullins, a civil engineer with Thompson and Litton, said that the primary goal of the road was to attract development in the area and contribute to the local economy.

In hopes of enticing business development in the industrial park, the proposed road would connect at the Glamorgan intersection of US 23 and extend behind the UVA-Wise campus to Airport Road.

Thompson and Litton designed the route in cooperation with the Virginia Department of Transportation as a way to eliminate traffic congestion in downtown Wise and make more efficient access to the industrial park.

Housing sign-up day this Sunday

By Mark McIlalley
Staff Writer

One of the main events for the College's spring semester is the housing reapplication process of the Office of Housing and Residence Life. On-campus housing is at a premium, due to the ever-increasing interest in students desiring to attend UVA-Wise.

The Office of Housing's lottery took place on Tuesday, March 22. Students desiring on-campus housing went to the Student Center lobby with their Cavs ID card from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to draw for a housing lottery number.

The lottery number drawn by the student, if within the limits of guaranteed housing numbers, reserved him or her an assigned time for the student to sign up for the room he or she will have for the 2005-2006 acaademic year.

The Sign-Up Day is this Sunday, March 27, and sign-up times stretch from 5 to 10 p.m. On Sign-Up Day, each student must present their completed housing application, $150 housing prepayment, his or her Cavs Card and his or her lottery number. At this time, the student may also select a roommate of his or her choice, as long as the student being chosen also has a lottery number within the guaranteed number of spaces.

In a letter to students, Assistant Director of Housing Jason Lewkowicz issued a reminder that the College's new residence hall will open in January 2006 with an additional 120 spaces.

For additional questions or concerns regarding on-campus housing, Jason Lewkowicz can be contacted by phone at 328-0214.

Va. General Assembly passes textbook fairness act for lower textbook prices

By Megan Short
Staff Writer

The Textbook Market Fairness Act was passed in the General Assembly on Feb. 22. In the Feb. 4 edition of the Highland Cavalier, an article was published bringing awareness to the fight for cheaper textbooks by the organization Virginia 21.

With students signing a petition for the act in Virginia, it looks like cheaper textbooks are headed in students' direction. Virginia 21's proposal was passed in one committee after another, including the House of Delegates, before it headed to the General Assembly.

The act, which was passed by a landslide, states that professors will be prohibited from receiving "kickbacks," or incentives given to teachers from a company for using one of their books. A booklist will also be made available to students prior to the beginning of classes under the act.

The act also proposed that a committee be created to study textbook affordability. This committee will report on issues concerned with affording college textbooks. Issues include students purchasing used textbooks, financing options available for textbooks and tax credits or reduced sales tax on text-

Workshop examines modern body image distortion

By Devin Petro
Staff Writer

Marilyn Monroe was one of the most beautiful and sought-after women in the world, but she was fat.

Or, at least by today's standards, she was fat. Monroe was a size 16 and weighed approximately 140 pounds, which is gigantic compared to the 6-foot-tall, 100-pound celebrities we are all bombarded with everyday by the media.

On Friday, March 11, Dawn Meade of the UVA-Wise Nursing Department and Kristina Feeser of the UVA-Wise Psychology Department led a body image workshop in an attempt to shed light on the growing epidemic of body image distortion.

The workshop was held in honor of Women's History Month and was geared more toward women's obsession with the "thin-is-in" mentality. It was acknowledged, however, that the number of men with weight fixations is growing.

Meade discussed the physical aspects of anorexia nervosa, bulimia and obesity. She recommended that people should check their body composition to see if they are at a healthy weight before throwing themselves into the fantasy presented by

College's student retention rate at all-time high

By Uarina Meade
 Staff Writer

This year, the student retention rate at UVA-Wise is at its highest level ever in its history.

The student retention rate measures the number of freshmen that have returned from the previous fall semester.

This year, the student retention rate is 77.1 percent, which is a large jump from the 73.8 percent rate during the 2002-2003 school year.

"I like to think of it as persistence and encouragement in education, instead of a retention rate," said Elizabeth Steele, Coordinator of Advising, Retention and Assessment.

One of the reasons the student retention rate is so high is because of several changes that concern the freshmen class, including the student mentors who work with freshmen to help connect them to the College.

There are also changes in the academic programming, where the freshman seminars, better known as LARTs, go hand in hand with other course requirements.

In addition, there are more students attending UVA-Wise who prefer the College as their first choice and have not just "settled for it." This lowers the chances for those students to leave the College or transfer.

Bypass

College's representatives, over 100 concerned citizens viewed the road proposal and addressed any questions to representatives of Thompson and Litton, the engineers who designed the route for VDOT, as well as representatives of H.W. Lochner, the Richmond company that prepared the environmental impact assessment for the proposed project. Local citizens were concerned with the proposed road's path that would force relocation of 41 residences and 5 businesses. There was a general concern for the impact of individual property values and some confusion about the general necessity of the new route for a small industrial park. The representatives of H.W. Lochner of Richmond contended that the proposed route is the least environmentally damaging because much of the route is already damaged due to being previously strip-mined and improperly reclaimed. Few argued that Wise needed an alternate route for access to the industrial park. The path that VDOT will take to provide a bypass remains to be seen. Several alternatives have been studied, and the proposal set forth to the public was the one determined the most practical and beneficial to the area's economy. Representatives from VDOT stated that this project is still in the planning phase and if the proposal is accepted, the actual plan will not be included in the VDOT six-year plan. Any construction would begin at least six years from now and would also be contingent upon raising the expected $50 million dollar cost for the project.

THE HIGHLAND CAVALIER IS A PROUD MEMBER OF

Indie music continues to rise in popularity

By Samantha Huff
 Staff Writer

Remember the other day when a friend mentioned a band that you had never heard of? This seems to happen more often as young adults are gradually becoming more aware of independent music.

By turning on the radio you can find catchy tunes and clever lyrics, but does it really mean anything to you? Independent, or "indie," music has its perks for being an emotional outlet for easy listening.

Most music fans may look for a particular meaning in songs that are written specifically for the purpose of relating personal feeling. Indie artists derive from personal experiences, and their small fan base helps to keep the musicians grounded. However, the trend in listening to independent music is growing more and more.

Like other movies, the film "Garden State" has contributed a great deal to the popularity of underground music. Bands such as The Shins and Iron and Wine, were featured on the movie's soundtrack, bumping up their popularity level among mainstream music listeners.

Bands such as The Decemberists and Hot Hot Heat are others among the genre of independent music with a meaningful message, and for those who aren't interested in indie rock, The Roots are an easy listening hip-hop band with a new album entitled "The Tipping Point." If you are interested in listening to something new, be sure to also look into Spoon, The Arcade Fire, Broken Social Scene and The Strokes.

Indie music is a fun alternative to the popular music that is often heard on the radio. Bands and musicians who are part of the independent genre have a unique sound that is anything but mainstream. However, as what constitutes popular music continues to broaden, the definition of mainstream could change.

'The Notebook' DVD worth watching 'over and over again'

The Notebook's Noah (Ryan Gosling) dips Allie (Rachel McAdams) while dancing in the street. The Notebook was recently released on DVD by New Line Cinema.

By Amber Copley
 Staff Writer

"With every great love comes a great story" is the tagline of the recently released DVD "The Notebook." The tagline proves true, as the plot of the film truly tells a "great story." Spring is quickly approaching and love is in the air, which makes for justifiable grounds to see The Notebook. Even as a romantic film, usually labeled a "chick flick," this film should be able to draw in male viewers, too.

"The Notebook" stars Rachel McAdams in the role of Allie and Ryan Gosling in the role of Noah. Both actors do an exceptional job illustrating humanity and love. No one forgets their first love, and that is proven through this unique story.

Allie is an upper-class girl and Noah is a working-class boy. They meet when Allie spends the summer with her parents on the Carolina coast. They fall in love but are then separated when Allie has to return home. They never forget each other, which provides the premise behind the entire tale.

"The Notebook" was based on Nicholas Sparks' best-selling novel of the same name. It was adapted into a movie script and then produced as a film. America was in need of another "Titanic" love story, and thanks to Nicholas Sparks' novel, we now have one.

The movie keeps the viewer's attention with its fast pace and emotional pull, so be sure to have tissues ready. When the credits are rolling and the movie is over, you'll experience a state of contentment because this is one "feel-good" movie.

"The Notebook" is a film that you will remember, and it's the best love story that has been released in a long time. You will want to watch it over and over again and will find it just as exquisite each and every time.

'Tekken 5' a superb fighter with tons of extras

By Rudra Bowling
 Entertainment Editor

Review

Tekken 5
 Platform: Playstation 2
 Publisher: Namco
 Genre: Fighting

One of the best fighting games to come out in a long time, Tekken 5 simply wowed me the first time I played it. The fighting system is focused on combos and heavily damaging throws and has remained virtually unchanged from previous installments of the series, which may seem troublesome to longtime fans. A variety of fighting styles and characters should hopefully make up for this. Tekken 5's graphics are simply stunning and backdrops are now highly interactive. Flowers sway about with the movement of fighters, while a glass platform cracks beneath characters' feet as they perform bone-crushing moves. Gorgeous, realistic character animations abound and some fighting styles, such as Christie and Eddy's Capoeira style, are wonderful to watch.

The soundtrack for the game is simply amazing, each song seeming to fit wonderfully for the background setting it plays in. As with any fighting game, the storyline is a bit convoluted and far-fetched, but Namco actually tried very hard to make it entertaining. The Story Mode is just that, with players fighting through their chosen character's storyline. Voice acting, for the most part, is surprisingly good. Namco tried to keep the game realistic by supporting international languages: fighters from Europe and the Americas speak English, while those who are from Asian countries speak Japanese, and dialogue comes complete with easy-to-read subtitles. The endings retain the same feel as the ones from previous Tekkens, ranging from serious and action-oriented to incredibly humorous.

There is, of course, one huge flaw that I should mention about the Story

Mode: the final fight is about ten times more difficult than earlier rounds and is almost impossible to win without at least continuing once. It can be a very frustrating experience to get KO-ed over and over again by literally the same move each and every time, although it does help to provide an immense satisfaction when a player is finally able to defeat the big bad guy. While the gameplay from the Story Mode and the various modes that run rampant on all fighting game ports (such as Survival and Time Attack), are enough to pique a gamer's interest, Tekken 5 truly shines in the sheer depth of extra features that are available. One of the more cosmetic (but very much addictive) additions to the game is the Customization Mode, which allows players to alter the appearance of fighters.

Several mini-games are also included in Tekken 5. Perhaps the most noticeable is Tekken: Devil Within, a somewhat simplistic action-adventure side story that puts players in the role of Jin Kazama as he fights his way through enemy-filled hallways. The game also sports an Arcade History Mode, which features the complete arcade versions of the first three Tekken games, which helps replay value soar through the roof. Another arcade-perfect game, a space shooter called Star Blade, can also be unlocked.

While these games may appear dated, they are still fun, and their inclusion in Tekken 5 helps to offer a surprising amount of variability to the game, causing it to be a title that gamers will have a hard time putting down.

Jin and Nina go head-to-head in one of many battles to be fought in Namco's Tekken 5 for the Sony Playstation 2.

Lady Cavs win 1, lose 1 vs. Tenn. Wesleyan

Loss ends softball team's 13-game winning streak

By Daniel Lechy
Sports Editor

On Saturday, March 19, the Lady Cavs softball team traveled to Athens, Tenn. to take on AAC conference rival Tennessee Wesleyan College. The Lady Cavs entered the game carrying a 12-game winning streak and extended it to 13 games with a game-one win over Tennessee Wesleyan, 3-0.

Alicia King went 2 for 3 in the game with an RBI. Terri Ann Hill went 1 for 3 in the game with 2 RBI's, including a two-run home run. Dani Benton pitched game one and picked up the win, improving her record to 8-0 this season.

In game two, Nichole Poore pitched 7 strong innings for the Lady Cavs, striking out 10 and giving up only one earned run. Dani Benton relieved Poore on the mound, and ended up getting her first loss of the year.

The game went 10 innings with Tennessee Wesleyan winning 3-2 in a close game. Meagan Jones and Shelley Newton each had 1 RBI in the game.

At press time, the Lady Cavs' record stands at 14-3 overall and 8-2 in the conference.

Intramural basketball participation at a record high with 27 men's teams, 7 women's teams

By Danielle Benton
Staff Writer

Five days a week, from 6 p.m. to midnight, the Fred B. Greear Gymnasium is filled with the competition of intramural basketball. The intramural basketball season began on Feb. 23 and will conclude with the tournament, which begins on March 30.

"Intramural basketball is the second-most competitive intramural sport, behind flag football," said Coordinator of Student Activities Ronnie Welch.

Welch went on to say that the league consists of 27 men's teams and 7 women's teams this year, which sets a new record for participation in intramural basketball.

Senior Jeremy Weaver of the Slackers basketball team described the competition among the men's division to be "stiff" this year. Weaver enjoys the tight games between the powerhouse teams of Gamma, The Government, Hard Ballas Got Next and Bench Mob.

Welch said that the women's division will find its greatest competition between The Naturals and the Pink Ladys.

Canseco's biography sparks MLB steroid controversy

By Cody Dalton
Staff Writer

José Canseco, the 1988 Major League Baseball MVP, has written a new book about steroids, entitled "Juiced: Wild Times, Smash Hits And How Baseball Got Big." In this book, Canseco accuses many MLB players of illegal steroid use, including seven-time MVP Barry Bonds. In December 2004, Bonds admitted in his testimony to a grand jury to using a "cream" and a "clear" substance in the 2003 season, given to him by his trainer, Greg Anderson. He said that he unknowingly took that "cream" and "clear," not knowing that it was a steroid. This "clear" has been identified as THG, a designer steroid produced by the company BALCO.

Jason Giambi, a New York Yankees first baseman, also testified in front of a grand jury that he took steroids of the same kind. He also said that these steroids did not enhance his game, but rather lowered it.

In another press conference, Bonds said that steroids had no effect on a baseball player's game, but in a poll, 80.9 percent of the people surveyed believed that he was wrong and that steroids have a huge impact on someone taking them and in their overall baseball-playing performance. Even in the photos of Bonds before and after his steroid use show that there is a significant amount of difference in Bonds' muscles and his overall physique.

Through this testimony and all of the controversy, many people think that all of the records broken while using steroids, such as Bonds' 73 home runs in 2001, should have an asterisk beside them. In a recent survey on ESPN.com, 79 percent of the people surveyed said that steroids should be the number-one priority of Major League Baseball. In another survey, 50.5 percent of the people surveyed thought that using steroids was worse than betting on baseball (37.9 percent thought betting was worse).

To make matters worse, and as a final point, Ken Caminiti, the 1996 National League MVP, died at age 41 of a heart attack this past November, after battling drug and steroid problems.

Cavalier football team practicing for spring game, fall season

By Christine Otu
Staff Writer

The Highland Cavalier football team does not quit because the season is over. The players have been practicing out of season to get ready for the upcoming fall games.

"We have endured some strenuous working out," running back Antonio Gilyard said, "but it is all worth it. I will be ready for the spring game!"

The spring game is when the football team's offense and defense play each other in order to give the new and returning players on the team a chance to practice and stay in shape for summer practice and next season.

"Recruits come to the spring game, along with family and students, to see what we've got," said D'andre Lewis.

The team has endured some strenuous workouts, with weight-lifting three days a week. When the team is not lifting weights, they are out on the turf doing running drills.
